ecret Report On Wake Talks s Made Public

"Mac" Didn't Fear China Intervention

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The iministration's Wake Island docu- ents quote Gen. MacArthur as lling President Truman there was ery little" chance for interven- on in Korea by Red China or Rus- a.

But questions were raised immed- tely as to whether MacArthur was lking about the chance that there ould be such intervention or about e chance of success the Reds ould have if they did come in.

MacArthur Brands Report Irrelevant

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, tonight quoted him as saying the administration's reports of the Wake Island conference have "just about as much bearing on the problem of Korea today as would a report on the military operations on Bunker Hill."

Whitney added that MacArthur "didn't know notes were being taken" during the meeting.

The text of the account of what ent on in the island conference, repared afterward from notes, was ade public today on the eve of earings into Mr. Truman's remov- of MacArthur from command in e Far East. What was said at the eeting on Oriental affairs, attend- by the President and MacArthur October, was already in con- oversy.

The text given out today showed is question from Mr. Truman:

"What are the chances for Chin- e or Soviet interference?"

"Very little," MacArthur replied. But the document went on with- t a break quoting him on the dif- culties an intervening force would eet at that stage:

"Had they intervened in the first second months it would have en decisive. We are no longer arful of their intervention. We no nger stand hat in hand."

JCS Report Released

From that the General continued, ill without a break, into a discus- on of the forces available to the eds and the hazards they would ce if they started across the Yalu iver.

The administration's documents n the conference were released by e Senate Armed Services and oreign Relations Committees as a reliminary to their hearings start- g tomorrow, on MacArthur's dis- issal.

One of the documents was a re- ort by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. This quoted MacArthur as having aid "we are no longer fearful of eir (Chinese Communist) inter- ention."

Reds Prepare To Renew Drive

Clear And Sound Foreign Policy Urged By C. Of C.

Calls For Disclosure Of "Essential Facts"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The U. S. Chamber of Commerce today called for an end to the "frustration, uncertainty and political partisanship indicated in our present foreign policy."

The 2,500 delegates to the chamber's annual meeting asked in a resolution for "full disclosure of the essential facts," so that there can be an informed public opinion, and then for development of a "sound foreign policy x x x without regard to partisan politics."

Hulcy Elected President

This resolution, unanimously approved, was offered from the floor by Powell C. Groner of Kansas City, newly-elected vice president of the chamber, who said that from the facts so far given it is difficult to tell whether the country has any clear foreign policy.

Groner's resolution said the nation should have a policy "to protect and preserve the best interests of all the people of the U. S. and of those other free peoples of the world who are prepared to cooperate fully with us in preserving the fundamental constitutional principles upon which this nation was founded."

Dechard H. Hulcy, Dallas, Texas, president of the Lone Star Gas Co., was elected president of the chamber. The self-educated, 59-year-old Hulcy also is president of the American Gas Association, which speaks for the gas utility industry.

Johnston Paints Rosy Picture

Hulcy succeeds Otto A. Seyferth, Muskegon, Mich.

But he said a lot of hard work and sacrifice will be needed to keep it that color.

Johnston promised that the government will hold the dam against "a new inflation flood" expected about Christmas when the full force of the arms production program makes itself felt in greater buying power.

Md. Air National Guard To Get Jet Planes Soon

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP)—Swift jet fighter planes will soon add their punch to Maryland's Air National Guard, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord said today.

The State Adjutant General said that equipping the Maryland unit with jets is part of an overall plan for improving air defense along the Atlantic coast.

The jets will be stationed at Friendship International Airport here.

West Virginia Bank Robbed Third Time Since November

WINONA, W. Va., May 2 (AP)Two young men wearing Indian war paint and brandishing guns held up the Winona National Bank shortly before closing time today and escaped with $15,560.

It was the third time since last November that the bank has been held up.

State police earlier had fixed the amount at between $40,000 and $45,000, based upon what is usually in the bank tills at that hour of the day.

Investigators said the two men entered the bank shortly before 1:45 p. m., one waving a sawed-off rifle, the other brandishing a cocked pistol. They forced Cashier J. R. Hisey to turn over all the loose cash in the bank to them.

They fled in a red sedan parked outside the bank, accompanied by a blonde girl who waited in the car during the robbery. They were last seen heading toward Route 60. State police immediately set up road blocks.

Three Enemy Divisions May Assault Seoul

Van Fleet Claims "Great Victory"

TOKYO, Thursday, May 3 (AP) — The Reds today were reported getting ready to renew their bogged-down spring offensive in Korea with a three-division assault on Seoul.

The Allied field commander proclaimed the first round of the big Red drive a great Allied victory but warned that bigger blows possibly were to come.

Today intelligence officers on the western front told AP Correspondent George McArthur of reports that two North Korean divisions and a Chinese Red division were to be hurled at Seoul.

These forces were regrouping out of range of Allied artillery which helped blow up the Communist timetable to capture the Korean capital by May Day.

Red Night Fighters Appear

So were other Red buildup forces in the center where a new attack also was expected.

Communist night fighter planes were definitely identified in action over Korea last night for the first time in the war.

A U. S. B-26 bomber crew reported it was attacked by three propeller-driven Communist planes over North Korea as it dropped flares.

The Americans said their plane was not damaged. They said they may have hit one of the attacking planes in the brief fight.

The Reds, having lost more than 75,000 men in the first round of their offensive, played it so cautious Wednesday that only 395 were killed or wounded in ground action all across Korea.

This Eighth Army estimate was the lowest for a single day in weeks.

Wednesday's biggest action was a thunderous artillery duel northwest of Seoul. The Allies won it. After the Chinese opened up with hundreds of shells on United Nations positions, the big Allied guns replied and silenced the foe's batteries.

Allied planes — carrier and land-based — ranged the width of the peninsula and far to the north in stepped-up raids on Red troop concentrations, transport lines, ammunition dumps and warehouses. More than 450 miles of rail lines were ripped up by Navy planes alone Wednesday.

Cruiser Shells Reds

An unidentified plane dropped four bombs today a few thousand yards in front of U. N. positions in Central Korea near Chunchon. It was not determined immediately if the plane was Communist or Allied.

House Cuts Fund For Interior Dept.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The House today passed a sharply trimmed Interior Department money bill allowing the department $496,764,500 for the year starting July 1.

This amount was about 11 per cent less than requested by the administration.

The cut was the biggest made by the House in any of the money bills passed this year. These bills include those providing funds for the Treasury, Post Office, and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Administration.

Biggest cuts were in Reclamation Bureau construction funds, reduced $10,190,000 from the $207,190,000 requested.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

Israel Reports Syrians Driven Out Of Territory

TEL AVIV, Israel, May 2 (AP)—Syrian forces which penetrated into Israel's territory today were driven back into Syria tonight, an Israeli military spokesman announced.

The Israeli counterattack, the spokesman said, was directed against regular forces of the Syrian army and Syrian "irregulars" who, during the day, had occupied a two-mile stretch of the demilitarized zone along the border.

He claimed the Syrians had also penetrated into Israel beyond the demilitarized zone.

The spokesman said Israeli troops remained on their own territory and that all was quiet tonight in the trouble area.

The disputed territory is north of the Sea of Galilee and was demilitarized under the United Nations-sponsored truce between Jews and Arabs.

(At Lake Success, Israel charged Syria with aggression. Her representative, Abba Eban, demanded immediate action by the Security Council. The Israeli troops were reported to have suffered three killed and one wounded in the first hours of the shooting.)

A month ago, seven Israeli policemen were shot to death on patrol in another frontier area, southeast of the Sea of Galilee, and Israeli warplanes bombed Syrian-held points in retaliation.

For more than a week, things had been quiet in the frontier zone where, over Syrian objections, Israel is draining the Huleh swamps for farm land.

Syria contends that Israeli development work in the demilitarized zone and removal of 650 Arabs from the area violates the armistice which ended the Syrian-Israeli phase of the Palestine War in 1948.

Commons Approves Health Service Bill

LONDON, Thursday, May 3 (AP)—Britain's socialist government fought off a revolt within its own ranks early today and pushed through its bill ending free spectacles and false teeth under the public health service.

Only three of a long list of opponents backed their protests by voting against the government in the final showdown in the House of Commons. The government measure was approved by 262 votes to 3. Many members did not vote.

The bill provides that Britons must pay half the costs of glasses and dentures which they have been getting for nothing since 1947.

"Farm Safety Week"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — President Truman today proclaimed the week of July 22 "National Farm Safety Week."

Acheson Sees No Evidence U. S. And Mexican Relations Hurt By Chiding Of O'Dwyer

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today he sees no evidence that U. S.-Mexican relations have been hurt by the Senate Crime Committee's chiding of Ambassador William O'Dwyer.

And White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said he was unaware of any plan to recall O'Dwyer from his Mexico City post, as demanded by a number of Republicans following yesterday's publication of the crime committee's report.

The committee charged that O'Dwyer, while mayor of New York, associated with racketeers and failed to act effectively against big time lawbreakers. The report said his actions "impeded" some prosecutions and "contributed to the growth of ogranized crime."

Smith Wants O'Dwyer Fired

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ), a member of Foreign Relations Committee, added his voice today to the Republican clamor for O'Dwyer's dismissal as ambassador to Mexico.

"It is contrary to every good principle of democracy and diplomacy for us to be represented in Mexico by a man whose political activities in this country have been, at the very least, open to question," said Smith in a statement.

Acheson replied with a crisp no when asked at a news conference if he thought the crime committee's report had an unfavorable effect on this country's relations with Mexico.

He said he had no plan to confer with O'Dwyer as a result of the committee's findings.

"Loaded" Question Evaded

Acheson said that if he thought there was any reason to remove an ambassador, he naturally would take the matter up with President Truman.

A reporter asked if he planned to take such a step with regard to O'Dwyer. Smiling, the Secretary said he had not comment on a loaded question like that.

The President undoubtedly will be asked about O'Dwyer at his own news conference tomorrow.

He said on March 29 that he didn't contemplate any change in O'Dwyer's status. That was after the former Mayor had testified before the crime committee at a televised hearing in New York.

Three Young Sisters Die In Capitol Fire

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Three young sisters suffered fatal burns and nine persons were injured today in a fire that swept through a three-story rooming house.

Their parents, Paul Butler and Mrs. Evelyn Butler, were among the injured.

Most of those injured were hurt in jumping from windows. All were negroes.

Senators Vote To Hear Dawson

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — A Senate Banking subcommittee voted today to hear White House Aide Donald Dawson at a public hearing beginning May 10.

The subcommittee has charged Dawson with wielding outside influence on RFC loans. Dawson has remained silent but President Truman called the charges asinine.

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark), the chairman, said the group voted at a closed door session this afternoon to allow up to three days for the examination of Mr. Truman's patronage adviser.

Dawson, he said, will be questioned, "about his influence with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation" including his associations with members of the big lending agency's board of directors and borrowers.

Fulbright told reporters he still does not have written confirmation of Dawson's announced decision to finally face the subcommittee.

He said Dawson, in a phone call yesterday, had given no hint that he would set up any reservations against cross-examination by the subcommittee.

The Senator declared that on his own initiative as chairman he intends to reject a request from a television broadcasting company for permission to televise the hearing. He did not identify the company.

Native Of Japan Is Named "Catholic Mother Of 1951"

NEW YORK, May 2 (INS) —Mrs. Teresa Matsudaira, Seattle, a native of Japan, and mother of 13 children, was announced today as the "Catholic Mother of 1951" by the National Catholic Conference on Family Life.

The announcement was made by Mrs. John S. Reilly, conference president, who said that Mrs. Matsudaira's three older boys are veterans of World War II and one daughter died in childhood.

Mrs. Matsudaira, and her husband, Thomas Tokuisha Matsudaira, a Seattle restaurant worker, are natives of Kanazawa, Japan. They were married in Japan and a short time later came to the U. S., where their first child was born in 1922.

The family, like all other Japanese, was interned in 1942 at a camp near Hunt, Idaho, when the war with Japan raged.

The winning mother was converted to the Catholic faith in 1929 and her husband, in 1942. Mrs. Matsudaira said she became interested in the Catholic faith when she sent her children to the Maryknoll parish school in Seattle and "the children told me about God and Heaven."

Matsudaira was asked about the problem of providing for such a large family, and one of the sons replied: "Well you can say it really isn't cheaper by the dozen."

Mrs. Matsudaira will receive a gold medal in Seattle on May 13, Mother's Day, which also marks the close of National Family Week.

Ridgway Says He Has Proof Korean Reds Aggressors

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway sent a special report to the United Nations today asserting he had obtained documentary proof that the North Koreans were the aggressors against South Korea.

The report was the first received here from Ridgway since he succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur as U. N. commander in Korea. It was dated May 2 and dealt exclusively with the discovery of two military orders issued shortly before the Korean fighting started last June 25.

Ridgway said the orders provided clear proof that the Communist attack "was carefully prepared and carried out in accordance with a deliberate and preconceived plan for the conquest of the Republic of Korea."

Sales Of Rubber To Reds Provoke Commons Storm

120,000 Tons Sent To China Since War

LONDON, May 2 (AP)—The Colonial Office disclosed today British Malaya sold 120,000 tons of rubber to Communist China and 40,400 tons to Soviet Russia in the nine months ended in March—all since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Angry words on the handling of this strategic material bounced about parliament. The sales to Red China had increased heavily since United Nations forces undertook to stop Communist aggression in Korea. During all 1949, Malaya sent only 27,500 tons to China.

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill and Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell tangled in the House of Commons.

The storm apparently caught Shinwell by surprise. He ducked and parried some of the questions hurled at him from the Conservative benches.

Conference Took No Action

The rubber shipment figures were given by T. F. Cook, undersecretary of the Colonial Office, in reply to a question. A. G. Bottomley, secretary for overseas trade, reported that no steps were taken by the recent rubber conference in Rome to prevent the export of rubber to the Communist sphere.

No one outside the Communist world officially knows what happens to rubber landed in China, but it is required for tires and scores of other military needs.

The storm in Commons was touched off after Shinwell reported that the fighting in Korea "has entered a new and possibly critical phase." He said British casualties from the new push by the Chinese Communists totaled 48 dead, 223 wounded and 803 missing.

Charges Still Sent To China

Independent Raymond Blackburn charged that, between January and March, Britain "supplied the Chinese with thousands of tons of steel, with locomotives, ships and aircraft."

"Is it not high time we ceased to supply the people again whom our boys are fighting in Korea?" he asked.

Declaring Blackburn's statement inaccurate, Shinwell said:

"For several months we have placed an embargo on exports of strategic materials to China. We have done everything possible to prevent strategic materials from reaching China which could be employed against our forces."

Senate Demos Talk, Prevent Vote On Move

Neely Says GOP "Using" General

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Senate Democrats, after using filibuster tactics, tonight blocked a Republican move for wide open hearings on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ouster.

The Senate, on a vote of 42 to 40, recessed at 8:40, E.S.T., without reaching a vote on a Republican motion that MacArthur be heard in open committee session. He is due to start testifying tomorrow at 9 a. m., E.S.T., behind closed doors.

The recess put off any action on the motion until at least 11 a. m. (EST), tomorrow two hours after MacArthur is due to start testifying.

All Republicans voting opposed recessing while all Democrats voted to recess, except Sen. McCarran of Nevada who sided with Republicans as he had on earlier tests.

Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said Republicans will continue the fight for public sessions.

GOP lawmakers fought hard to strip the secrecy from MacArthur's testimony before the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, while the bitter Truman-MacArthur policy dispute gained headway with the release of a secret report on the MacArthur-Truman conference on Wake Island last October.

Neely Assails GOP

But the Democrats were determined to keep the five-star General's testimony behind closed doors, saying that otherwise the nation's security would be violated. They said everything that did not violate security would be made public.

Sen. Neely (D-WVa) and Kerr (D-Okla) jumped into the talkfest which hog-tied the Republicans in their efforts to get a vote on a resolution calling for an open hearing.

Neely accused Republicans of using MacArthur as a political tool. He also spent a long time in a filibustering speech about "home rule" for the District of Columbia. Kerr used up his first hour going over, in detail, a tiff he once had with Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich), sponsor of the GOP move for open hearings.

An effort was made to compromise the argument by permitting senators to hear MacArthur even though they are not members of the two committees which will conduct the inquiry.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) said the combined committees over which he will preside may meet 15 minutes before MacArthur's scheduled appearance tomorrow to try to decide whether to admit other senators to the hearing.

Demos Caught By Surprise

But Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican leader, declared the GOP lawmakers would not be satisfied with such a compromise.

The GOP maneuver to bring the MacArthur hearing into the open caught democrats by surprise.

The move was made in the form of a resolution by Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich) calling for a public hearing.

But under the parliamentary situation, the resolution could not

U. S. To Demand China Embargo

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—The United States will call tomorrow for a world-wide embargo on Red China to stop shipment of supplies for making atomic weapons and on all other war materials, informed quarters said tonight.

The U. S. ideas will be put in a secret meeting of the U. N. Committee on Additional Collective Measures, which is the technical name of the group studying punishments against Communist China. The committee will meet at 2 p. m. E.S.T.

Ambassador Ernest A. Gross, deputy United States delegate, was said to have been busy sounding out delegates on the committee about the American ideas. He was said to be advocating an embargo by all U. N. countries on everything that Red China could use to make atomic weapons—if Red China ever is in position to make them—and on other weapons and war materials.

This action would come in the form of a recommendation by the General Assembly to all U. N. members, it was said. The United States already has clamped severe restrictions on shipments to Red China and is asking other countries to do the same.

House Cuts Fund For Interior Dept.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The House today passed a sharply trimmed Interior Department money bill allowing the department $496,764,500 for the year starting July 1.

This amount was about 11 per cent less than requested by the administration.

The cut was the biggest made by the House in any of the money bills passed this year. These bills include those providing funds for the Treasury, Post Office, and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Administration.

Biggest cuts were in Reclamation Bureau construction funds, reduced $10,190,000 from the $207,190,000 requested.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

West Virginia Bank Robbed Third Time Since November

WINONA, W. Va., May 2 (AP)Two young men wearing Indian war paint and brandishing guns held up the Winona National Bank shortly before closing time today and escaped with $15,560.

It was the third time since last November that the bank has been held up.

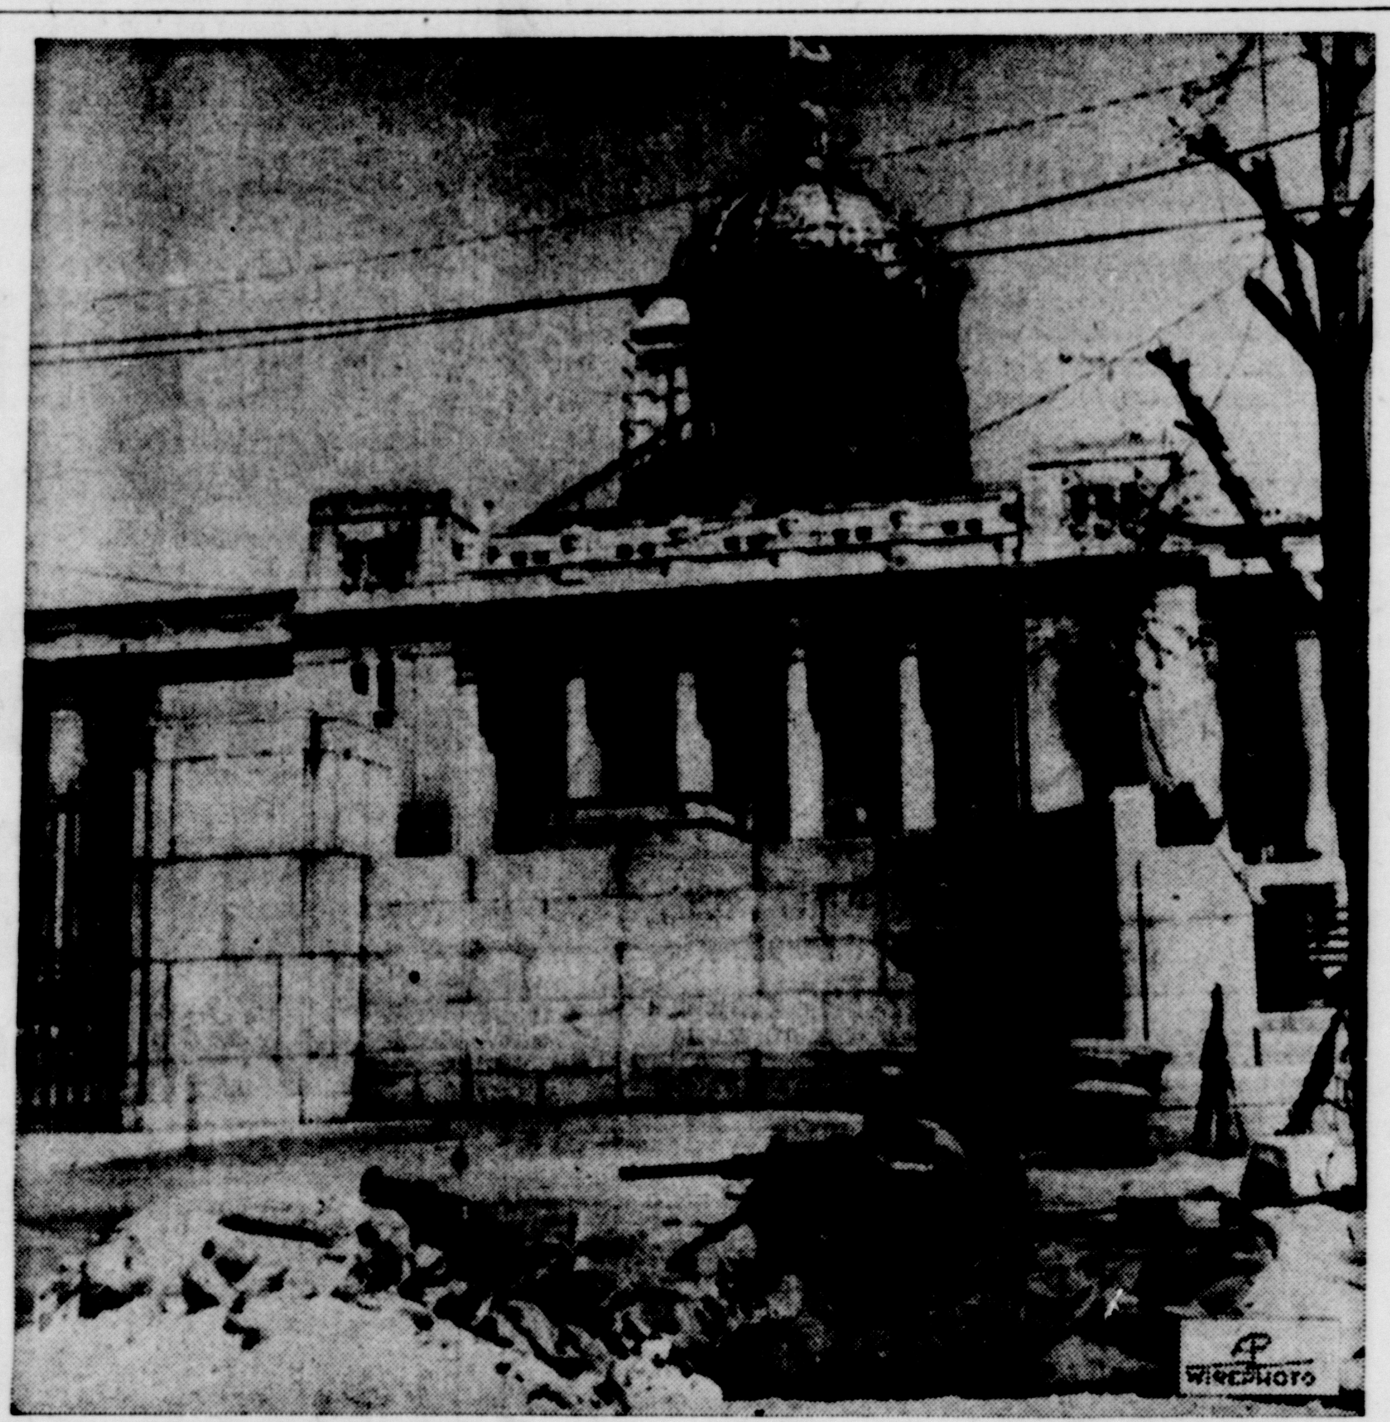
State police earlier had fixed the amount at between $40,000 and $45,000, based upon what is usually in the bank tills at that hour of the day.

Investigators said the two men entered the bank shortly before 1:45 p. m., one waving a sawed-off rifle, the other brandishing a cocked pistol. They forced Cashier J. R. Hisey to turn over all the loose cash in the bank to them.

They fled in a red sedan parked outside the bank, accompanied by a blonde girl who waited in the car during the robbery. They were last seen heading toward Route 60. State police immediately set up road blocks.



Yank Mans Seoul Defense Post

An American machine-gunner mans his post in front of the Republic of Korea capitol in Seoul as United Nations soldiers prepare to defend the city against approaching Red armies. A South Korean comrade carries additional sandbags to the emplacement. The battered capitol, still under repair, appeared threatened for the fifth time by the Red tide, but yesterday, enemy pressure lifted.

Israel Reports Syrians Driven Out Of Territory

TEL AVIV, Israel, May 2 (AP)—Syrian forces which penetrated into Israel's territory today were driven back into Syria tonight, an Israeli military spokesman announced.

The Israeli counterattack, the spokesman said, was directed against regular forces of the Syrian army and Syrian "irregulars" who, during the day, had occupied a two-mile stretch of the demilitarized zone along the border.

He claimed the Syrians had also penetrated into Israel beyond the demilitarized zone.

The spokesman said Israeli troops remained on their own territory and that all was quiet tonight in the trouble area.

The disputed territory is north of the Sea of Galilee and was demilitarized under the United Nations-sponsored truce between Jews and Arabs.

(At Lake Success, Israel charged Syria with aggression. Her representative, Abba Eban, demanded immediate action by the Security Council. The Israeli troops were reported to have suffered three killed and one wounded in the first hours of the shooting.)

A month ago, seven Israeli policemen were shot to death on patrol in another frontier area, southeast of the Sea of Galilee, and Israeli warplanes bombed Syrian-held points in retaliation.

For more than a week, things had been quiet in the frontier zone where, over Syrian objections, Israel is draining the Huleh swamps for farm land.

Syria contends that Israeli development work in the demilitarized zone and removal of 650 Arabs from the area violates the armistice which ended the Syrian-Israeli phase of the Palestine War in 1948.

Commons Approves Health Service Bill

LONDON, Thursday, May 3 (AP)—Britain's socialist government fought off a revolt within its own ranks early today and pushed through its bill ending free spectacles and false teeth under the public health service.

Only three of a long list of opponents backed their protests by voting against the government in the final showdown in the House of Commons. The government measure was approved by 262 votes to 3. Many members did not vote.

The bill provides that Britons must pay half the costs of glasses and dentures which they have been getting for nothing since 1947.

"Farm Safety Week"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today he sees no evidence that U. S.-Mexican relations have been hurt by the Senate Crime Committee's chiding of Ambassador William O'Dwyer.

And White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said he was unaware of any plan to recall O'Dwyer from his Mexico City post, as demanded by a number of Republicans following yesterday's publication of the crime committee's report.

The committee charged that O'Dwyer, while mayor of New York, associated with racketeers and failed to act effectively against big time lawbreakers. The report said his actions "impeded" some prosecutions and "contributed to the growth of ogranized crime."

Smith Wants O'Dwyer Fired

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ), a member of Foreign Relations Committee, added his voice today to the Republican clamor for O'Dwyer's dismissal as ambassador to Mexico.

"It is contrary to every good principle of democracy and diplomacy for us to be represented in Mexico by a man whose political activities in this country have been, at the very least, open to question," said Smith in a statement.

Acheson replied with a crisp no when asked at a news conference if he thought the crime committee's report had an unfavorable effect on this country's relations with Mexico.

He said he had no plan to confer with O'Dwyer as a result of the committee's findings.

"Loaded" Question Evaded

Acheson said that if he thought there was any reason to remove an ambassador, he naturally would take the matter up with President Truman.

A reporter asked if he planned to take such a step with regard to O'Dwyer. Smiling, the Secretary said he had not comment on a loaded question like that.

The President undoubtedly will be asked about O'Dwyer at his own news conference tomorrow.

He said on March 29 that he didn't contemplate any change in O'Dwyer's status. That was after the former Mayor had testified before the crime committee at a televised hearing in New York.

Three Young Sisters Die In Capitol Fire

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Three young sisters suffered fatal burns and nine persons were injured today in a fire that swept through a three-story rooming house.

Their parents, Paul Butler and Mrs. Evelyn Butler, were among the injured.

Most of those injured were hurt in jumping from windows. All were negroes.

Senators Vote To Hear Dawson

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — A Senate Banking subcommittee voted today to hear White House Aide Donald Dawson at a public hearing beginning May 10.

The subcommittee has charged Dawson with wielding outside influence on RFC loans. Dawson has remained silent but President Truman called the charges asinine.

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark), the chairman, said the group voted at a closed door session this afternoon to allow up to three days for the examination of Mr. Truman's patronage adviser.

Dawson, he said, will be questioned, "about his influence with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation" including his associations with members of the big lending agency's board of directors and borrowers.

Fulbright told reporters he still does not have written confirmation of Dawson's announced decision to finally face the subcommittee.

He said Dawson, in a phone call yesterday, had given no hint that he would set up any reservations against cross-examination by the subcommittee.

The Senator declared that on his own initiative as chairman he intends to reject a request from a television broadcasting company for permission to televise the hearing. He did not identify the company.

Native Of Japan Is Named "Catholic Mother Of 1951"

NEW YORK, May 2 (INS) —Mrs. Teresa Matsudaira, Seattle, a native of Japan, and mother of 13 children, was announced today as the "Catholic Mother of 1951" by the National Catholic Conference on Family Life.

The announcement was made by Mrs. John S. Reilly, conference president, who said that Mrs. Matsudaira's three older boys are veterans of World War II and one daughter died in childhood.

Mrs. Matsudaira, and her husband, Thomas Tokuisha Matsudaira, a Seattle restaurant worker, are natives of Kanazawa, Japan. They were married in Japan and a short time later came to the U. S., where their first child was born in 1922.

The family, like all other Japanese, was interned in 1942 at a camp near Hunt, Idaho, when the war with Japan raged.

The winning mother was converted to the Catholic faith in 1929 and her husband, in 1942. Mrs. Matsudaira said she became interested in the Catholic faith when she sent her children to the Maryknoll parish school in Seattle and "the children told me about God and Heaven."

Matsudaira was asked about the problem of providing for such a large family, and one of the sons replied: "Well you can say it really isn't cheaper by the dozen."

Mrs. Matsudaira will receive a gold medal in Seattle on May 13, Mother's Day, which also marks the close of National Family Week.

Ridgway Says He Has Proof Korean Reds Aggressors

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway sent a special report to the United Nations today asserting he had obtained documentary proof that the North Koreans were the aggressors against South Korea.

The report was the first received here from Ridgway since he succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur as U. N. commander in Korea. It was dated May 2 and dealt exclusively with the discovery of two military orders issued shortly before the Korean fighting started last June 25.

Ridgway said the orders provided clear proof that the Communist attack "was carefully prepared and carried out in accordance with a deliberate and preconceived plan for the conquest of the Republic of Korea."

120,000 Tons Sent To China Since War

LONDON, May 2 (AP)—The Colonial Office disclosed today British Malaya sold 120,000 tons of rubber to Communist China and 40,400 tons to Soviet Russia in the nine months ended in March—all since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Angry words on the handling of this strategic material bounced about parliament. The sales to Red China had increased heavily since United Nations forces undertook to stop Communist aggression in Korea. During all 1949, Malaya sent only 27,500 tons to China.

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill and Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell tangled in the House of Commons.

Conference Took No Action

The rubber shipment figures were given by T. F. Cook, undersecretary of the Colonial Office, in reply to a question. A. G. Bottomley, secretary for overseas trade, reported that no steps were taken by the recent rubber conference in Rome to prevent the export of rubber to the Communist sphere.

No one outside the Communist world officially knows what happens to rubber landed in China, but it is required for tires and scores of other military needs.

The storm in Commons was touched off after Shinwell reported that the fighting in Korea "has entered a new and possibly critical phase." He said British casualties from the new push by the Chinese Communists totaled 48 dead, 223 wounded and 803 missing.

Charges Still Sent To China

Independent Raymond Blackburn charged that, between January and March, Britain "supplied the Chinese with thousands of tons of steel, with locomotives, ships and aircraft."

"Is it not high time we ceased to supply the people again whom our boys are fighting in Korea?" he asked.

Declaring Blackburn's statement inaccurate, Shinwell said:

"For several months we have placed an embargo on exports of strategic materials to China. We have done everything possible to prevent strategic materials from reaching China which could be employed against our forces."

Senate Demos Talk, Prevent Vote On Move

Neely Says GOP "Using" General

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Senate Democrats, after using filibuster tactics, tonight blocked a Republican move for wide open hearings on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ouster.

The Senate, on a vote of 42 to 40, recessed at 8:40, E.S.T., without reaching a vote on a Republican motion that MacArthur be heard in open committee session. He is due to start testifying tomorrow at 9 a. m., E.S.T., behind closed doors.

The recess put off any action on the motion until at least 11 a. m. (EST), tomorrow two hours after MacArthur is due to start testifying.

All Republicans voting opposed recessing while all Democrats voted to recess, except Sen. McCarran of Nevada who sided with Republicans as he had on earlier tests.

Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said Republicans will continue the fight for public sessions.

GOP lawmakers fought hard to strip the secrecy from MacArthur's testimony before the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, while the bitter Truman-MacArthur policy dispute gained headway with the release of a secret report on the MacArthur-Truman conference on Wake Island last October.

Neely Assails GOP

But the Democrats were determined to keep the five-star General's testimony behind closed doors, saying that otherwise the nation's security would be violated. They said everything that did not violate security would be made public.

Sen. Neely (D-WVa) and Kerr (D-Okla) jumped into the talkfest which hog-tied the Republicans in their efforts to get a vote on a resolution calling for an open hearing.

Neely accused Republicans of using MacArthur as a political tool. He also spent a long time in a filibustering speech about "home rule" for the District of Columbia. Kerr used up his first hour going over, in detail, a tiff he once had with Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich), sponsor of the GOP move for open hearings.

An effort was made to compromise the argument by permitting senators to hear MacArthur even though they are not members of the two committees which will conduct the inquiry.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) said the combined committees over which he will preside may meet 15 minutes before MacArthur's scheduled appearance tomorrow to try to decide whether to admit other senators to the hearing.

Demos Caught By Surprise

The GOP maneuver to bring the MacArthur hearing into the open caught democrats by surprise.

The move was made in the form of a resolution by Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich) calling for a public hearing.

But under the parliamentary situation, the resolution could not

U. S. To Demand China Embargo

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—The United States will call tomorrow for a world-wide embargo on Red China to stop shipment of supplies for making atomic weapons and on all other war materials, informed quarters said tonight.

The U. S. ideas will be put in a secret meeting of the U. N. Committee on Additional Collective Measures, which is the technical name of the group studying punishments against Communist China. The committee will meet at 2 p. m. E.S.T.

Ambassador Ernest A. Gross, deputy United States delegate, was said to have been busy sounding out delegates on the committee about the American ideas. He was said to be advocating an embargo by all U. N. countries on everything that Red China could use to make atomic weapons—if Red China ever is in position to make them—and on other weapons and war materials.

This action would come in the form of a recommendation by the General Assembly to all U. N. members, it was said. The United States already has clamped severe restrictions on shipments to Red China and is asking other countries to do the same.

Peron's Claim Of Atomic Blast Called 'Hot Air'

NEW YORK, (INS)—A world-famous Viennese nuclear physicist believes that the atomic explosion which President Juan Peron claims was successfully achieved in Argentina by an Austrian scientist is just a lot of "hot air."

Professor Hans Thirring, director of theoretical physics at the University of Vienna, writing in the May issue of United Nations World magazine, said the chances are 99 to 1 that the atomic explosion occurred "only in the imagination of a crank or a fraud."

The professor suggested that Austrian Ronald Ritcher who was said by President Peron to have achieved the demonstration, may be the same man who appeared in Vienna in 1950 with a quack demonstration of a thermal-nuclear atomic explosion—one which relies on heat to trip the explosion and keep it going.

Professor Thirring quoted a colleague who recalled a student named Ronald Ritcher as saying:

"Richter, who took his degree with the well-known experimental physicist, Rausch Von Trauberburg, was a peculiar student noted for fantastic ideas and eccentric behavior.

"Since his graduation 30 years ago he has produced no scientific achievement which has reached the attention of specialists."

But Professor Thirring observed:

"On the other hand, the explosion in Argentina, and the one the strange Austrian attempted in Vienna, are of a type which has baffled the best scientists to date, despite their possession of all the instruments and facilities for experimentation."

Professor Thirring said that "power-thirsy dictators" are easy prey to cranks and swindlers who seemingly place in their hands the means to unlimited strength.

Malted Milks Get Youth Into Army

NEW YORK, (AP)—John Fitzpatrick, 19, was hungry for Army life. But not for malted milks.

When he showed up at the Army induction center last month, he weighed only 101—four pounds under the Army minimum.

But he came back this week humming a triumphant tune.

Stripped to his shorts, he stepped on the scales and registered 115 pounds. The induction sergeant stepped back in amazement—a gain of 14 pounds in 18 days!

Then the sergeant noticed a bulge around Fitzpatrick's waist beneath his shorts. An inspection revealed a belt hung with 13 half-pound lead sinkers, and a three-inch strip of iron.

When these were removed, Fitzpatrick was back down to 104, one pound too light.

"Go out and eat a big meal," the sergeant suggested.

"I've got no appetite," Fitzpatrick said. "I ate all the breakfast I could, and some malted milks besides."

But he went anyway. When he came back, the indicator just hit 105, enough for him to be sworn in. How did he do it?

"More malted milks," Fitzpatrick said, burping.

YELLOW SPRINGS, O.—(AP)—A method of removing calcium rapidly and continuously from the blood stream of animals is reported by Fels Research Institute scientists.

The development, the scientists said, "makes it possible to extend the study of the functions of calcium in the living animal."

It also may possibly be extended in the future to control the level of other chemical elements in the blood stream. For example, they pointed out, it may be possible to remove certain poisonous substances from blood when the kidney fails.

Dr. Lester W. Sontag is director of Fels Institute, located at Antioch College here.

The experiments originally were conducted to find a way to keep blood incoaguable while being pumped in a mechanical heart-lung machine developed at Fels. The successful by-passing of blood of dogs around the heart and lungs by using this machine was reported last December.

When the tests were started it already was known that calcium-free blood cannot clot. The problem was to find a means of keeping calcium out of the blood. (Calcium salts are an esstnial part of the bodies of most plants and animals).

This finally was accomplished by circulating the blood through a plastic chamber filled with an ion exchange resin similar to that used in ordinary water softening equipment. The filter and chamber were conceived and constructed by Fels scientists.

The Fels experiments also showed that, when the animal body is almost completely depleted of calcium, the heart stops pumping. But it can be completely restored to normal by a single injection of calcium.

The effect on the heart, however, can be completely prevented by the slow infusin of a calcium solution into a vein. In this way the blood outside the body can be kept calcium free while blood within the body remains normal.

Freedom From Fear

A knock on the door in the middle of the night can sound like thunder. It can be loud enough to hurt a man's ears and break his heart, if he lives in a police state. For there it may be the police come to take him to prison for something he believes or doesn't believe, or something he said or is supposed to have thought. Hungary's release of Robert Vogeler brings reminders of what a man's rights mean to a police state.

Vogeler, American businessman, heard the knock on the door in the still of night; he was taken to prison and accused of many crimes against the Hungarian state. He was sentenced to 15 years, and was released after 17 months only as a result of a deal between the American and Hungarian governments.

Vogeler has now warned his countrymen that what happened to him can happen to anyone. He said that a man needs the right to say what he thinks and go where he likes without the fear of being taken from his home during the night to face accusations before policemen and officials.

We should heed the warning that Vogeler gives us. We need to guard against the Communists whose philosophy imprisoned Vogeler. We must also be sure that in guarding ourselves we do not destroy the freedom we would defend. The knock on the door in the dark of night is a terrible and a hateful thing to a man within who must be afraid. It does not matter to him whether the knock is made by a Communist policeman, the leader of a lynch mob, or the representative of any other kind of government which has concluded that the way to deal with opposition is to suppress it by force. The name given to the politics of a police state matters little to its hapless citizens.

The words of Vogeler sum it up well: "You never realize what freedom means until you lose it."

War's Consequences

The United States Army has a civil assistance section. Its triple aim is the prevention of "starvation, disease and unrest." In Korea the section has had plenty to do.

The Korean program is not an innovation. Wherever the Army has gone, in Cuba, the Philippines, the Canal Zone, in North Africa, Italy and Germany, it has introduced American techniques for dealing with endemic disease. To the Army's credit are such notable achievements as the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and malaria and improvements in the control of typhoid.

In Korea millions have been vaccinated against smallpox and inoculated against typhoid and typhus. Plans are to complete giving these treatments to the 22,000,000 inhabitants of South Korea by the end of July. In the ports 2,000,000 are being inoculated against cholera. A campaign against diphtheria, with all children under 10 being immunized, is planned. A program of malaria control is under way.

In part this effort is humanitarian, its aim the conservation of human life. In part it is dictated by self-interest, for epidemics arising in civilian populations invariably spread to the troops.

However, the Army can do little about tuberculosis, a disease which is not subject to mass treatment. It is bred by poverty and inadequate sanitation. Moreover, the fighting is intensifying poverty and its consequences. Sewers, water systems and other sanitary facilities are the first to be destroyed when a city is attacked.

War invariably takes the lives of a nation's healthiest young men, thereby weakening the next generation and, in Korea's case, impairing its agricultural manpower. This, in turn, brings the certain prospect of famine, a scourge as deadly as the most virulent disease.

All the Army's efforts cannot spare Korea the evil by-products of war, many of which are worse than war itself, for they persist long after the fighting ceases.

Golden Isolde

If the past, for no other reason than it is the past, is enveloped in a golden haze, then the Metropolitan Opera House has had not one, but a succession of "golden ages." This, of course, is not true within any range of accurate meaning.

Few are likely to quarrel with the assertion that at least one "golden age" extended from about 1900 to the outbreak of World War I in 1914. Caruso was at his peak then, Scotti was flourishing and the Wagnerian wing boasted of a number of women singers, whose performances remain unsurpassed.

Three might be mentioned—Johanna Gadski and Ernestine Schumann-Heink, both German, and Olive Fremstad, Swedish. The first two died long ago, and now death has come for the third, at 79, after a long retirement.

Fremstad was an outstanding Wagnerian soprano, whose greatest roles were Isolde and Brunnehilde. All of these women were trained in the grand manner of singing. Fremstad, who had come to the United States as a child, was a pupil of Lilli Lehman.

When Wagner was banned from the Metropolitan repertoire, in World War I, the preeminence of the German wing was obscured. Fremstad's farewell performance was given in 1914. Years later another Scandinavian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad, made an unforgettable Isolde, but those who heard Fremstad will remember her Isolde as having special qualities of charm and strength.

UN And The League

Nobody, even if pro-UN, can deny that most Americans are more skeptical about UN than when it set up shop in 1945. The optimists are hoping that the American people will before too long regain whatever confidence they once had in UN. The pessimists are predicting that most Americans will finally turn against it as they ultimately turned against the League of Nations.

How American public opinion felt about the League originally will never be known. Membership in the League with reservations was favored in 1920 by a clear majority of the Senators, even though not the necessary two-thirds. And if President Wilson had accepted certain of those reservations, the Senate, as is now known, would have foregone the others.

It is true that the Democratic party espoused the League without reservations in the 1920 election and was soundly trounced. But the Republicans were not unqualifiedly anti-League in the 1920 campaign; Senator Harding promised, if elected, to effect some "association of nations." By 1920 the Democratic Administration had become thoroughly unpopular on many scores — nobody can tell how many people voted Republican in 1920 even though favoring the League.

At all events, it cannot be denied that four years later American public opinion had become definitely anti-League.

How To Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Alcohol As A Way Out

THE chronic alcoholic is the problem child of medicine. In many respects the victim should be pitied rather than maligned. Such individuals are maladjusted and emotionally disturbed and are driven to drink as an escape from their conflicts and vexations.

The alcoholic makes a poor husband and father and frequently neglects not only his family but his business. Some are brilliant and, when on the wagon, are capable of doing exceptional work. Others are timid, docile, and highly conforming persons but sooner or later their anxieties and dilemmas become so overwhelming they cannot overcome the urge to forget it all by resorting to drink. During a spree, inhibitions are cast off and many slip deeper into the notch of degradation. These individuals evade their troubles by a flight into intemperance in contrast to neurotics who develop an illness. While under the influence, the alcoholic is able to do what he suppresses when sober; the one who beats his wife at that time probably would like to beat her when he is sober but doesn't dare.

All these factors make treatment formidable. The conflicts responsible for the alcoholic's reaction to life have existed so long they are forgotten. Deeply hidden, unconscious, unacceptable inclinations, wishes, and urges are involved which may be unethical or below our moral standards. Many of these motivating forces cannot be helped but the physician makes an attempt to correct marital incompatibilities, sexual maladjustments environmental and family problems, and difficulties with in-laws. Various agencies also offer assistance. Alcoholic Anonymous, for example, is valuable in the fight against alcoholism; this organization teaches the alcoholic to admit and confess his shortcomings and then to put himself in the hands of a higher Power.

Social drinking is not comparable to chronic alcoholism in severity yet the two cannot be divorced. Many topers were social drinkers at one time but this does not mean that all social drinkers will become chronic alcoholics. The social drinker should be on guard, however, especially when he becomes intoxicated occasionally to flee from reality or to do a better job of entertaining his friends.

On the other hand, many persons enjoy a cocktail or two for reasons that have nothing to do with their emotional system, escape from reality, or compulsions. Their drinking habits may be products of social or cultural influences. The French and Italians have a love of wine, particularly when the vintage is just right. The Irish liking for companionship and drinking go hand in hand and the German beer garden is traditional. Most of these individuals can take it or leave it alone, depending upon how they feel. It is advisable to watch out, however, when alcohol becomes a problem because in this transitional stage it is easy to progress from a problem drinker to a chronic alcoholic. Many authorities believe that the two are one and the same.

HANGOVERS

M. G. writes: The morning after the night before my fingers feel thick and I can't hold anything, not even a pencil. What is happening to me?

REPLY

Not having been there, I don't know but many drunks awaken the next morning with more than a hangover. Your trouble may represent neuritis or the effects of trauma or even sleeping with the arms overhead. "Saturday night paralysis" also should be considered. This condition comes from falling asleep in a chair, with one arm thrown over its back. Allergy and arthritis are additional possibilities.

COLD AND CIRCULATION

G. T. writes: Could frostbite of the shins cause Buerger's disease?

REPLY

No, but exposure to cold aggravates most circulatory disorders, including Buerger's disease.

ITCH MITE

L. J. writes: Is scabies due to a germ or to vermin?

REPLY

DRUMS HEAL

M. R. writes: Do eardrums that have been punctured ever heal?

REPLY

Usually they do.

DISLOCATED HIP

K. W. writes: Every few weeks I get a kink in my right lower back and have trouble straightening up. At the same time the right hip seems to swing out of place and the left leg appears shorter than the right. Could you explain this condition?

REPLY

Maybe the hip is slipping out of place. At any rate, why not call your family physician the next time this happens?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

House Committee Withholds Important Testimony On Chiang Kai-shek; Taft Found MacArthur Politically Cool; Herbert Hoover Had His General

WASHINGTON—Locked in the files of the House Foreign Affairs Committee is some dynamite-laden evidence by a former adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, which would be of great interest in the MacArthur-Truman debate if it were made public.

Secret testimony was given on April 6, 1949, before the Foreign Affairs Committee by Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, former military advisor to Chiang. At that time Barr testified, among other things, that Chiang's staff officers were incompetent, lazy, derelict and in some cases downright dishonest. He described the surrender of some Manchurian cities to the Communists by Chiang's generals as so suspicious as to raise possible doubt of a sell-out to the enemy. In some cases, Chiang's staff officers were not even present when the troops under them surrendered.

General Barr also told how great quantities of American equipment which we supplied the Nationalist forces fell into Communist hands, and in turn made the Red conquest of China much easier and quicker.

In one case a big Allied supply base at Chinchow was left virtually and mysteriously undefended. Considering the amount of American equipment stored there, the actions of the Nationalist Chinese had all the earmarks of a sellout to the Communists who shortly thereafter captured it. It was not long before all Manchuria fell to the Communists.

General Barr testified that he believed Chiang himself was honest, but that his troops, lacking leadership, long ago had lost the will to fight. For a while the war against the Communists on the Chinese mainland simply depended upon how rapidly Mao Tse-Tung's men wanted to travel.

For reasons best known to himself, John Kee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee has been sitting on this testimony for two years.

NOTE — Another witness who could shed great light on Chiang Kai-shek's fighting qualities and his real feeling toward the United States is Col. James McHugh, retired Marine Corps officer. McHugh was aide to Chiang Kai-shek during the war, speaks Chinese, and is one of the few Americans who have written a textbook in the Chinese language. Experts such as Colonel McHugh and General Barr, who have lived in China and know Chiang Kai-shek intimately, should be called as witnesses before the Armed Services Committee.

Taft And MacArthur

Friends of Senator Taft report that the Senator's visit with General MacArthur at the Waldorf Tower, New York, netted only two things—Taft's firm conviction that MacArthur meant what he said about keeping out of politics, and second, that the General could outtalk the rather loquacious Senator from Ohio.

Taft went to see MacArthur to find out discreetly whether the General had any political intentions; and second, if not, to lay some diplomatic groundwork so that the General might later get on the Taft bandwagon.

MacArthur was cordial, but politically negative. He gave Taft a shortened version of his congressional speech, quoting it in such verbatim detail that it almost seemed as if he had memorized it. Taft, who is no mean talker himself, could hardly get a word in edgewise.

Taft's friends say that he did not tell the General that he, the Senator, was a candidate for the Presidency though he did hint that the Republicans were most grateful to MacArthur for what he had done and that they would certainly want him to be a leading defense planner if they won in 1952.

However, MacArthur was noticeably cool toward every political overture and in effect repeated his ambition to "fade away."

History Repeats

Herbert Hoover, who has been the chief confidante of General MacArthur during the present big debate, paradoxically was on the other end of a somewhat similar situation when he was President of the United States.

Hoover made the mistake of ordering the court martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, a popular Marine Corps figure, after Butler had stated in a lecture that Benito Mussolini, then dictator of Italy, had run over a child with his car but failed to stop. General Butler's court martial was ordered after Italian Ambassador Di Martino had protested officially.

But immediately there arose a tremendous outcry from the American press and public, and for weeks Hoover was the butt of possibly more scathing criticism than Harry Truman.

The situation was somewhat comparable to the present MacArthur debate in that the admirals did not like General Butler any more than some of the leaders in the Pentagon love General MacArthur.

It was also significant that Hoover's popularity at that time had sunk to an extremely low ebb, comparable to that of Truman's today.

In the end, Hoover did what Harry Truman has not done. He abjectly surrendered and called off General Butler's court martial.

NOTE—Hoover privately has been something of an admirer of President Truman, extolled his virtues at a Gridiron Club dinner, and has expressed private appreciation of the fact that Truman brought him back to Washington in various advisory capacities after the 13-year, anti-Hoover boycott by FDR.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The British Position

A BY-PRODUCT of the MacArthur situation must be an investigation and re-study of our relations with Great Britain. For no matter how it is sliced, General Douglas MacArthur is a victim of the constant pressure of the British upon our State Department and President to have him recalled. Now that he has been officially humiliated, his program is being adopted even to the extent of giving Chiang Kai-shek $80,000,000.

The British attitude toward General MacArthur was in on manner a personal antipathy. MacArthur's attitude toward the Korean War ran counter to the British attitude, and they got their man.

But the American people have never had, from their own officials or the British, an explanation of precisely what the British position toward Asia is and why. Lewis W. Douglas, who is the foremost protagonist of British policy in this country, tried to explain it at the recent Associated Press luncheon. But what he said clarified nothing except that the British sought to keep India within the commonwealth and therefore sacrificed both China and the United States to that purpose.

Mr. Douglas gave no explanation as to the morality of such a position nor did he quiver that such a course has already cost the lives of 10,500 of our sons.

This also appears in the picture and cannot be ignored: British policy in China since 1842 has always been to recognize the de facto ruler of an area, even if that ruler was in rebellion against the established and recognized government. The theory was that trade must go on.

This was one reason why the British rather than the Japanese and Russians were the most disliked foreigners in China for a century. The Chinese assumption was that the British were always seeking to keep China divided and weak. In the great boycott of 1925, the object of the Chinese was to bring the British to heel, and when by 1927 they could show an appreciable success in that enterprise, the authority of the British Empire was damaged; its prestige in Asia was demolished.

British policy in China has been and is a mercantile policy. It is dominated by the great firms, Jardine, Matheson, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank, the P & O, the British-American Tobacco Company, and the shipping lines. These and other firms and the manufacturers who supply them have, in recent years, in effect been a cartel headed by Jardine's. They represent a huge investment and are paramount in empire trade.

They are willing to trade with anyone who can pay. This is, granted, a short-sighted policy, for when the Chinese Communists no longer need them, they will cast them aside. But who, on the other hand, can guarantee how long Soviet China will last and what its policies will be ten years from now? Therefore, why not go forward with trade as long as possible and wherever it is available?

If the British can hold their East Asian trade profitably, great losses elsewhere may be offset. But this is to be observed, namely, that the British will never be able to trade in areas held by Chiang Kai-shek, for he will know how to impose a boycott on British goods, similar to the one he imposed between 1925 and 1927. Therefore, if Chiang Kai-shek is restored anwhere to the mainland, it will be American traders who will benefit.

Throughout World War II and thereafter, it has been British policy to keep American traders out of Asia. They regarded that as their sphere and even took the position that if the United States wanted to restore Great Britain, we ought to be sympathetic to their trading aspirations. Our State Department has on the whole been sympathetic to this British point of view, as I have pointed out on several occasions, particularly in connection with such products as pottery and chinaware.

The British therefore have been pursuing an advantage in the Communist antagonism to the United States and in stimulating the antagonism of the Indians toward us.

This is not altogether speculative because events and forces clarified since June 25, 1950, have established this pattern of activity. Even to this day, British trade has continued with the Chinese Communists, British military goods being delivered to them for use in Korea, not only against Americans but against the British contingents there.

Matter Of Fact

By STEWART ALSOP

MacArthur, Taft, And Eisenhower

WASHINGTON

IT IS perfectly obvious that Sen. Robert A. Taft has bet his political shirt on Gen. Douglas MacArthur. And at least for the present, the bet seems to be paying off handsomely.

At first, Taft inclined to take a rather cautious line. But now, after consulting with MacArthur in the General's sanctuary in the Waldorf Towers, Taft has criticized Defense Secretary George Marshall and he has lambasted Gen. Omar Bradley and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who are much more dangerous MacArthur antagonists than President Truman. He has called for "a more aggressive war against China." And he has stated that we cannot hesitate to adopt the MacArthur program "simply because we fear that the Russians might come into the war."

For a man who was not long ago opposing the North Atlantic pact on the grounds that it might "provoke" the Soviets, this is going pretty far. The fact that Taft has gone so far must be considered in relation to the fact that Taft is an active candidate for the Presidential nomination — so active that Taft workers are already lining up delegates in pivotal states like Massachusetts. Thus it is only reasonable to assume that Taft is counting on his all-out commitment to MacArthur to lead to his own nomination, and to the final triumph of the Taft wing in the inner struggle within the Republican party.

Republicans Join Taft

Taft may be right. So far, two things have happened. There have been some muted protests from Republicans of the stripe of Senators Morse, Duff, and Saltonstall. But by and large, the Republicans in Congress have lined up solidly—much more solidly than on any other foreign policy issue—behind Taft. This has been a major victory for Taft.

This in turn has markedly reduced the chances of nominating Dwight D. Eisenhower on the Republican ticket, as the Republican backers of Eisenhower in Congress somberly agree. This has been another major victory for Taft, for the obvious reason that Eisenhower has been the chief obstacle to Taft's nomination.

It is true that a new obstacle has been erected, at least by Col. Robert McCormick of the Chicago "Daily Tribute." It would be interesting to know Taft's private reaction to McCormick's suggestion that Taft should take second place on a ticket headed by Gen. MacArthur. But in fact, it is hardly conceivable that the Republicans should nominate a man who would be almost 77 years old at the end of his first term.

Thus the MacArthur crisis would seem at first glance to be a tremendous bonanza for Sen. Taft. But it may not work out this way in the end. Much depends on how Gen. MacArthur, who has not been accustomed to answering searching questions, answers the very searching questions, which embattled Democrats on the Russell committee are steeling themselves to ask him. Much depends also on what Marshall and Bradley—who are by no means without a public following—have to say to the committee. Advance hints from the Pentagon indicate that they will be, not bitter, but outspoken.

May Call Eisenhower

Finally, a great deal depends on whether Gen. Eisenhower is called home to testify. The chances seem a good deal better than even that this will happen at some point during "the great debate."

Eisenhower is of course too sensible to attack Gen. MacArthur or even to criticize openly the course MacArthur advocates. But his mere presence would underline the greatest weakness in that course. It may seem nonesense to label "isolationist" a policy which calls for "a more aggressive war against China." Yet the adjective is accurate in the sense that this course would isolate us from all our major allies. Thus MacArthur (who never mentioned our European allies in his speech) stands for the idea that allies are not essential, which is certainly one reason why he is acclaimed by Taft and all the former isolationists.

The political strength of the MacArthur-Taft program derives from the fact that everyone wants to end the Korean War, by winning it. But its weakness is that no one wants to end the Korean War by starting a much bigger one, which we should have to fight alone if only because our allies are not yet prepared to defend themselves. Eisenhower whose great mission is to help prepare our allies to defend themselves is the very symbol of the idea that this country's allies in Western Europe are vital to our existence. Eisenhower's return to testify would serve as a very powerful reminder of the weakness in the course proposed by MacArthur and embraced by Taft.

Here it is well to remember that, if the public opinion polls are to be trusted at all, Eisenhower has a political following which dwarfs Taft's and even MacArthur's. It is well also to remember that, if Eisenhower were prepared to accept it, and Truman to offer it, Eisenhower could have the Democratic nomination on the traditional platter. This is something which the Republican leaders, possibly including Sen. Taft, are not likely to forget in their moments of sober reflection.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Who are the "presidential advisers" who keep feeding out misleading information about President Truman's relations with General MacArthur before the dismissal occured? Is it possible that persons interested in promoting differences between Mr. Truman and the former supreme commander in the Far East are now trying to defend their part in a serious political blunder?

These questions will be raised and can be answered now only by the Senate Investigating Committee. Since they do not involve any "security" information, it ought to be possible to get the facts.

Meanwhile, it is curious that, despite an explicitly worded denial by General MacArthur that he never saw or read the so-called peace offer which the United Nations was reported to have been preparing last March, the White House, through the medium of so-called "presidential advisers," is placed in the position now of saying that he did receive the document.

Say Message Was Sent

The statement in question was circulated to the 14 governments whose troops are serving in Korea. A Washington dispatch last Saturday—16 days after MacArthur's denial—stated that, "according to the President's advisers," the proposed UN statement was "teletyped to MacArthur in Tokyo with the clear notation that this was to be a presidential statement which he should see in advance so that he could be guided accordingly. According to the President's advisers, the General not only rushed in to forestall Truman but actually appropriated some of the language in the document."

The foregoing charge was first made before President Truman dismissed General MacArthur. It appeared in the April 2 issue of the magazine "Newsweek," which said:

"It (the proposed UN statement) had been sent to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who in turn dispatched it to General MacArthur for his observations. To the complete consternation of the White House and the State Department, MacArthur adopt the essential points of the statement in his own declaration of March 24."

Apparently the substance of the magazine article was telegraphed to General MacArthur, who telegraphed to "Newsweek" a denial which that magazine, with commendable fairness, publicized in a full-page advertisement in the newspapers of April 12. General MacArthur's radiogram read as follows:

"The statement contained in your issue of April second to the effect that prior to the issuance of my statement on March twenty-fourth of the military situation in Korea I had been furnished a copy of a policy statment by the President cleared by the governments having military forces in Korea is entirely without basis in fact. I have never seen such a statement and do not know if it even exists. Please publish this in the interest of truth."

Yet, despite this explicit denial some White House advisers keep on saying that MacArthur did receive a copy of the proposed UN statement. The coming hearings will certainly establish the fact that the Joint Chiefs did not send the proposed statement. What the Joint Chiefs did send on March 20 was a brief message merely advising the General that the State Department was "planning presidential announcement shortly that, with clearings of bulk of South Korea of aggressors, United Nations now prepared to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea." The message added that a "strong UN feeling persists that further diplomatic effort toward settlement should be made before any advance with major forces north of the 38th Parellel."

No Evidence In Record

General MacArthur, as a field commander, had a right at any time to propose a truce to the Communist commander, which he did on March 24. This right has since been publicly affirmed by Trygve Lie, secretary- general of the UN.

There is absolutely no evidence in the record that the Joint Chiefs sent the text of any proposed UN declaration to General MacArthur. There is some doubt whether they themselves even saw it. The General's statement of March 24 addressed to the Chinese was about 600 words long, and in that entire statement only one sentence occurs which bears any similarity to the Joint Chiefs' message which the General did receive. He said merely that his forces "have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces." This is hardly an observation that would occur only to Washington planners. For it is a statement of the obvious in the Korean military situation as of March 24.

Why the White House insists on feeding out stories that General MacArthur saw a copy of the proposed UN declaration, when there is no record that it ever was sent to him, is one of the mysteries which, if cleared up, may throw light on the identity of the persons who influenced the President to dismiss MacArthur.

Freedom From Fear

A knock on the door in the middle of the night can sound like thunder. It can be loud enough to hurt a man's ears and break his heart, if he lives in a police state. For there it may be the police come to take him to prison for something he believes or doesn't believe, or something he said or is supposed to have thought. Hungary's release of Robert Vogeler brings reminders of what a man's rights mean to a police state.

Vogeler, American businessman, heard the knock on the door in the still of night; he was taken to prison and accused of many crimes against the Hungarian state. He was sentenced to 15 years, and was released after 17 months only as a result of a deal between the American and Hungarian governments.

Vogeler has now warned his countrymen that what happened to him can happen to anyone. He said that a man needs the right to say what he thinks and go where he likes without the fear of being taken from his home during the night to face accusations before policemen and officials.

We should heed the warning that Vogeler gives us. We need to guard against the Communists whose philosophy imprisoned Vogeler. We must also be sure that in guarding ourselves we do not destroy the freedom we would defend. The knock on the door in the dark of night is a terrible and a hateful thing to a man within who must be afraid. It does not matter to him whether the knock is made by a Communist policeman, the leader of a lynch mob, or the representative of any other kind of government which has concluded that the way to deal with opposition is to suppress it by force. The name given to the politics of a police state matters little to its hapless citizens.

The words of Vogeler sum it up well: "You never realize what freedom means until you lose it."

War's Consequences

The United States Army has a civil assistance section. Its triple aim is the prevention of "starvation, disease and unrest." In Korea the section has had plenty to do.

The Korean program is not an innovation. Wherever the Army has gone, in Cuba, the Philippines, the Canal Zone, in North Africa, Italy and Germany, it has introduced American techniques for dealing with endemic disease. To the Army's credit are such notable achievements as the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and malaria and improvements in the control of typhoid.

In Korea millions have been vaccinated against smallpox and inoculated against typhoid and typhus. Plans are to complete giving these treatments to the 22,000,000 inhabitants of South Korea by the end of July. In the ports 2,000,000 are being inoculated against cholera. A campaign against diphtheria, with all children under 10 being immunized, is planned. A program of malaria control is under way.

In part this effort is humanitarian, its aim the conservation of human life. In part it is dictated by self-interest, for epidemics arising in civilian populations invariably spread to the troops.

However, the Army can do little about tuberculosis, a disease which is not subject to mass treatment. It is bred by poverty and inadequate sanitation. Moreover, the fighting is intensifying poverty and its consequences. Sewers, water systems and other sanitary facilities are the first to be destroyed when a city is attacked.

War invariably takes the lives of a nation's healthiest young men, thereby weakening the next generation and, in Korea's case, impairing its agricultural manpower. This, in turn, brings the certain prospect of famine, a scourge as deadly as the most virulent disease.

All the Army's efforts cannot spare Korea the evil by-products of war, many of which are worse than war itself, for they persist long after the fighting ceases.

Golden Isolde

If the past, for no other reason than it is the past, is enveloped in a golden haze, then the Metropolitan Opera House has had not one, but a succession of "golden ages." This, of course, is not true within any range of accurate meaning.

Few are likely to quarrel with the assertion that at least one "golden age" extended from about 1900 to the outbreak of World War I in 1914. Caruso was at his peak then, Scotti was flourishing and the Wagnerian wing boasted of a number of women singers, whose performances remain unsurpassed.

Three might be mentioned—Johanna Gadski and Ernestine Schumann-Heink, both German, and Olive Fremstad, Swedish. The first two died long ago, and now death has come for the third, at 79, after a long retirement.

Fremstad was an outstanding Wagnerian soprano, whose greatest roles were Isolde and Brunnehilde. All of these women were trained in the grand manner of singing. Fremstad, who had come to the United States as a child, was a pupil of Lilli Lehman.

When Wagner was banned from the Metropolitan repertoire, in World War I, the preeminence of the German wing was obscured. Fremstad's farewell performance was given in 1914. Years later another Scandinavian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad, made an unforgettable Isolde, but those who heard Fremstad will remember her Isolde as having special qualities of charm and strength.

UN And The League

Nobody, even if pro-UN, can deny that most Americans are more skeptical about UN than when it set up shop in 1945. The optimists are hoping that the American people will before too long regain whatever confidence they once had in UN. The pessimists are predicting that most Americans will finally turn against it as they ultimately turned against the League of Nations.

How American public opinion felt about the League originally will never be known. Membership in the League with reservations was favored in 1920 by a clear majority of the Senators, even though not the necessary two-thirds. And if President Wilson had accepted certain of those reservations, the Senate, as is now known, would have foregone the others.

It is true that the Democratic party espoused the League without reservations in the 1920 election and was soundly trounced. But the Republicans were not unqualifiedly anti-League in the 1920 campaign; Senator Harding promised, if elected, to effect some "association of nations." By 1920 the Democratic Administration had become thoroughly unpopular on many scores — nobody can tell how many people voted Republican in 1920 even though favoring the League.

At all events, it cannot be denied that four years later American public opinion had become definitely anti-League.

Alcohol As A Way Out

THE chronic alcoholic is the problem child of medicine. In many respects the victim should be pitied rather than maligned. Such individuals are maladjusted and emotionally disturbed and are driven to drink as an escape from their conflicts and vexations.

The alcoholic makes a poor husband and father and frequently neglects not only his family but his business. Some are brilliant and, when on the wagon, are capable of doing exceptional work. Others are timid, docile, and highly conforming persons but sooner or later their anxieties and dilemmas become so overwhelming they cannot overcome the urge to forget it all by resorting to drink. During a spree, inhibitions are cast off and many slip deeper into the notch of degradation. These individuals evade their troubles by a flight into intemperance in contrast to neurotics who develop an illness. While under the influence, the alcoholic is able to do what he suppresses when sober; the one who beats his wife at that time probably would like to beat her when he is sober but doesn't dare.

All these factors make treatment formidable. The conflicts responsible for the alcoholic's reaction to life have existed so long they are forgotten. Deeply hidden, unconscious, unacceptable inclinations, wishes, and urges are involved which may be unethical or below our moral standards. Many of these motivating forces cannot be helped but the physician makes an attempt to correct marital incompatibilities, sexual maladjustments environmental and family problems, and difficulties with in-laws. Various agencies also offer assistance. Alcoholic Anonymous, for example, is valuable in the fight against alcoholism; this organization teaches the alcoholic to admit and confess his shortcomings and then to put himself in the hands of a higher Power.

Social drinking is not comparable to chronic alcoholism in severity yet the two cannot be divorced. Many topers were social drinkers at one time but this does not mean that all social drinkers will become chronic alcoholics. The social drinker should be on guard, however, especially when he becomes intoxicated occasionally to flee from reality or to do a better job of entertaining his friends.

On the other hand, many persons enjoy a cocktail or two for reasons that have nothing to do with their emotional system, escape from reality, or compulsions. Their drinking habits may be products of social or cultural influences. The French and Italians have a love of wine, particularly when the vintage is just right. The Irish liking for companionship and drinking go hand in hand and the German beer garden is traditional. Most of these individuals can take it or leave it alone, depending upon how they feel. It is advisable to watch out, however, when alcohol becomes a problem because in this transitional stage it is easy to progress from a problem drinker to a chronic alcoholic. Many authorities believe that the two are one and the same.

M. G. writes: The morning after the night before my fingers feel thick and I can't hold anything, not even a pencil. What is happening to me?

REPLY

Not having been there, I don't know but many drunks awaken the next morning with more than a hangover. Your trouble may represent neuritis or the effects of trauma or even sleeping with the arms overhead. "Saturday night paralysis" also should be considered. This condition comes from falling asleep in a chair, with one arm thrown over its back. Allergy and arthritis are additional possibilities.

No, but exposure to cold aggrevates most circulatory disorders, including Buerger's disease.

House Committee Withholds Important Testimony On Chiang Kai-shek; Taft Found MacArthur Politically Cool; Herbert Hoover Had His General

WASHINGTON—Locked in the files of the House Foreign Affairs Committee is some dynamite-laden evidence by a former adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, which would be of great interest in the MacArthur-Truman debate if it were made public.

Secret testimony was given on April 6, 1949, before the Foreign Affairs Committee by Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, former military advisor to Chiang. At that time Barr testified, among other things, that Chiang's staff officers were incompetent, lazy, derelict and in some cases downright dishonest. He described the surrender of some Manchurian cities to the Communists by Chiang's generals as so suspicious as to raise possible doubt of a sell-out to the enemy. In some cases, Chiang's staff officers were not even present when the troops under them surrendered.

General Barr also told how great quantities of American equipment which we supplied the Nationalist forces fell into Communist hands, and in turn made the Red conquest of China much easier and quicker.

In one case a big Allied supply base at Chinchow was left virtually and mysteriously undefended. Considering the amount of American equipment stored there, the actions of the Nationalist Chinese had all the earmarks of a sellout to the Communists who shortly thereafter captured it. It was not long before all Manchuria fell to the Communists.

General Barr testified that he believed Chiang himself was honest, but that his troops, lacking leadership, long ago had lost the will to fight. For a while the war against the Communists on the Chinese mainland simply depended upon how rapidly Mao Tse-Tung's men wanted to travel.

For reasons best known to himself, John Kee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee has been sitting on this testimony for two years.

NOTE — Another witness who could shed great light on Chiang Kai-shek's fighting qualities and his real feeling toward the United States is Col. James McHugh, retired Marine Corps officer. McHugh was aide to Chiang Kai-shek during the war, speaks Chinese, and is one of the few Americans who have written a textbook in the Chinese language. Experts such as Colonel McHugh and General Barr, who have lived in China and know Chiang Kai-shek intimately, should be called as witnesses before the Armed Services Committee.

Taft And MacArthur

Friends of Senator Taft report that the Senator's visit with General MacArthur at the Waldorf Tower, New York, netted only two things—Taft's firm conviction that MacArthur meant what he said about keeping out of politics, and second, that the General could outtalk the rather loquacious Senator from Ohio.

Taft went to see MacArthur to find out discreetly whether the General had any political intentions; and second, if not, to lay some diplomatic groundwork so that the General might later get on the Taft bandwagon.

MacArthur was cordial,but politically negative. He gave Taft a shortened version of his congressional speech, quoting it in such verbatim detail that it almost seemed as if he had memorized it. Taft, who is no mean talker himself, could hardly get a word in edgewise.

Taft's friends say that he did not tell the General that he, the Senator, was a candidate for the Presidency though he did hint that the Republicans were most grateful to MacArthur for what he had done and that they would certainly want him to be a leading defense planner if they won in 1952.

However, MacArthur was noticeably cool toward every political overture and in effect repeated his ambition to "fade away."

History Repeats

Herbert Hoover, who has been the chief confidante of General MacArthur during the present big debate, paradoxically was on the other end of a somewhat similar situation when he was President of the United States.

Hoover made the mistake of ordering the court martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, a popular Marine Corps figure, after Butler had stated in a lecture that Benito Mussolini, then dictator of Italy, had run over a child with his car but failed to stop. General Butler's court martial was ordered after Italian Ambassador Di Martino had protested officially.

But immediately there arose a tremendous outcry from the American press and public, and for weeks Hoover was the butt of possibly more scathing criticism than Harry Truman.

The situation was somewhat comparable to the present MacArthur debate in that the admirals did not like General Butler any more than some of the leaders in the Pentagon love General MacArthur.

It was also significant that Hoover's popularity at that time had sunk to an extremely low ebb, comparable to that of Truman's today.

In the end, Hoover did what Harry Truman has not done. He abjectly surrendered and called off General Butler's court martial.

NOTE—Hoover privately has been something of an admirer of President Truman, extolled his virtues at a Gridiron Club dinner, and has expressed private appreciation of the fact that Truman brought him back to Washington in various advisory capacities after the 13-year, anti-Hoover boycott by FDR.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The British Position

A BY-PRODUCT of the MacArthur situation must be an investigation and re-study of our relations with Great Britain. For no matter how it is sliced, General Douglas MacArthur is a victim of the constant pressure of the British upon our State Department and President to have him recalled. Now that he has been officially humiliated, his program is being adopted even to the extent of giving Chiang Kai-shek $80,000,000.

The British attitude toward General MacArthur was in on manner a personal antipathy. MacArthur's attitude toward the Korean War ran counter to the British attitude, and they got their man.

But the American people have never had, from their own officials or the British, an explanation of precisely what the British position toward Asia is and why. Lewis W. Douglas, who is the foremost protagonist of British policy in this country, tried to explain it at the recent Associated Press luncheon. But what he said clarified nothing except that the British sought to keep India within the commonwealth and therefore sacrificed both China and the United States to that purpose.

Mr. Douglas gave no explanation as to the morality of such a position nor did he quiver that such a course has already cost the lives of 10,500 of our sons.

This also appears in the picture and cannot be ignored: British policy in China since 1842 has always been to recognize the de facto ruler of an area, even if that ruler was in rebellion against the established and recognized government. The theory was that trade must go on.

This was one reason why the British rather than the Japanese and Russians were the most disliked foreigners in China for a century. The Chinese assumption was that the British were always seeking to keep China divided and weak. In the great boycott of 1925, the object of the Chinese was to bring the British to heel, and when by 1927 they could show an appreciable success in that enterprise, the authority of the British Empire was damaged; its prestige in Asia was demolished.

British policy in China has been and is a mercantile policy. It is dominated by the great firms, Jardine, Matheson, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank, the P. & O., the British-American Tobacco Company, and the shipping lines. These and other firms and the manufacturers who supply them have, in recent years, in effect been a cartel headed by Jardine's. They represent a huge investment and are paramount in empire trade.

They are willing to trade with anyone who can pay. This is, granted, a short-sighted policy, for when the Chinese Communists no longer need them, they will cast them aside. But who, on the other hand, can guarantee how long Soviet China will last and what its policies will be ten years from now? Therefore, why not go forward with trade as long as possible and wherever it is available?

If the British can hold their East Asian trade profitably, great losses elsewhere may be offset. But this is to be observed, namely, that the British will never be able to trade in areas held by Chiang Kai-shek, for he will know how to impose a boycott on British goods, similar to the one he imposed between 1925 and 1927. Therefore, if Chiang Kai-shek is restored anwhere to the mainland, it will be American traders who will benefit.

Throughout World War II and thereafter, it has been British policy to keep American traders out of Asia. They regarded that as their sphere and even took the position that if the United States wanted to restore Great Britain, we ought to be sympathetic to their trading aspirations. Our State Department has on the whole been sympathetic to this British point of view, as I have pointed out on several occasions, particularly in connection with such products as pottery and chinaware.

The British therefore have been pursuing an advantage in the Communist antagonism to the United States and in stimulating the antagonism of the Indians toward us.

This is not altogether speculative because events and forces clarified since June 25, 1950, have established this pattern of activity. Even to this day, British trade has continued with the Chinese Communists, British military goods being delivered to them for use in Korea, not only against Americans but against the British contingents there.

Matter Of Fact

MacArthur, Taft, And Eisenhower

WASHINGTON

IT IS perfectly obvious that Sen. Robert A. Taft has bet his political shirt on Gen. Douglas MacArthur. And at least for the present, the bet seems to be paying off handsomely.

At first, Taft inclined to take a rather cautious line. But now, after consulting with MacArthur in the General's sanctuary in the Waldorf Towers, Taft has criticized Defense Secretary George Marshall and he has lambasted Gen. Omar Bradley and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who are much more dangerous MacArthur antagonists than President Truman. He has called for "a more aggressive war against China." And he has stated that we cannot hesitate to adopt the MacArthur program "simply because we fear that the Russians might come into the war."

For a man who was not long ago opposing the North Atlantic pact on the grounds that it might "provoke" the Soviets, this is going pretty far. The fact that Taft has gone so far must be considered in relation to the fact that Taft is an active candidate for the Presidential nomination — so active that Taft workers are already lining up delegates in pivotal states like Massachusetts. Thus it is only reasonable to assume that Taft is counting on his all-out commitment to MacArthur to lead to his own nomination, and to the final triumph of the Taft wing in the inner struggle within the Republican party.

Republicans Join Taft

Taft may be right. So far, two things have happened. There have been some muted protests from Republicans of the stripe of Senators Morse, Duff, and Saltonstall. But by and large, the Republicans in Congress have lined up solidly—much more solidly than on any other foreign policy issue—behind Taft. This has been a major victory for Taft.

This in turn has markedly reduced the chances of nominating Dwight D. Eisenhower on the Republican ticket, as the Republican backers of Eisenhower in Congress somberly agree. This has been another major victory for Taft, for the obvious reason that Eisenhower has been the chief obstacle to Taft's nomination.

It is true that a new obstacle has been erected, at least by Col. Robert McCormick of the Chicago "Daily Tribute." It would be interesting to know Taft's private reaction to McCormick's suggestion that Taft should take second place on a ticket headed by Gen. MacArthur. But in fact, it is hardly conceivable that the Republicans should nominate a man who would be almost 77 years old at the end of his first term.

Thus the MacArthur crisis would seem at first glance to be a tremendous bonanza for Sen. Taft. But it may not work out this way in the end. Much depends on how Gen. MacArthur, who has not been accustomed to answering searching questions, answers the very searching questions, which embattled Democrats on the Russell committee are steeling themselves to ask him. Much depends also on what Marshall and Bradley—who are by no means without a public following—have to say to the committee Advance hints from the Pentagon indicate that they will be, not bitter, but outspoke

Finally, a great deal depends on whether Gen. Eisenhower is called home to testify. The chances seem a good deal better than even that this will happen at some point during "the great debate."

Eisenhower is of course too sensible to attack Gen. MacArthur or even to criticize openly the course MacArthur advocates. But his mere presence would underline the greatest weakness in that course. It may seem nonesense to label "isolationist" a policy which calls for "a more aggressive war against China." Yet the adjective is accurate in the sense that this course would isolate us from all our major allies. Thus MacArthur (who never mentioned our European allies in his speech) stands for the idea that allies are not essential, which is certainly one reason why he is acclaimed by Taft and all the former isolationists.

The political strength of the MacArthur-Taft program derives from the fact that everyone wants to end the Korean War, by winning it. But its weakness is that no one wants to end the Korean War by starting a much bigger one, which we should have to fight alone if only because our allies are not yet prepared to defend themselves. Eisenhower whose great mission is to help prepare our allies to defend themselves, is the very symbol of the idea that this country's allies in Western Europe are vital to our existence Eisenhower's return to testify would serve as a very powerful reminder of the weakness in the course proposed by MacArthur and embraced by Taft.

Here it is well to remember that, if the public opinion polls are to be trusted at all, Eisenhower has a political following which dwarfs Taft's and even MacArthur's. It is well also to remember that, if Eisenhower were prepared to accept it, and Truman to offer it, Eisenhower could have the Democratic nomination on the traditional platter. This is something which the Republican leaders, possibly including Sen. Taft, are not likely to forget in their moments of sober reflection.

"It (the proposed UN statement) had been sent to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who in turn dispatched it to General MacArthur for his observations. To the complete consternation of the White House and the State Department, MacArthur adopt the essential points of the statement in his own declaration of March 24."

Apparently the substance of the magazine article was telegraphed to General MacArthur, who telegraphed to "Newsweek" a denial which that magazine, with commendable fairness, publicized in a full-page advertisement in the newspapers of April 12. General MacArthur's radiogram read as follows:

"The statement contained in your issue of April second to the effect that prior to the issuance of my statement on March twenty-fourth of the military situation in Korea I had been furnished a copy of a policy statment by the President cleared by the governments having military forces in Korea is entirely without basis in fact. I have never seen such a statement and do not know if it even exists. Please publish this in the interest of truth."

Yet, despite this explicit denial some White House advisers keep on saying that MacArthur did receive a copy of the proposed UN statement. The coming hearings will certainly establish the fact that the Joint Chiefs did not send the proposed statement. What the Joint Chiefs did send on March 20 was a brief message merely advising the General that the State Department was "planning presidential announcement shortly that, with clearings of bulk of South Korea of aggressors, United Nations now prepared to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea." The message added that a "strong UN feeling persists that further diplomatic effort toward settlement should be made before any advance with major forces north of the 38th Parellel."

No Evidence In Record

General MacArthur, as a field commander, had a right at any time to propose a truce to the Communist commander, which he did on March 24. This right has since been publicly affirmed by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the UN.

There is absolutely no evidence in the record that the Joint Chiefs sent the text of any proposed UN declaration to General MacArthur. There is some doubt whether they themselves even saw it. The General's statement of March 24 addressed to the Chinese was about 600 words long, and in that entire statement only one sentence occurs which bears any similarity to the Joint Chiefs' message which the General did receive. He said merely that his forces "have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces." This is hardly an observation that would occur only to Washington planners. For it is a statement of the obvious in the Korean military situation as of March 24.

Why the White House insists on feeding out stories that General MacArthur saw a copy of the proposed UN declaration, when there is no record that it ever was sent to him, is one of the mysteries which, if cleared up, may throw light on the identity of the persons who influenced the President to dismiss MacArthur.

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

BECAUSE of the large demand from the people of Maryland that something be done about Secretary Acheson in the State Department and under the Constitution the House can do nothing to remove a Cabinet officer, I introduced a bill last week prohibiting the use of any funds to the State Department until Acheson is removed. It is my belief that the American people have lost confidence in the State Department and the only way to restore that confidence is the removal of Secretary Acheson. By withholding appropriations until Acheson is removed. I feel we will be doing what the people want.

Price control is now three months old. At the present time that agency has 1,500 employes in Washington, 1,500 in 14 regional offices and 1,000 in District offices. By June 30 Administrator DiSalle expects to have 16,000 on his payroll. The National Civil Service League, a non-partisan organization, states that political influence and civil service have "become inextricably entwined" in the selection of employes and warned that lack of confidence in OPS could wreck price control.

Major General E. E. Hume, Surgeon General of the Far East Command, said in Tokyo, April 21, that the casualties in the Korean War are the fourth most costly in United States history. The latest casualty report from the Defense Department states that 61,744 Americans have been killed, wounded or missing. General Hume said the Korean losses are five times those of the American Revolution, eleven times the War of 1812, four times the Mexican War, and six times those for the Spanish-American War.

A recent survey discloses that the United States will have more men under arms by this summer than all the European members of the Atlantic Pact nations combined. According to unofficial estimates the European members of the pact will have about 1,400,000 ground troops by July 1, compared with a U. S. Army of approximately 1,550,000. The population of the Western European pact members is 173,200,000 compared with 151,800,000 in the United States.

According to the latest Gallup Poll, 62 per cent of the American people believe General MacArthur should have been kept on the job; 29 per cent approved the President's action, and 9 per cent undecided. General MacArthur is to appear before the combined Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees today at which time an attempt will be made to get all the facts regarding General MacArthur's dismissal and to go over the entire field of our foreign policy.

The dispersal bill, which would have placed various government agencies in a series of small communities in portions of Maryland and Virginia from 10 to 20 miles outside of Washington was defeated in the sub-committee of the House Public Workers Committee of which I am a member. The Senate Committee also concurred in this action. The opinion was that the prospect of spending more than $190,000,000 on a program that would offer little assurance of security in event of an all-out atomic war was not appropriate when there is need for drastic economy and that these nearby areas did not welcome the federal government taking more land off the tax rolls. It was also felt that this dispersal program did not mean less employes in Washington since their places would be filled immediately by an ever expanding federal payroll.

UNDER THE DOME

At the request of the officials of the City of Cumberland, I asked the Department of the Interior to issue a permit for the Recreation Department of Cumberland to use the land along the C. and O. Canal which is known as the "Old Community Ball Park." It is expected that the permit will be issued in the very near future.

I was advised by the Appeals Board of the National Production Authority that they had approved the construction of a shopping center at Bethesda. A further check is being made into the possibility of securing critical materials needed for this project.

I have received hundreds of letters and telegrams opposing further taxation of automobiles as well as television equipment.

The sum total of all tin mined within the jurisdiction of the United States in 1949 amounted to only 68 long tons—51 in Alaska and 17 in Colorado. Yet the gaping jaws of American industries must be fed more than 70,000 tons of tin a year. The supply comes across long sea lanes, the National Geographic Society notes, from Asia, Africa, and South America.

A delicious filling for a festive luncheon omelet is one of creamed chicken and mushrooms. Garnish with sprigs of parsley, or fold a little chopped parsley into the filling.

B-O Groups Plan Annual May Party

The Veterans of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad were "the backbone of the organization and made the railroad more valuable employes from the standpoint of stability and safety," Chester T. Williams, division superintendent, told members of the B and O Veterans and Ladies Auxiliary in paying tribute to them at the first annual dinner of the groups last night at the B and O YMCA.

It was decided that the dinner, given by the auxiliary, honoring the past presidents of both the veterans and auxiliary will be an annual affair, which is to be held the first Wednesday of May each year.

On behalf of the veterans gifts were presented to Henry W. Bloss, Myers G. Light, Walter W. Seel, W. E. Freeland and Charles E. Hardy, past presidents, by Frank Hartell; and by Mrs. Pauline Smith, from the auxiliary to Mrs. Emma Jane Barnett, Washington; Mrs. George Crass, Mrs. Anna Salyards, Mrs. George W. Wenrich, past presidents of the auxiliary.

The invocation was given by Roy Collins, Staten Island, N. Y., grand president of the organization. Myers Light was toastmaster. WASHINGTON

MRS. BLAIR MOODY, newest Senate lady, since her husband was appointed to serve the unexpired term of the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg, at first said she was scared by the new job! But she says now she has calmed down. . . And if the sun's out she and the two boys (Hopalong fans) will be out in the back yard of their little white house in suburban Spring Valley, taking their usual sunbaths in the privacy afforded by a high wall of balsam trees.

AUSTINE

That handsome, black haired ex-athlete she's married to (he's the first member of the Gridiron Club to go to the Senate) has served in the Press Gallery for 18 years. . . Only five Senators have served longer on the Senate floor than Blair has served in the Press Gallery. . .

"And every day for those 18 years," says his wife, "he's had the same cereal for breakfast and mashed potatoes for dinner. I'm getting more and more tired of mashed potatoes." Brown-eyed, brown-haired 112-pound Mrs. Moody doesn't expect he will change habits in spite of his change in jobs.

Mrs. Moody, who says she likes all shades of brown and bronze, hates hats and buys too many shoes, also likes to climb into bed "with a clean heart at the end of the day, knowing I've done all I should" and read a good whodunit. . . Has two toy poodles, one Acey, the other Deucey, which she inherited from Senator William Knowland's mother. . . Thinks they bring the Moodys good luck. I decided not to ask her if she thinks her husband is Moody.

Isabel of Castile, the gal who encouraged Columbus to discover America, will be commemorated when Washington can see two manuscripts pertaining to her at the Library of Congress. A few weeks before, in the same month, Columbus, weary and disheartened, had returned to Spain from his fourth and last voyage.

Feuds a 'bustin' out all over. . . 'Tween the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the freshly-formed Senate Sub-Committee on Internal Security headed by Senator Pat McCarran. . . What competition rages between the two committees! For instance, when McCarran's group asked the House Committee on Un-American Activities group for access to files on subversives, the House fellows said in effect: "We'll permit you to request anything in our files. But we won't let you boys from the Senate Committee look directly into our files unless you are watched by one of our staff members."

House Committee members tell newsmen (off the record, of course) that they have to guard their files because many have been tampered with or lifted! . . . Heretofore all government investigative agencies, such as Secret Service, FBI, Central Intelligence Agency, Army-Navy and Air Force Intelligence and Loyalty Boards of various government agencies, have all been permitted free access to the files. . . But because of mysterious disappearance of records and documents from now on others in the government who inspect those files now must be supervised by a member of the committee staff, assigned to accompany and help any person who wants to inspect files on subversives.

Will working affect your personality? Yes . . . but for the better, if you approach your job right!

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

ARE YOU a career girl . . . or a would-be one? How does, or how will, working affect your personality?

That all depends on you . . . your goals and your approach to your job.

What Is Your Goal?

Many a new graduate sets out to work with no other intention than to mark time until she is married. Some dopesters argue that this aloofness to business responsibilities and conflicts preserves the gentle, feminine qualities, allegedly often lost in the marts of trade by more purposeful sisters. But such superficial reasoning ignores the corrosive effects of a job half done. Frustrations, insecurity and evasion always leave their mark on any onality. You always know in your heart when you are not making the grade. The self-confidence gained in doing a job well in the business world is a sound base for shouldering the responsibilities of marriage. The business knowledge gained helps a wife to understand her husband's problems when he most needs the help of her understanding.

But, as disastrous as letting your work slide, is the practice of being career-minded to the exclusion of all else. The woman who figures to get to the top by resorting to brusque manners and steam-roller tactics is apt to find her job rubbing her personality to the point of erasing her womanliness.

Changed for the Better

The famous women in business, the big names, are the most feminine and gracious of women. They accomplish their rightful ends by coupling their ability with their charm. Not of the spurious variety, of course — the great scorn to play the coquette at the conference table. They win their goals through the gentle art of persuasion, combined with solid knowledge, good reasoning, and sensitivity to the feelings of others. They develop and utilize their whole personality.

The woman who is guided by this principle achieves success not only in business but in her social and home life. Business life will always affect any personality — but when it's good, it's always for the better!

Eat Breakfast, Pop: You Won't Have To Breathe So Hard On The Hills

By FRANK CAREY

CLEVELAND (AP)—Make sure you eat your breakfast, Pop: You won't have to breathe so hard on the hills.

This advice was implied in a report to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Doctors W. W. Tuttle and Kate Daum of the University of Iowa reported they had made a study among elderly people showing that omission of breakfast resulted in a greater requirement of oxygen to perform work.

The oldsters—aged between 62 and 83—were put to work walking at two miles an hour on a slightly-graded treadmill. They did their stuff for several weeks while packing away three square meals a day.

Then, the tests were repeated for several more weeks during which the elderly folks went without breakfast. Methods were available for testing the amount of oxygen the folks used in performing their tasks. It was found that seven out of eight required "significantly" more oxygen when they went breakfastless than they did when they packed away the morning groceries.

In another dietary report, Dr. Pearl Swanson of Iowa State College said there is a strong possibility that the person who cuts down drastically on the fats, sugars and starches in his everyday living in order to cut down on calories may be taking chances with his physical well-being.

She said six years work on rats shows there is a very close relationship between the amounts of fats and carbohydrates — so-called "energy" foods—needed in the diet and the use in the body of the proteins eaten. Proteins include such things as eggs, meat and cereal, and are sometimes called the "building stones" of tissue.

The research has indicated, she related, that calories originating from fats and carbohydrates can be cut down 50 per cent in a low-protein diet without causing a tearing down of body tissue. But she said indications are that if they're cut beyond that point the body begins to use its own tissue to furnish energy.

Apparently, she declared, fats have some function in diet over and beyond the provision of calories.

The enrollment of American Sunday schools is estimated at nearly 23,000,000.

WASHINGTON

MRS. BLAIR MOODY, newest Senate lady, since her husband was appointed to serve the unexpired term of the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg, at first said she was scared by the new job! But she says now she has calmed down. . . And if the sun's out she and the two boys (Hopalong fans) will be out in the back yard of their little white house in suburban Spring Valley, taking their usual sunbaths in the privacy afforded by a high wall of balsam trees.

AUSTINE

That handsome, black haired ex-athlete she's married to (he's the first member of the Gridiron Club to go to the Senate) has served in the Press Gallery for 18 years. . . Only five Senators have served longer on the Senate floor than Blair has served in the Press Gallery. . .

"And every day for those 18 years," says his wife, "he's had the same cereal for breakfast and mashed potatoes for dinner. I'm getting more and more tired of mashed potatoes." Brown-eyed, brown-haired 112-pound Mrs. Moody doesn't expect he will change habits in spite of his change in jobs.

Mrs. Moody, who says she likes all shades of brown and bronze, hates hats and buys too many shoes, also likes to climb into bed "with a clean heart at the end of the day, knowing I've done all I should" and read a good whodunit. . . Has two toy poodles, one Acey, the other Deucey, which she inherited from Senator William Knowland's mother. . . Thinks they bring the Moodys good luck.

I decided not to ask her if she thinks her husband is Moody.

What competition rages between the two committees! For instance, when McCarran's group asked the House Committee on Un-American Activities group for access to files on subversives, the House fellows said in effect: "We'll permit you to request anything in our files. But we won't let you boys from the Senate Committee look directly into our files unless you are watched by one of our staff members."

House Committee members tell newsmen (off the record, of course) that they have to guard their files because many have been tampered with or lifted! . . . Heretofore all government investigative agencies, such as Secret Service, FBI, Central Intelligence Agency, Army-Navy and Air Force Intelligence and Loyalty Boards of various government agencies, have all been permitted free access to the files. . . But because of mysterious disappearance of records and documents from now on others in the government who inspect those files now must be supervised by a member of the committee staff, assigned to accompany and help any person who wants to inspect files on subversives.

Will working affect your personality? Yes . . . but for the better, if you approach your job right!

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

ARE YOU a career girl . . . or a would-be one? How does, or how will, working affect your personality?

That all depends on you . . . your goals and your approach to your job.

What Is Your Goal?

Many a new graduate sets out to work with no other intention than to mark time until she is married. Some dopesters argue that this aloofness to business responsibilities and conflicts preserves the gentle, feminine qualities, allegedly often lost in the marts of trade by more purposeful sisters. But such superficial reasoning ignores the corrosive effects of a job half done. Frustrations, insecurity and evasion always leave their mark on any personality. You always know in your heart when you are not making the grade. The self-confidence gained in doing a job well in the business world is a sound base for shouldering the responsibilities of marriage. The business knowledge gained helps a wife to understand her husband's problems when he most needs the help of her understanding.

But, as disastrous as letting your work slide, is the practice of being career-minded to the exclusion of all else. The woman who figures to get to the top by resorting to brusque manners and steam-roller tactics is apt to find her job rubbing her personality to the point of erasing her womanliness.

Changed for the Better

The famous women in business, the big names, are the most feminine and gracious of women. They accomplish their rightful ends by coupling their ability with their charm. Not of the spurious variety, of course — the great scorn to play the coquette at the conference table. They win their goals through the gentle art of persuasion, combined with solid knowledge, good reasoning, and sensitivity to the feelings of others. They develop and utilize their whole personality.

The woman who is guided by this principle achieves success not only in business but in her social and home life. Business life will always affect any personality — but when it's good, it's always for the better!

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

1. Come With Me . . .

It was raining that June morning in 1950. Haneda airfield, just outside Tokyo, was a moist but chilly place even in the sticky early dawn. On the tarmac the C-54 with the word "Bataan" across its nose warmed up; a fine spray whipped up from the propellers, hung for a moment, then lashed back across the concrete runway. "The Old Man should be here any minute," a lieutenant shouted.

True, he was an "old man." He would be the last to deny it. At 70 age became a matter of reflection rather than denial. "Napoleon," he once said, "failed only because he was tired—the drive that kept him going was wearing him out." Napoleon was only 46 when he failed. But this general had never been given a chance to tire out; he had never given himself a chance to grow old in the strictly mental sense of the word.

And now on this rain-swept morning, this man of 70, General of the Armies Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Japan and United Nations Commander in Korea, was about to fly to the front where American troops with South Koreans, green and untried, were desperately trying to hold back a vicious, well-equipped enemy who had crossed the border from North to South Korea and thus placed the world on the edge of an abyss.

The convoy of cars pulled up by the plane. The General stepped out. He wore a leather jacket; his trousers had a knife-like edge. His hat, a famous hat embossed with heavy golden "scrambled eggs," seemed to lack sheen. His face was older, fuller; his eyes were hidden by sunglasses; his hands shook a little. But there was that same look of adventure, that same look of determination about the eyes that observers had seen before: Philippines, 1903; Mexico, 1914; the Western Front, 1918; Washington, 1930-35; Bataan, 1941; and all the blood splashed islands of the Pacific of World War II. These were the eyes of the soldier. Turning to his aides and four correspondents he said: "Gentlemen, we go."

"We Go"

Was this "we go" the "I shall return" of another war? Was this, in fact, really another war?

The sound of the first shots in Korea had hardly died away before General MacArthur's critics began sniping from the side lines. One armchair strategist had this to say: "MacArthur has been caught flat-footed in Korea . . . . It appears the General did not even suspect that the Communists in North Korea were about to strike."

A little checking on the part of MacArthur's critics would have shown that MacArthur has had no control over Korea for the past 15 months, and Washington was warned that troops were massing on the 38th Parellel but the intelligence apparently failed to impress anybody of importance in the Pentagon.

For two years MacArthur had warned of Communist preparedness in Asia. His words fell on deaf ears; so did his plea for more troops, arms, and air force units. But to his many critics it was MacArthur and he alone who was responsible for our lack of preparedness in the Far East.

Controversy is nothing new in the life of General Douglas MacArthur. He is probably the most beloved and most hated general on the entire American military stage.

The mere mention of his name—particularly in Washington — can incite either outbursts of superlatives pledging undying support, or bitter cries of vehement denunciation. There seems to be no happy middle ground, no in-between.

Part of Both

There are those who claim that he is a "swashbuckling, overdressed, egotistical, outdated Alexander the Great who thinks he has deistic qualities," and others who describe him as a "modern Julius Caesar radiating glamour like a Barrymore in khaki . . . no coarse, tobacco-stained, whisky - guzzling Ulyses Grant . . . here is a magnificent leader with unrivaled political perception, unequaled military skill." Perhaps he is part of both schools of thought.

• — • — •

Like all leaders, MacArthur will always be subject to adulation and hatred. His every action, word and communique increases the fury of the everboiling cauldron of controversy. Yet one thing stands clear: few have ever belittled his military achievements. Gen. George C. Marshall thought of him as "our most brilliant general." The late James Forrestal saw in him "America's beachhead in Asia — our greatest strategist." Churchill called him "a glorious commander."

• — • — •

Again and again MacArthur was criticized for his public statements in which he insistently invoked the name of the Deity. This, plus his majestic aloofness, gave rise to the famous Marine poem which ended with the verse:

And while possibly a rumor now
Someday it will be a fact
That the Lord will hear a deep voice say,
Move over, God, it's Mac.

The Navy, too, laid emphasis on the general's "Bible-pounding." In a parody on the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" one wit wrote these lines:

Mine eyes have seen MacArthur
With a Bible on his knee,
A-typin' out communiques
For guys like you and me.
"Our heavy bombers hit Rabaul
And God is filled with glee!"
While Mac goes marching on.

Most Daring Commander

The term "Dougout Doug" was a belittling of MacArthur's courage, completely unjustified and uncalled for. MacArthur can be criticized for many faults, but certainly not on the subject of his personal bravery. He has never been known to wear a helmet, even in World War I. In that bloody conflict he was called the "most daring brigade commander on the Western Front," and won the DSC twice for bravery in action. MacArthur holds the nation's highest military distinction—the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The Navy and Air Force charges that MacArthur's communiques described them as "my navy" and "my air force" caused intense bitterness among all ranks, including senior officers, of both services.

The Navy particularly disliked the General. The former Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson (1940-45), writing in his book On Active Service in Peace and War on Navy disagreements said that "MacArthur was a constant bone of contention. . . The extraordinary brilliance of the officer was not always matched by his fact, but the Navy's astonishing bitterness toward him seemed childish."

Always conscious of his place in history and abnormally sensitive to press criticism of any kind, MacArthur or his press officers—it is extremely difficult to draw a dividing line—made one blunder after another.

His personal appearance has even been criticized. In Australia he was accused of being overdressed, because he wore full-dress uniform with 11 rows of medals. Nobody criticized Eisenhower, Patton, or Montgomery for wearing full dress. The General has not worn full dress since. Today he invariably wears suntans, the only embellishment the famous "scrambled-egg" cap which he is said to have designed. This, too, has had its share of criticism, yet it is interesting to note that the new uniform of the Air Force calls for senior officers to wear caps very much like the MacArthur variety.

Talks On Any Subject

His hands are thin and finely wrinkled now, but they sweep through the air with vigor and forcefulness as he gesticulates to make a point. He will talk on any subject brilliantly, and what begins as a five-minutes interview can stretch to half an hour or an hour. It is generally a very one-sided conversation. You do not talk with MacArthur; he talks at you.

He does not joke easily. He can see the humor in a situation or series of events, but he will barely smile when told a story with an amusing end. He can be a very warm and human person in a private interview. Those who meet him for the first time leave his office completely hypnotized, muttering words such as "genius," "brilliant," "great." For here is MacArthur's real forte.

There are millions throughout the world who think of MacArthur as an "egotistical dictator," but, he is worshipped by the Japanese. They tell him so, too, in thousands of letters, on every subject imaginable, which arrive at his headquarters each week. Yet MacArthur has never toured Japan and has been at his desk in Tokyo seven days a week, ten hours a day, for the last five years.

Few people realize that he had not set foot in his homeland since 1937. The nearest he has been to the United States was when he conferred with President Roosevelt at Hawaii. Furthermore, MacArthur has not had a complete vacation since the beginning of the Pacific struggle. Many another man would have long since cracked under the strain. The uncharitable rarely remember these things.

Pacific Dash Criticised

Perhaps the one event which still rankles MacArthur is his flight from Bataan to Australia in a PT-boat. Ordered out by Presidential order, his famous dash across the Pacific resulted in harsh and unjust criticism from many quarters. Judging from many of the stories that were written on the amount of worldly goods the MacArthurs took with them one would think that they surely must have used a freighter. Just for the record: besides MacArthur, wife, child, and Chinese nurse, they took one mattress (because Mrs. MacArthur was ill) and four suitcases. That story, too, has become part of the controversy.

MacArthur has rarely answered his detractors. Thus much of the fact and legend which surround him must remain for proper evaluation by future historians and biographers. He once said: "You are only remembered and become famous because of your mistakes." MacArthur will be remembered for more than his mistakes. Meanwhile, until the definitive history of MacArthur is painted, his critics might do worse than to study what has been called "MacArthur's Credo" — a framed piece by the Roman historian Livy which hung in the Supreme Commander's office. Here is the true character of MacArthur. The piece tells how a famous Roman general told off his critics. Directly after he had been appointed by the Roman senate, after much denunciation and criticism (apparently senate investigations were not unknown even then), this Roman general marched out into the rotunda, where his detractors had gathered, and said:

"Commanders should be counseled chiefly by persons of known talent; by those who have made the art of war their particular study, and whose knowledge is derived from experience; by those who are present at the scene of action, who see the enemy, who see the advantages that occasions offer, and who like people embarked on the same ship are sharers of the danger. If, therefore, anyone thinks himself qualified to give advice respecting the war which I am to conduct, let him not refuse assistance to the state . . but come with me to Macedonia . . .

"He shall be furnished with a ship, a horse, a tent; even his traveling charges shall be defrayed. But if he thinks this too much trouble and prefers the repose of the city life to the toils of war, let him not on land assume the office of pilot.

"The city in itself furnishes abundance of topics for conversation; let it confine its passion for talking to its own precincts and rest assured that we shall pay no attention to any counsel but such as shall be framed within our camp."

WHY THERE IS A WAITING LIST FOR GAS HEAT
and what we're doing about it

Those on our waiting list will receive gas heat in the order and class in which request was made.

Since March 1, 1947, thousands of our customers have placed their names on our waiting list for gas heating. This waiting list is the result of an endeavor by the company to provide for systematic allocation of gas for home heating on the basis of available supplies. This procedure is in accordance with rules and regulations on file with, or orders of the state regulatory commission.

No exceptions can be made in our policy of approving applications for gas heat in the order and class in which requests are filed.

This whole situation is brought about from the fact that there just isn't enough gas for home heating for all of our customers who would like to have it.

HERE'S WHY EVERYBODY CAN'T HAVE GAS HEAT IMMEDIATELY

1. Demand for gas heat keeps getting greater and greater because gas is the most modern heating fuel.
2. Gas is the cheapest fuel. While costs of other fuels have soared, the cost of gas has been held at low levels.
3. Most additional supplies of natural gas must be piped from the far Southwest, requiring long pipelines of large size. With the present shortage of steel, this pipe is almost impossible to obtain.

Unrestricted addition of new gas heating installations would, in cold weather, raise the demand for gas above total available supplies. This would jeopardize the welfare of all our customers who depend on gas for cooking, water heating, refrigeration, clothes drying, etc. Our waiting list protects everybody.

Naturally, you want to know what we're doing to solve this problem. The purpose of this report is to tell you as completely as possible.

Thousands of Early Applicants Have Already Been Served

The 9,000 families now on our waiting list are not the same families that were on it when the list was started, but are only those since last fall. We have approved applications as our gas supplies have improved. All the families on our original list, plus many thousands more, have been offered the convenience of gas heat. Today, 85,000 more homes on our lines are heating with gas than there were when our waiting list was started.

Many More Families Will Be Served

We are constantly working to solve the gas supply problem. Since 1946, we have spent over $50,000,000 on new gas lines and other transmission facilities. Since 1946, we have added more than 300,000,000 cubic feet to our gas deliveries on a zero day. We have already signed contracts for still additional supplies of gas to be delivered as soon as we can expand our pipelines and other facilities.

Pipe and other materials are the bottleneck. It is a condition over which we have no control.

What are the prospects for "Waiting List Families?"

During the past five years, our gas supplies have improved steadily. We hope to continue this trend. We can't, however, say definitely when any particular family on our waiting list will get gas for heating. We regret our inability to keep up with your desire for gas; however, in fairness to our present heating customers, it is essential that each await his turn. To do otherwise would endanger the supply to all.

We recognize our obligation as a Public Utility to make available to our customers as much gas as they need whenever they need it. We will not rest until we have met this obligation.

The above statements are made on the basis of present information and cannot be guaranteed against possible complications such as Federal restrictions on the use of materials, or other contingencies beyond our control.

WE HAVE SPENT OVER $50,000,000 TO IMPROVE YOUR GAS SUPPLY!
HERE'S HOW—

We have added hundreds of miles of new pipelines to meet the skyrocketing demands for gas—our gas heating customers alone have increased 565% since 1945.

We've built new facilities, expanded existing facilities to move enormously increased quantities of gas to you.

We've drilled hundreds of new wells in our efforts to locate new gas supplies in nearby fields to supplement supplies piped from the far Southwest.

We've increased our vast underground storage from 16 billion cubic feet to over 37 billion cubic feet, an increase of 133%. Gas is pumped into storage in summer, so that we can better meet your demands during cold weather.

We have already budgeted over $83,000,000 to be spent on additional expansion during the next five years to provide finest possible gas service for our customers.

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

1. Come With Me . . .

It was raining that June morning in 1950. Haneda airfield, just outside Tokyo, was a moist but chilly place even in the sticky early dawn. On the tarmac the C-54 with the word "Bataan" across its nose warmed up; a fine spray whipped up from the propellers, hung for a moment, then lashed back across the concrete runway. "The Old Man should be here any minute," a lieutenant shouted.

True, he was an "old man." He would be the last to deny it. At 70 age became a matter of reflection rather than denial. "Napoleon," he once said, "failed only because he was tired—the drive that kept him going was wearing him out." Napoleon was only 46 when he failed. But this general had never been given a chance to tire out; he had never given himself a chance to grow old in the strictly mental sense of the word.

And now on this rain-swept morning, this man of 70, General of the Armies Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Japan and United Nations Commander in Korea, was about to fly to the front where American troops with South Koreans, green and untried, were desperately trying to hold back a vicious, well-equipped enemy who had crossed the border from North to South Korea and thus placed the world on the edge of an abyss.

The convoy of cars pulled up by the plane. The General stepped out. He wore a leather jacket; his trousers had a knife-like edge. His hat, a famous hat embossed with heavy golden "scrambled eggs," seemed to lack sheen. His face was older, fuller; his eyes were hidden by sunglasses; his hands shook a little. But there was that same look of adventure, that same look of determination about the eyes that observers had seen before: Philippines, 1903; Mexico, 1914; the Western Front, 1918; Washington, 1930-35; Bataan, 1941; and all the blood splashed islands of the Pacific of World War II. These were the eyes of the soldier. Turning to his aides and four correspondents he said: "Gentlemen, we go."

"We Go"

Was this "we go" the "I shall return" of another war? Was this, in fact, really another war?

The sound of the first shots in Korea had hardly died away before General MacArthur's critics began sniping from the side lines. One armchair strategist had this to say: "MacArthur has been caught flat-footed in Korea . . . . It appears the General did not even suspect that the Communists in North Korea were about to strike."

A little checking on the part of MacArthur's critics would have shown that MacArthur has had no control over Korea for the past 15 months, and Washington was warned that troops were massing on the 38th Parellel but the intelligence apparently failed to impress anybody of importance in the Pentagon.

For two years MacArthur had warned of Communist preparedness in Asia. His words fell on deaf ears; so did his plea for more troops, arms, and air force units. But to his many critics it was MacArthur and he alone who was responsible for our lack of preparedness in the Far East.

Controversy is nothing new in the life of General Douglas MacArthur. He is probably the most beloved and most hated general on the entire American military stage.

The mere mention of his name—particularly in Washington — can incite either outbursts of superlatives pledging undying support, or bitter cries of vehement denunciation. There seems to be no happy middle ground, no in-between.

Part of Both

There are those who claim that he is a "swashbuckling, overdressed, egotistical, outdated Alexander the Great who thinks he has deistic qualities," and others who describe him as a "modern Julius Caesar radiating glamour like a Barrymore in khaki . . . no coarse, tobacco-stained, whisky - guzzling Ulyses Grant . . . here is a magnificent leader with unrivaled political perception, unequaled military skill." Perhaps he is part of both schools of thought.

• — • — •

Like all leaders, MacArthur will always be subject to adulation and hatred. His every action, word and communique increases the fury of the everboiling cauldron of controversy. Yet one thing stands clear: few have ever belittled his military achievements. Gen. George C. Marshall thought of him as "our most brilliant general." The late James Forrestal saw in him "America's beachhead in Asia — our greatest strategist." Churchill called him "a glorious commander."

• — • — •

Again and again MacArthur was criticized for his public statements in which he insistently invoked the name of the Deity. This, plus his majestic aloofness, gave rise to the famous Marine poem which ended with the verse:

And while possibly a rumor now
Someday it will be a fact
That the Lord will hear a deep voice say,
Move over, God, it's Mac.

The Navy, too, laid emphasis on the general's "Bible-pounding." In a parody on the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" one wit wrote these lines:

Mine eyes have seen MacArthur
With a Bible on his knee,
A-typin' out communiques
For guys like you and me.
"Our heavy bombers hit Rabaul
And God is filled with glee!"
While Mac goes marching on.

Most Daring Commander

The term "Dougout Doug" was a belittling of MacArthur's courage, completely unjustified and uncalled for. MacArthur can be criticized for many faults, but certainly not on the subject of his personal bravery. He has never been known to wear a helmet, even in World War I. In that bloody conflict he was called the "most daring brigade commander on the Western Front," and won the DSC twice for bravery in action. MacArthur holds the nation's highest military distinction—the Congressional Medal of Honor.

• — • — •

The Navy and Air Force charges that MacArthur's communiques described them as "my navy" and "my air force" caused intense bitterness among all ranks, including senior officers, of both services.

The Navy particularly disliked the General. The former Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson (1940-45), writing in his book On Active Service in Peace and War on Navy disagreements said that "MacArthur was a constant bone of contention. . . The extraordinary brilliance of the officer was not always matched by his fact, but the Navy's astonishing bitterness toward him seemed childish."

Always conscious of his place in history and abnormally sensitive to press criticism of any kind, MacArthur or his press officers—it is extremely difficult to draw a dividing line—made one blunder after another.

His personal appearance has even been criticized. In Australia he was accused of being overdressed, because he wore full-dress uniform with 11 rows of medals. Nobody criticized Eisenhower, Patton, or Montgomery for wearing full dress. The General has not worn full dress since. Today he invariably wears suntans, the only embellishment the famous "scrambled-egg" cap which he is said to have designed. This, too, has had its share of criticism, yet it is interesting to note that the new uniform of the Air Force calls for senior officers to wear caps very much like the MacArthur variety.

Talks On Any Subject

His hands are thin and finely wrinkled now, but they sweep through the air with vigor and forcefulness as he gesticulates to make a point. He will talk on any subject brilliantly, and what begins as a five-minutes interview can stretch to half an hour or an hour. It is generally a very one-sided conversation. You do not talk with MacArthur; he talks at you.

He does not joke easily. He can see the humor in a situation or series of events, but he will barely smile when told a story with an amusing end. He can be a very warm and human person in a private interview. Those who meet him for the first time leave his office completely hypnotized, muttering words such as "genius," "brilliant," "great." For here is MacArthur's real forte.

There are millions throughout the world who think of MacArthur as an "egotistical dictator," but, he is worshipped by the Japanese. They tell him so, too, in thousands of letters, on every subject imaginable, which arrive at his headquarters each week. Yet MacArthur has never toured Japan and has been at his desk in Tokyo seven days a week, ten hours a day, for the last five years.

Few people realize that he had not set foot in his homeland since 1937. The nearest he has been to the United States was when he conferred with President Roosevelt at Hawaii. Furthermore, MacArthur has not had a complete vacation since the beginning of the Pacific struggle. Many another man would have long since cracked under the strain. The uncharitable rarely remember these things.

Pacific Dash Criticised

Perhaps the one event which still rankles MacArthur is his flight from Bataan to Australia in a PT-boat. Ordered out by Presidential order, his famous dash across the Pacific resulted in harsh and unjust criticism from many quarters. Judging from many of the stories that were written on the amount of worldly goods the MacArthurs took with them one would think that they surely must have used a freighter. Just for the record: besides MacArthur, wife, child, and Chinese nurse, they took one mattress (because Mrs. MacArthur was ill) and four suitcases. That story, too, has become part of the controversy.

MacArthur has rarely answered his detractors. Thus much of the fact and legend which surround him must remain for proper evaluation by future historians and biographers. He once said: "You are only remembered and become famous because of your mistakes." MacArthur will be remembered for more than his mistakes. Meanwhile, until the definitive history of MacArthur is painted, his critics might do worse than to study what has been called "MacArthur's Credo" — a framed piece by the Roman historian Livy which hung in the Supreme Commander's office. Here is the true character of MacArthur. The piece tells how a famous Roman general told off his critics. Directly after he had been appointed by the Roman senate, after much denunciation and criticism (apparently senate investigations were not unknown even then), this Roman general marched out into the rotunda, where his detractors had gathered, and said:

"Commanders should be counseled chiefly by persons of known talent; by those who have made the art of war their particular study, and whose knowledge is derived from experience; by those who are present at the scene of action, who see the enemy, who see the advantages that occasions offer, and who like people embarked on the same ship are sharers of the danger. If, therefore, anyone thinks himself qualified to give advice respecting the war which I am to conduct, let him not refuse assistance to the state . . but come with me to Macedonia . . .

"He shall be furnished with a ship, a horse, a tent; even his traveling charges shall be defrayed. But if he thinks this too much trouble and prefers the repose of the city life to the toils of war, let him not on land assume the office of pilot.

"The city in itself furnishes abundance of topics for conversation; let it confine its passion for talking to its own precincts and rest assured that we shall pay no attention to any counsel but such as shall be framed within our camp."

WHY THERE IS A WAITING LIST FOR GAS HEAT
and what we're doing about it

Those on our waiting list will receive gas heat in the order and class in which request was made.

Since March 1, 1947, thousands of our customers have placed their names on our waiting list for gas heating. This waiting list is the result of an endeavor by the company to provide for systematic allocation of gas for home heating on the basis of available supplies. This procedure is in accordance with rules and regulations on file with, or orders of the state regulatory commission.

No exceptions can be made in our policy of approving applications for gas heat in the order and class in which requests are filed.

This whole situation is brought about from the fact that there just isn't enough gas for home heating for all of our customers who would like to have it.

HERE'S WHY EVERYBODY CAN'T HAVE GAS HEAT IMMEDIATELY

1. Demand for gas heat keeps getting greater and greater because gas is the most modern heating fuel.
2. Gas is the cheapest fuel. While costs of other fuels have soared, the cost of gas has been held at low levels.
3. Most additional supplies of natural gas must be piped from the far Southwest, requiring long pipelines of large size. With the present shortage of steel, this pipe is almost impossible to obtain.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALERTNESS PAYS HIGHLY

In almost any field of competition, alertness pays high dividends. It is vital to the prosecutor and investigator concerned with ferreting out miscreants. And it is a capital quality to be owned by a defender at the bridge table against an astute declarer. The ability to sense just what the opponent is trying to get you to do, and then finding a way to do just the opposite, is one mark of the truly great competer.

It seemed that the South player at this table, after a bold start, got cold feet later and refused to go above game despite his partner's positive response to the two-bid and eventual support of the hearts. Maybe he became a bit overawed when he learned that the East player at his table was Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, whom Governor Dewey of New York has just appointed to the head of the special Commission to Investigate Crime.

By other routes, most declarers reached a heart game on this deal in one of the duplicate tournaments aboard the Independence on its recent maiden cruise in the Mediterranean. Those who essayed 3-No Trumps walked in with nine tricks. They were beaten by those that made 4-Hearts, a contract in which there were three varieties of play.

At each heart game table the club Q lead was won by the K, and three hearts cleared trumps. Some declarers next led to the spade A and then lost the diamond finesse to the K, later inevitably dropping another diamond trick and two in spades to be down.

Two tables, following the opening club and three hearts, found South giving up two spades to East; South won the returned club, led to the spade A and used the spade thirteener to discard a diamond. That assured the contract, though the diamond finesse lost.

At another table that style was attempted, but Judge Proskauer in the East saw what South was up to. So when he won the first spade, he switched to a diamond return. If you follow the sequence of events, you will see that this caused the loss of two diamond tricks, before the discard of a diamond on a spade could be obtained, and set South.

Gurley Purchases Building In Garage Expansion Plan

The Kelso building on South Liberty Street has been purchased by Woodrow W. Gurley, local car dealer and insurance man, for $75,000.

Of two-story brick construction, the building runs back to an alley in the rear of the Post Office. Gurley has been operating the Dodge-Plymouth auto dealership in the building for seven years.

George Kelso, from whom Gurley purchased the building, operated a bowling alley on the second floor front for six years. This additional space will be used for car parking and storage, according to Gurley.

It will require two months to remodel the 130 by 60 foot section formerly housing the bowling alleys. Ten alleys were in use by Kelso.

The building comprises 30,000 square feet of floor space and Gurley has 34 employes at the establishment. Besides the garage and auto dealership, Gurley also conducts business for the Farm Bureau Insurance Company.

The new section, which formerly housed the bowling alleys, will be able to handle about 60 parked cars, Gurley said.

When the business was first started seven years ago Gurley was in partnership with his brother, Charles F. Gurley, now a resident of Florida.

George Kelso said he will go to Florida and enter business in the St. Petersburg area.

The new enterprise will be known as Gurley Garage, Inc.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALERTNESS PAYS HIGHLY

In almost any field of competition, alertness pays high dividends. It is vital to the prosecutor and investigator concerned with ferreting out miscreants. And it is a capital quality to be owned by a defender at the bridge table against an astute declarer. The ability to sense just what the opponent is trying to get you to do, and then finding a way to do just the opposite, is one mark of the truly great competer.

South	West	North	East

It seemed that the South player at this table, after a bold start, got cold feet later and refused to go above game despite his partner's positive response to the two-bid and eventual support of the hearts. Maybe he became a bit overawed when he learned that the East player at his table was Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, whom Governor Dewey of New York has just appointed to the head of the special Commission to Investigate Crime.

By other routes, most declarers reached a heart game on this deal in one of the duplicate tournaments aboard the Independence on its recent maiden cruise in the Mediterranean. Those who essayed 3-No Trumps walked in with nine tricks. They were beaten by those that made 4-Hearts, a contract in which there were three varieties of play.

At each heart game table the club Q lead was won by the K, and three hearts cleared trumps. Some declarers next led to the spade A and then lost the diamond finesse to the K, later inevitably dropping another diamond trick and two in spades to be down.

Two tables, following the opening club and three hearts, found South giving up two spades to East; South won the returned club, led to the spade A and used the spade thirteener to discard a diamond. That assured the contract, though the diamond finesse lost.

At another table that style was attempted, but Judge Proskauer in the East saw what South was up to. So when he won the first spade, he switched to a diamond return. If you follow the sequence of events, you will see that this caused the loss of two diamond tricks, before the discard of a diamond on a spade could be obtained, and set South.

Gurley Purchases Building In Garage Expansion Plan

The Kelso building on South Liberty Street has been purchased by Woodrow W. Gurley, local car dealer and insurance man, for $75,000.

Of two-story brick construction, the building runs back to an alley in the rear of the Post Office. Gurley has been operating the Dodge-Plymouth auto dealership in the building for seven years.

George Kelso, from whom Gurley purchased the building, operated a bowling alley on the second floor front for six years. This additional space will be used for car parking and storage, according to Gurley.

It will require two months to remodel the 130 by 60 foot section formerly housing the bowling alleys. Ten alleys were in use by Kelso.

The building comprises 30,000 square feet of floor space and Gurley has 34 employes at the establishment. Besides the garage and auto dealership, Gurley also conducts business for the Farm Bureau Insurance Company.

The new section, which formerly housed the bowling alleys, will be able to handle about 60 parked cars, Gurley said.

When the business was first started seven years ago Gurley was in partnership with his brother, Charles F. Gurley, now a resident of Florida.

George Kelso said he will go to Florida and enter business in the St. Petersburg area.

The new enterprise will be known as Gurley Garage, Inc.

Jonkel Charged With Violating Election Laws

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP) — The Baltimore grand jury today charged Jon. M. Jonkel with violating Maryland's Corrupt Practices Act in managing Sen. John M. Butler's successful election campaign last year.

Bail of $2,500 was posted by a professional bondsman for Jonkel, a Chicago public relations man, pending action of the Baltimore Criminal Court.

Jonkel served as campaign manager for the Republican senator in both the primary and general elections. Butler bested Millard E. Tydings, the veteran Democrat, in the November election.

Tydings complained to the Senate that Butler's forces violated the state election laws on spending and used smear tactics. Butler denied this.

A Senate subcommittee then conducted lengthy hearings in Washington, ending the taking of testimony three weeks ago today. State's Attorney Anslem Sodaro began examining the committee records before the hearings ended, and announced recently he had turned the evidence over to the grand jury.

Yesterday, the jury heard seven witnesses and adjourned without making a statement. All of the witnesses had been heard by the Senate group in Washington.

Miss Jean F. Kerr of Washington, research assistant in the office of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis), had been summoned by the jury but couldn't appear because of a leg injury.

Among other things, the jury charged Jonkel failed to keep "detailed, full and accurate accounts in a proper book" listing campaign expenditures and disbursements.

Secret Report

A letter from Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to the committee said five copies of the report were sent to MacArthur 12 days after the conference.

Bradley's letter added:

"To my knowledge, since that time we have received no information from Gen. MacArthur, or his headquarters, that would indicate any non-concurrence with the record of the conference."

Compiled From Notes

MacArthur was quoted in conversational form in the summary, which Bradley told the senators was compiled from notes during the return trip from Wake Island.

Bradley was one of those who attended the Wake Island meeting.

Bradley said all those who took part, including a stenographer, helped supply data that was combined for the report labelled "Substance of Statements Made at Wake Island Conference."

The summary said that at the opening of the conference Gen. MacArthur told President Truman and others:

"I believe that formal resistance will end throughout North and South Korea by Thanksgiving."

A little later MacArthur was quoted:

"It is my hope to be able to withdraw the Eighth Army to Japan by Christmas."

This was at a time when United Nations and U. S. forces were advancing into North Korea and before Chinese Communists entered the Korean fighting.

Three Enemy

"The enemy has failed in the first phase of his offensive," said Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Allied ground commander in Korea.

"He has paid a heavy price. The first part of the battle has ended in a great victory for the United Nations."

However, Van Fleet cautioned: "He (the Reds) has the capability of hitting again as hard as before or harder. I am confident the results will be the same."

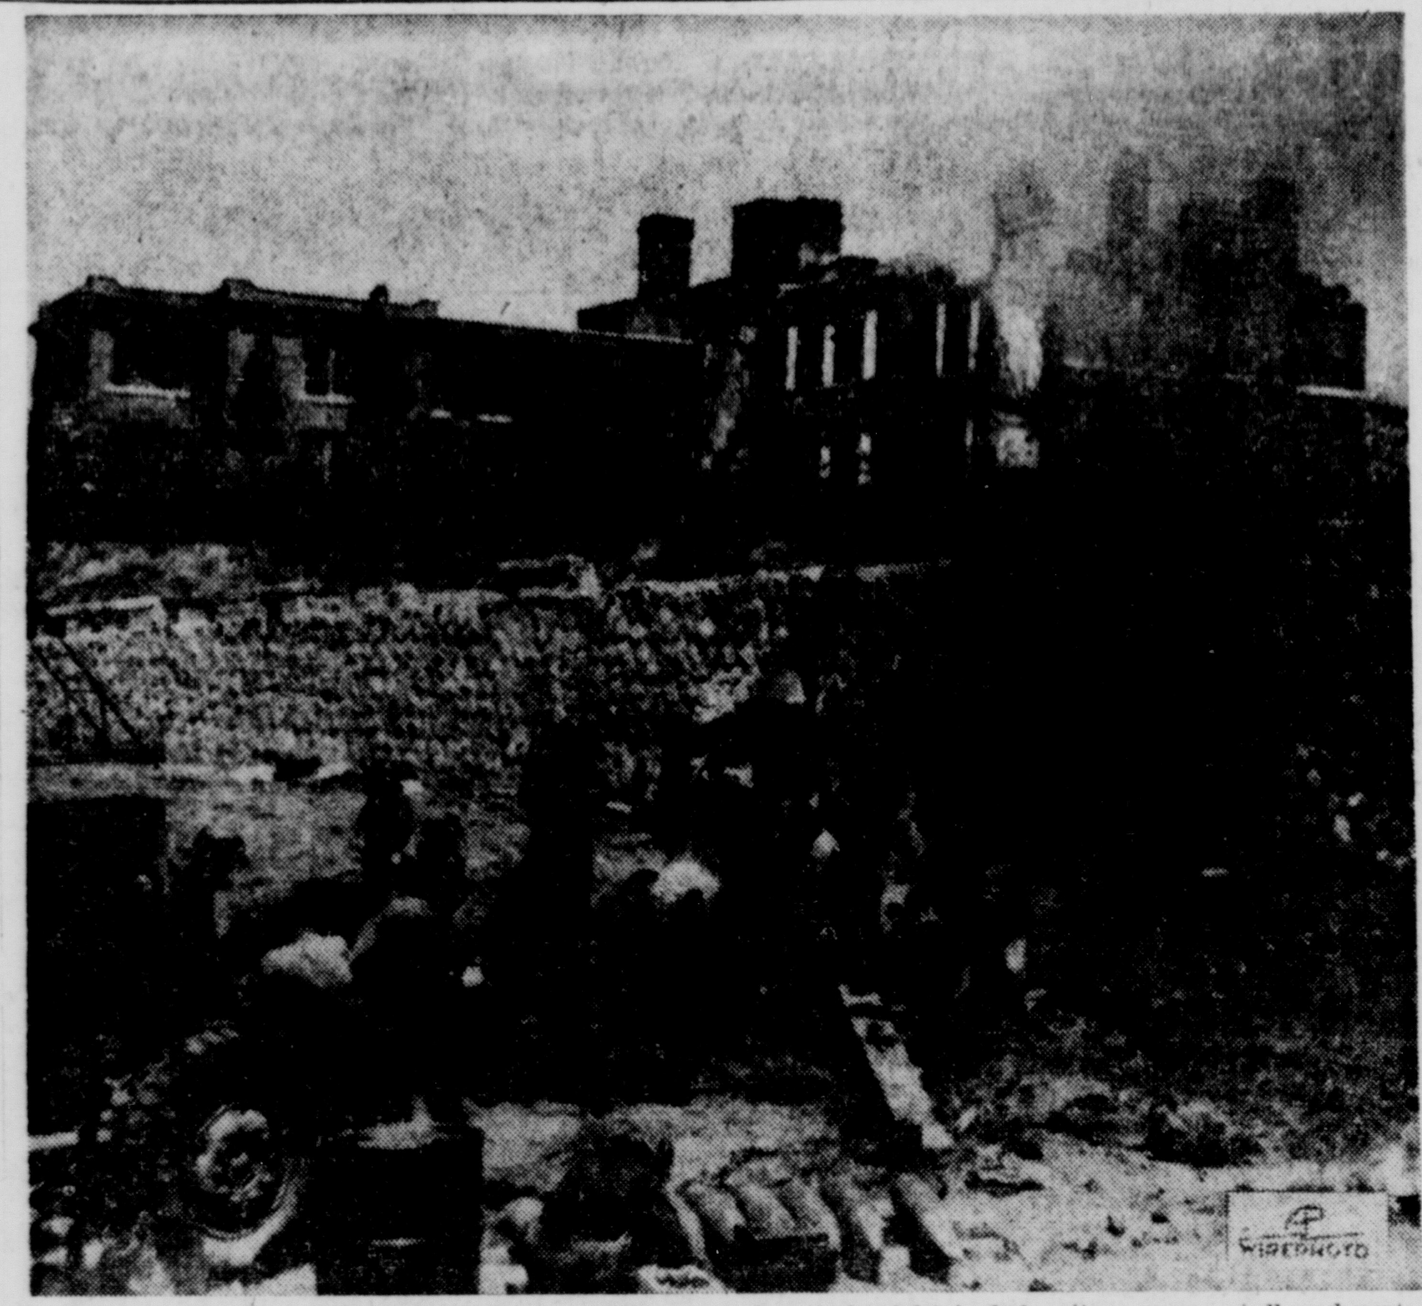
The lull on the battlefront moved into its fifth day Thursday. Five Allied tank patrols probed north of their lines on the western and west-central sectors. They met little or no resistance.

Nail Driven In Back

MOBILE, Ala., May 2 (AP) — An eight-penny nail fired by a mechanical nail driver was removed today from the back of a 54-year old woman.

City hospital attaches said the condition of Mrs. J. H. Waltmeyer was much improved.

The nail struck Mrs. Waltmeyer in the back as she walked by a building project where the new nail driver was being tested.



U. N. DEFENDERS IN SEOUL—Yank artillerymen fire their eight-inch howitzer over a wall and past shattered ruins in Seoul as United Nations forces defend the battered capital against advancing Red armies. The Allies yesterday appeared to have blunted the opening drive of the enemy's spring offensive as Red pressure lifted all along the Korean front.

Aide Says MacArthur Plans To Be Active "For Years"

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur intends to be active "for many years to come" and to present his views firmly at as many public appearances as possible, his spokesman said today.

Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, the spokesman, said these appearances will come after the deposed Far East commander ends testimony at congressional hearings starting tomorrow on Far East policy.

Commenting on MacArthur's future intentions, Whitney told newsmen:

"I would say that after the hearings he will continue to take a very firm stand and will make as many public appearances as possible."

Asked whether this meant MacArthur was taking his case to the public, Whitney replied:

"No. He looks at it in the light that many persons want to hear his views and he feels that in the public interest he should respond accordingly as far as he can."

Concerning published reports that MacArthur informed confidants that he held Secretary of State Dean Acheson chiefly responsible for his removal, Whitney said:

"I am inclined to discount it completely. I never heard any such expression from Gen. MacArthur."

Senate Demos

be brought to a vote without unanimous consent—unless it were offered in the first two hours of a "legislative day."

The two hours had long since passed. So the Republicans—with the aid of Sen. McCarran—forced a brief adjournment by a 43 to 41 vote so the Senate could then reconvene and start a new "legislative day."

But when the "new" day started, the Democrats began stalling for time. Sen. Neely took the floor to announce he had a long speech on tap about home rule for the city of Washington.

Neely denied a filibuter but he talked his way past the two-hour mark of the new day and thus put the GOP back where it started.

The West Virginian at one point lashed out with a bitter criticism of MacArthur.

"If the second coming of the Savior had occurred," he said, "there couldn't have been a more hysterical uprising (than the reception given to MacArthur on his homecoming)."

Neely declared he did not intend to "honor a man for showing his hatred and contempt of Harry Truman."

He shouted: "Republicans are trying to win the next election by parading him (MacArthur) over the country as a reward for his disobedience to the commander-in-chief.

"I am not going to participate in a Roman holiday for any man who has been in rebellion against the constitutional authority of the President."

A school principal says it's not right to do your child's homework. Maybe because it usually turns out wrong.

Draftee Gets His First Airplane And Train Rides

FORT MEADE, Md., May 2 (AP)—The Army must seem weird and wonderful to Pvt. Roscoe Johnson, 18, Jackson, Ky.

He enlisted at Lexington, Ky., and the Army flew him to its reception center here for outfitting, innoculation shots and aptitude tests. It was his first plane ride.

Then the Army started him back to Fort Knox, Ky., last Wednesday for basic training with the 3rd Armored Division. It was his first train ride.

Red Casualties In Drive Exceed Total For U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Chinese Reds and North Koreans have suffered more casualties in their current offensive than the United States has throughout the entire Korean War, U. S. military officers estimated today.

Latest reports direct from officers in Korea estimate the Communist losses at more than 75,000 men in the last 10 days.

The Defense Department announced today that American casualties since the war started have reached 62,799. This figure includes 9,603 killed, 42,246 wounded and 10,950 missing in action. The total of 62,799 announced today was an increase of 1,055 in a week.

High Temperatures, Rain Help Md. Crops

COLLEGE PARK, M., May 2 (AP) High temperatures and warm rains were just what Maryland's farm crops needed last week.

The state's crop reporters said growing conditions were ideal. Fruit trees suffered only minor damage from frost, strawberries came into full bloom, and corn planting started.

The survey was made by the Weather Bureau, Agriculture Department Bureau of Economics and the University of Maryland Farm Extension Service.

Shah Signs Iran Oil Seizure Bill

TEHRAN, Iran, May 2 (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi signed the act seizing the giant British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company today even as British and American envoys sought to keep the doors open for further negotiations.

The Shah acted after British Ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd called on him, presumably to urge that he try to persuade the aging nationalist premier, Mohammed Mossadegh, to follow a moderate course in executing the law. The Shah has no veto and had no recourse but to sign the law.

Previously, Sir Francis talked for an hour with Mossadegh, He presented the premier a written memorandum protesting nationalization of the $500,000,000 company and urging further negotiations for a friendly settlement.

U. S. Ambassador Henry F. Grady also was with Mossadegh for an hour, seeking to probe the shadowy future of American assistance programs in strategic Iran.

The United States has tried to stay aloof from the bitter British-Iranian oil dispute except to advise against action which might upset the stability of Iran and the Middle East.

Veterinarian Convicted In Army Meat Plot

NEWARK, N. J., May 2 (AP)—Dr. John F. Jones, young Army veterinarian of Easton, Md., was found guilty today of conspiring to defraud the government in a $1,000,000 plot to supply low grade meat to the armed forces at top grade prices.

A federal jury returned the verdict to U. S. District Court Judge William F. Smith after deliberating two hours.

Jones, 26, who had been assigned as an Army veterinarian to pass on meats at Ben Grunstein & Sons, Hoboken meat packers, faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Three other defendants in the case pleaded guilty and Jones stood trial alone. They were the Ben Grunstein & Sons Co.; William Grunstein, plant manager and vice president of the firm, and Master Sgt. Samuel A. Auman, Fort Dix, former meat inspector in the Grunstein plant.

Repeal Of Beef Order Demanded

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee called today for quick repeal of the government's new price control order on beef, saying it will cause "a severe meat famine leading to early rationing."

The order, issued by the Office of Price Stabilization, calls for progressively reduced ceilings on live cattle starting later this month and for a reduction of nearly 10 cents a pound at retali by Oct. 1.

Already, the Senate committee said, tteo rder has resulted in producers' rushing cattle to market before they have reached their best marketable weights, thus causing "a loss of meat for consumers" in the future. Theo rder also spells severe losses to growers, the committee added in a resolution.

Inu the House, Rep. Hoeven (R-Ia) said the beef price rollback "may well result in a meat famine." Hoeven said reports from Northwest Iowa indicate a black market already is springing up.

Marine Turns Down Chance To Come Home

DALLAS, May 2 (AP) — A wounded Marine has written his mother here that he is turning down a chance to come home from Korea.

"Mom, I'm going back to Korea," wrote 21-year-old Cpl. Kenneth J. Pope of the First Marine Division.

The letter was written from a rest camp in Japan where Pope is recovering from wounds suffered Nov. 8 at Chosin Reservoir. His mother is Mrs. Betty Pope of Dallas. He wrote:

"I know that you will be worried and everything like that, but look at it like this, Mom—I'm fighting for the one thing that means the most to me.

"That is your safety and happiness. What if the United States just stopped and said 'I'm not going to fight anymore.' Can you imagine what it would be like?

"I want a free place in this world to live in, not a place where I would have to report everything I wanted to do."

McKeldin's Teacher Pay Stand Criticized

TOWSON, Md., May 2 (AP) — Gov. McKeldin was taken to task today by a member of the State Board of Education for leaving the problem of increased teachers salaries up to the counties.

A 1951 legislative act to boost the instructors' pay was recently vetoed by McKeldin. He said it was a matter for Baltimore City and the 23 counties, and not a state responsibility.

Today, Richard W. Case, a board member and tax specialist who was chairman of the State Tax Survey Commission, argued that the "schools should become more the responsibility of the state."

Case said that any increased teachers pay "should be made within the basic program and should, therefore, be state-wide in scope."

W. U. Asks Rate Hike

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—Western Union today asked a $14,000,000 a year boost in telegraph rates, with the increase earmarked for pay raises to employes.

Smoking In Bed Costs Man $50

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—It cost Paul Dignan $50 today to smoke in bed.

His cigaret set his mattress afire.

Firemen put out the blaze promptly.

Then police moved in.

They said it was the second fire in Dignan's bed in as many days. They charged him with causing a fire through negligence.

He forfeited a $50 bond.

Headsville Women's Club History Out

KEYSER, W. Va.—Mrs. R. E. Carskadon has prepared a history of the Headsville Farm Women's Club, which is one of the three oldest clubs in the country, for use on the program in observance of National Home Demonstration Week.

The local group was organized November 8, 1927 by Mrs. Jessie Lemley of the State Extension Division, who explained the purpose of the club. Three women were present at this meeting and they became, at the suggestion of Mrs. Lemley, the first officers. They were: Mrs. C. E. McDonald, president; Mrs. J. W. Carskadon, vice president; and Mrs. C. W. Fertig, secretary and treasurer. The meeting date was set for the second Saturday of each month.

House Votes To Double Strength Of Marines

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — A bill to double the fighting strength of the Marine Corps was approved today by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Over strong objections of the Defense Department, the committee recommended a permanent force of not less than four full-strength combat divisions and four air support wings. It fixed a ceiling of 400,000 men for the leathernecks.

The senators yielded to objections of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and did not include in the bill a provision for the Marine commandant to have an equal seat on the JCS with the Army, Navy and Air Force. But they proposed that the commandant be "a consultant" on the JCS.

Heiress Freed In Contempt Case

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Heiress Louise Branston Berman was freed of contempt of Congress charges today by a federal judge who ruled she did not have to tell whether she financed Communist activities.

It was the eleventh such acquittal in the district court here this year for witnesses who declined to answer congressional committee questions on the ground that it might tend to incriminate them.

Two witnesses accused of contempt for remaining silent before committees have been convicted but in their cases the court ruled that they did not properly invoke their immunity under the fifth amendment to the constitution.

Judge Burnita S. Matthews freed Mrs. Berman at the end of legal arguments. The judge heard the case without a jury.

Mrs. Berman appeared before a House Un-American Activities subcommittee Nov. 7, 1949, and refused to answer more than 40 questions. Only 26 of the refusals were made counts in the indictment.

Judge Matthews said the purpose of the questions asked Mrs. Berman was "to link her up with the Communist Party."

Some of the questions, the woman jurist commented, "may appear innocent on the face, but even innocent appearing questions must be considered in the light of the background."

The people Mrs. Berman was asked about, Judge Matthews said, "had connections with the Communist Party, or were believed to have connections with its aims and purposes."

Jonkel Charged With Violating Election Laws

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP) — The Baltimore grand jury today charged Jon. M. Jonkel with violating Maryland's Corrupt Practices Act in managing Sen. John M. Butler's successful election campaign last year.

Bail of $2,500 was posted by a professional bondsman for Jonkel, a Chicago public relations man, pending action of the Baltimore Criminal Court.

Jonkel served as campaign manager for the Republican senator in both the primary and general elections. Butler bested Millard E. Tydings, the veteran Democrat, in the November election.

Tydings complained to the Senate that Butler's forces violated the state election laws on spending and used smear tactics. Butler denied this.

A Senate subcommittee then conducted lengthy hearings in Washington, ending the taking of testimony three weeks ago today. State's Attorney Anslem Sodaro began examining the committee records before the hearings ended, and announced recently he had turned the evidence over to the grand jury.

Yesterday, the jury heard seven witnesses and adjourned without making a statement. All of the witnesses had been heard by the Senate group in Washington.

Miss Jean F. Kerr of Washington, research assistant in the office of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis), had been summoned by the jury but couldn't appear because of a leg injury.

Among other things, the jury charged Jonkel failed to keep "detailed, full and accurate accounts in a proper book" listing campaign expenditures and disbursements.

Secret Report

A letter from Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to the committee said five copies of the report were sent to MacArthur 12 days after the conference.

Bradley's letter added:

"To my knowledge, since that time we have received no information from Gen. MacArthur, or his headquarters, that would indicate any non-concurrence with the record of the conference."

Compiled From Notes

MacArthur was quoted in conversational form in the summary, which Bradley told the senators was compiled from notes during the return trip from Wake Island.

Bradley was one of those who attended the Wake Island meeting.

Bradley said all those who took part, including a stenographer, helped supply data that was combined for the report labelled "Substance of Statements Made at Wake Island Conference."

The summary said that at the opening of the conference Gen. MacArthur told President Truman and others:

"I believe that formal resistance will end throughout North and South Korea by Thanksgiving."

A little later MacArthur was quoted:

"It is my hope to be able to withdraw the Eighth Army to Japan by Christmas."

This was at a time when United Nations and U. S. forces were advancing into North Korea and before Chinese Communists entered the Korean fighting.

"The enemy has failed in the first phase of his offensive," said Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Allied ground commander in Korea.

"He has paid a heavy price. The first part of the battle has ended in a great victory for the United Nations."

However, Van Fleet cautioned: "He (the Reds) has the capability of hitting again as hard as before or harder. I am confident the results will be the same."

The lull on the battlefront moved into its fifth day Thursday. Five Allied tank patrols probed north of their lines on the western and west-central sectors. They met little or no resistance.

Nail Driven In Back

MOBILE, Ala., May 2 (AP) — An eight-penny nail fired by a mechanical nail driver was removed today from the back of a 54-year old woman.

City hospital attaches said the condition of Mrs. J. H. Waltmeyer was much improved.

The nail struck Mrs. Waltmeyer in the back as she walked by a building project where the new nail driver was being tested.

U. N. Aide Says MacArthur Plans To Be Active "For Years"

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur intends to be active "for many years to come" and to present his views firmly at as many public appearances as possible, his spokesman said today.

Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, the spokesman, said these appearances will come after the deposed Far East commander ends testimony at congressional hearings starting tomorrow on Far East policy.

Commenting on MacArthur's future intentions, Whitney told newsmen:

"I would say that after the hearings he will continue to take a very firm stand and will make as many public appearances as possible."

Asked whether this meant MacArthur was taking his case to the public, Whitney replied:

"No. He looks at it in the light that many persons want to hear his views and he feels that in the public interest he should respond accordingly as far as he can."

Concerning published reports that MacArthur informed confidants that he held Secretary of State Dean Acheson chiefly responsible for his removal, Whitney said:

"I am inclined to discount it completely. I never heard any such expression from Gen. MacArthur."

be brought to a vote without unanimous consent—unless it were offered in the first two hours of a "legislative day."

The two hours had long since passed. So the Republicans—with the aid of Sen. McCarran—forced a brief adjournment by a 43 to 41 vote so the Senate could then reconvene and start a new "legislative day."

But when the "new" day started, the Democrats began stalling for time. Sen. Neely took the floor to announce he had a long speech on tap about home rule for the city of Washington.

"Is this the beginning of a filibuster?" asked Sen. Capehart (R-Ind).

Neely denied a filibuter but he talked his way past the two-hour mark of the new day and thus put the GOP back where it started.

The West Virginian at one point lashed out with a bitter criticism of MacArthur.

"If the second coming of the Savior had occurred," he said, "there couldn't have been a more hysterical uprising (than the reception given to MacArthur on his homecoming)."

Neely declared he did not intend to "honor a man for showing his hatred and contempt of Harry Truman."

He shouted: "Republicans are trying to win the next election by parading him (MacArthur) over the country as a reward for his disobedience to the commander-in-chief.

"I am not going to participate in a Roman holiday for any man who has been in rebellion against the constitutional authority of the President."

Red Casualties In Drive Exceed Total For U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Chinese Reds and North Koreans have suffered more casualties in their current offensive than the United States has throughout the entire Korean War, U. S. military officers estimated today.

Latest reports direct from officers in Korea estimate the Communist losses at more than 75,000 men in the last 10 days.

The Defense Department announced today that American casualties since the war started have reached 62,799. This figure includes 9,603 killed, 42,246 wounded and 10,950 missing in action. The total of 62,799 announced today was an increase of 1,055 in a week.

High Temperatures, Rain Help Md. Crops

COLLEGE PARK, M., May 2 (AP) High temperatures and warm rains were just what Maryland's farm crops needed last week.

The state's crop reporters said growing conditions were ideal. Fruit trees suffered only minor damage from frost, strawberries came into full bloom, and corn planting started.

The survey was made by the Weather Bureau, Agriculture Department Bureau of Economics and the University of Maryland Farm Extension Service.

Shah Signs Iran Oil Seizure Bill

TEHRAN, Iran, May 2 (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi signed the act seizing the giant British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company today even as British and American envoys sought to keep the doors open for further negotiations.

The Shah acted after British Ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd called on him, presumably to urge that he try to persuade the aging nationalist premier, Mohammed Mossadegh, to follow a moderate course in executing the law. The Shah has no veto and had no recourse but to sign the law.

Previously, Sir Francis talked for an hour with Mossadegh. He presented the premier a written memorandum protesting nationalization of the $500,000,000 company and urging further negotiations for a friendly settlement.

U. S. Ambassador Henry F. Grady also was with Mossadegh for an hour, seeking to probe the shadowy future of American assistance programs in strategic Iran.

The United States has tried to stay aloof from the bitter British-Iranian oil dispute except to advise against action which might upset the stability of Iran and the Middle East.

Veterinarian Convicted In Army Meat Plot

NEWARK, N. J., May 2 (AP)—Dr. John F. Jones, young Army veterinarian of Easton, Md., was found guilty today of conspiring to defraud the government in a $1,000,000 plot to supply low grade meat to the armed forces at top grade prices.

A federal jury returned the verdict to U. S. District Court Judge William F. Smith after deliberating two hours.

Jones, 26, who had been assigned as an Army veterinarian to pass on meats at Ben Grunstein & Sons, Hoboken meat packers, faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Three other defendants in the case pleaded guilty and Jones stood trial alone. They were the Ben Grunstein & Sons Co.; William Grunstein, plant manager and vice president of the firm, and Master Sgt. Samuel A. Auman, Fort Dix, former meat inspector in the Grunstein plant.

Repeal Of Beef Order Demanded

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee called today for quick repeal of the government's new price control order on beef, saying it will cause "a severe meat famine leading to early rationing."

The order, issued by the Office of Price Stabilization, calls for progressively reduced ceilings on live cattle starting later this month and for a reduction of nearly 10 cents a pound at retali by Oct. 1.

Already, the Senate committee said, tteo rder has resulted in producers' rushing cattle to market before they have reached their best marketable weights, thus causing "a loss of meat for consumers" in the future. Theo rder also spells severe losses to growers, the committee added in a resolution.

Inu the House, Rep. Hoeven (R-Ia) said the beef price rollback "may well result in a meat famine." Hoeven said reports from Northwest Iowa indicate a black market already is springing up.

Marine Turns Down Chance To Come Home

DALLAS, May 2 (AP) — A wounded Marine has written his mother here that he is turning down a chance to come home from Korea.

"Mom, I'm going back to Korea," wrote 21-year-old Cpl. Kenneth J. Pope of the First Marine Division.

The letter was written from a rest camp in Japan where Pope is recovering from wounds suffered Nov. 8 at Chosin Reservoir. His mother is Mrs. Betty Pope of Dallas. He wrote:

"I know that you will be worried and everything like that, but look at it like this, Mom—I'm fighting for the one thing that means the most to me.

"That is your safety and happiness. What if the United States just stopped and said 'I'm not going to fight anymore.' Can you imagine what it would be like?

"I want a free place in this world to live in, not a place where I would have to report everything I wanted to do."

McKeldin's Teacher Pay Stand Criticized

TOWSON, Md., May 2 (AP) — Gov. McKeldin was taken to task today by a member of the State Board of Education for leaving the problem of increased teachers salaries up to the counties.

A 1951 legislative act to boost the instructors' pay was recently vetoed by McKeldin. He said it was a matter for Baltimore City and the 23 counties, and not a state responsibility.

Today, Richard W. Case, a board member and tax specialist who was chairman of the State Tax Survey Commission, argued that the "schools should become more the responsibility of the state."

Case said that any increased teachers pay "should be made within the basic program and should, therefore, be state-wide in scope."

Three women were present at this meeting and they became, at the suggestion of Mrs. Lemley, the first officers. They were: Mrs. C. E. McDonald, president; Mrs. J. W. Carskadon, vice president; and Mrs. C. W. Fertig, secretary and treasurer. The meeting date was set for the second Saturday of each month.

W. Donald Smith is acting as chairman coordinator in this section for Warren Mullenax, Cumberland Municipal Airport operator, who is out-of-town.

Smith urged that all plane owners and flyers in this section attend a planning meeting for the exercise Sunday tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Potomac Motor Company garage, corner of George and Harrison Streets.

The Cumberland flight is scheduled to be the first to arrive at Friendship Airport between 11 a. m and 11:15 a. m. Sunday.

Seven other flights landing at 15-minute intervals, will complete the landing schedule at 1 p. m. The exercise is to determine the number of private planes that can land in an emergency at the Baltimore field and to find out the total plane load capacity for evacuation purposes in the event of an A-bomb raid in Baltimore and Washington.

All aircraft will carry maximum load of persons or simulated bulk cargo. The cargo should be in the form of empty paper cartons that best conform to the storage area in the ship.

When parked at the Baltimore field, the cargo is to be unloaded by the pilot and his crew and placed in front of the airplane for pickup by a truck.

A registration headquarters will be set up in front of the new administration building.

Recognition will be given to the unit having the largest number of aircraft participating and to the flight having the best organization.

Firm Reportedly Given Contract

A news service report from New York yesterday listed the Livington Machine and Tool Company, Frostburg, as receiving a government contract for the production of cylindrical adapters for the Department of Defense.

Chalmers Livingston, president of the firm, said he had "no comment."

Announcement of the contract was made by the Department of Commerce which released a synopsis of bids accepted in the period of a week, the report said. The Frostburg company's contract was issued through the Bureau of Ordnance, Washington, D. C.

Information as to the number of units to be supplied and the money value were withheld, the press service said. All the contracts are listed at "over $25,000," it continued.

The Livingston firm was recently awarded a prime contract for the fabrication of aluminum by the Bureau of Ordnance of the Navy Department. The contract was for $51,700 and at that time, it was announced other contracts were expected to swell the total to over $100,000 of prime work.

Telephone Company Makes Plans For Civil Defense Emergency

Working on the theory that the telephone is the nation's first line of defense, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company has taken conclusive steps to protect this city's communication system in event of a bombing raid.

The program is part of a state and national defense plan instituted by Bell System affiliates as a means to prevent the breakdown of communications if enemy bombers strike at America's shores.

Harry Patton, central office foreman is the C. and P. civil defense officer and has as an executive board Richard E. Harman, office manager; R. C. Lord, plant wire chief; and Richard Dayton.

Hagerstown Control Center

Hagerstown will probably be the control center for Western Maryland and issue the first warning of an attack.

When that warning occurs here is what will happen:

The company has installed a claxon-bell-light warning system in 13 different sections of the plant. When this alarm is sounded, employes will be routed to various sections of the building where shelters are available for their own protection.

Switchboards will be manned at all times during an attack by volunteer crews. If the attack is intense, protection is afforded those operators by the switchboards.

All employes of the local company have been given air raid instructions and Lord said practice drills will begin soon.

Crews Listed

Heading the first aid crew is Ann Buzzard who is also a qualified instructor. Elmer Hite and Carl Weakley are stretcher-bearers; Wanda True and Mary Luhrman, the first aid crew with Joseph Reed, Robert Shiply and Dorothy Scott as alternates.

The rescue crew (also trained to protect public utilities against fire) is composed of Sidney Storer, as leader, James Matt, George Williams and Ernest Williams.

The decontamination squad consists of Russell Pancake and Paul Bixler. All are trained in first aid.

Employes who receive First Aid cards from the American Red Cross are given advanced training courses every five years thereafter. Company officials consider the training to be of first importance to participation in civil defense activities Harman added.

Guard Key Centers

Throughout the Bell System arrangements for thorough guardng of important key centers have been made and entrance regulations for visitors tightened.

Included in the planning to restore telephone service in case of disaster is the provision of adequate emergency power plants for central office to be used in event of power failure of outside facilities. The company's radio equipment, including portable trailers, and fixed stations have been worked into the restoral and emergency service plans. Arrangements have been made for traffic control and trunk assignment groups to reroute local and long-distance calls where necessary.

Area Man Gets Suspended Sentence In Manslaughter

Samuel B. Lyons, 44, of Paw Paw, W. Va., convicted April 18 by a Circuit Court jury on a charge of manslaughter by automobile was given a three-months suspended sentence in the House of Correction.

Lyons was indicted and tried for the death of Asa Stuckey Sams, 67, Justice of the Peace of Mann's Choice Pa., in an auto accident October 15 on Route 51 near Oldtown.

Lyons, according to Judge Henderson's sentence, must pay Mrs. Sams $150 this year and $200 in each of the following two years towards the funeral expenses of Mr. Sams.

The accident occurred on a straight stretch of road when the pickup truck operated by Lyons collided nearly headon with the 1949 sedan driven by Edgar J. Burkett, postmaster of Mann's Choice.

Sams was sitting in the right hand side of the Burkett car and died of a pulmonary hemorrhage caused by a crushed chest.

The jury found Lyons guilty after an all-day trial in Circuit Court and Judge Henderson reserved sentencing to further study the case.

At that time, the jurist commented that it was fortunate that no liquor was involved in the crash.

Yesterday he pointed out that Lyons is unemployed. His wife remains crippled as a result of the wreck. Lyons was represented by Harold E. Naughton.

There are about 300 feet of average-size spaghetti in one pound.

Large Field Is Set For Derby Saturday

20 Or More Horses Set For Big Test

Run For Roses May Produce Richest Prize In History

LOUISVILLE, May 2 (AP) — A thorough search of the stable area at Churchill Downs today failed to cover a trainer who doesn't intend to start his horse in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, and who doesn't furthermore, think he can win the big race.

The oldest oldetimer around the Downs cannot recall quite a parallel case, where nobody is much scared of anybody else in the field and where any one of a dozen colts is considered capable of dragging down first prize.

The victory of Calumet Farm's Fanfare in yesterday's Derby Trial didn't frighten anyone away. It still looks as though 20 runners will be jammed into the starting gate, for sure, when they pull the string, and there might be a couple or three more.

As the regular starting gate at the Downs will accommodate only 20 horses, the management put in a hurry call to Chicago and had an extra section of six stalls shipped down today, just in case. If 22 go it will match the record Derby field of 1928, the year Reigh Count won.

The winner almost certainly will pocket the biggest purse in Derby history. If 19 start the payoff will be a cool $97,050, which probably explains the reluctance of the trainers and owners to scratch any animal which has four sound legs. The present record is the $96,500 won by Assault in 1946, when 17 ran.

When asked what horse they believed they would have to beat in the mile and a quarter Derby, a majority of trainers nominated either the Greentree entry of Big Stretch and Hall Of Fame or the C. V. Whitney pair, Counterpoint and Mameluke. In their opinions, the two entries probably will go off at about equal favorites on Saturday, with Battle Morn, Fanfare and Repetoire close behind on the odds board.

Louis Decisions Agramonte Again

DETROIT, May 2 (AP) — Joe Louis won a unanimous 10-round decision over lanky Omelio Agramonte of Cuba tonight. It was the fifth win in Joe's comeback drive.

The Brown Bomber switched from his traditional shuffle, and bored in on Agramonte to floor the dark Cuban for a count of nine in the second round. It was the first time Joe had knocked down a foe in his comeback.

However, Louis, holding nearly a 20 pound edge over Agramonte, couldn't finish him off. In the ninth Louis battered Agramonte and left him dazed. But Joe couldn't land the one punch needed.

The 36-year-old Louis, who ruled the heavyweight world from 1937 to 1949, hopes to tackle Lee Savold next and then battle champion Ezzard Charles in September.

Terps Win, 12-3

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 2 (AP) — Maryland took over first place from Richmond in the Southern Conference's northern baseball division today by defeating the Spiders, 12 to 3.

Indians Win; Lemon Hurt

League Leaders Top Bosox 4-3

CLEVELAND, May 2 (INS) — Lou Boudreau walloped a three-run homer but his former teammates, the Cleveland Indians, still beat the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3, today.

The victory may have been a costly one for Cleveland, however, since pitcher Bob Lemon pulled a back muscle while batting. Lemon hurt himself in the second inning but continued pitching through the fifth.

He was hurling three-hit shutout ball when Lou Brissie relieved him.

TIGER RALLY WINS

DETROIT, May 2 (INS) — Four tenth inning singles, the last one by Johnny Groth, enabled the Detroit Tigers to come from behind today to defeat the Philadelphia Athleics, 5 to 4.

The Athletics tied the score at 3 to 3 in the ninth inning on pinchhitter Lou Limmer's two-run homer. The A's then went ahead in the tenth when Elmer Valo tripled a run home.

But the Tigers came back to score two runs and win the game on singles by George Kell, Vic Wertz, Pat Mullin and Groth.

Large Field Is Set For Derby Saturday

20 Or More Horses Set For Big Test

Run For Roses May Produce Richest Prize In History

LOUISVILLE, May 2 (AP) — A thorough search of the stable area at Churchill Downs today failed to cover a trainer who doesn't intend to start his horse in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, and who doesn't furthermore, think he can win the big race.

The oldest oldetimer around the Downs cannot recall quite a parallel case, where nobody is much scared of anybody else in the field and where any one of a dozen colts is considered capable of dragging down first prize.

The victory of Calumet Farm's Fanfare in yesterday's Derby Trial didn't frighten anyone away. It still looks as though 20 runners will be jammed into the starting gate, for sure, when they pull the string, and there might be a couple or three more.

As the regular starting gate at the Downs will accommodate only 20 horses, the management put in a hurry call to Chicago and had an extra section of six stalls shipped down today, just in case. If 22 go it will match the record Derby field of 1928, the year Reigh Count won.

The winner almost certainly will pocket the biggest purse in Derby history. If 19 start the payoff will be a cool $97,050, which probably explains the reluctance of the trainers and owners to scratch any animal which has four sound legs. The present record is the $96,500 won by Assault in 1946, when 17 ran.

When asked what horse they believed they would have to beat in the mile and a quarter Derby, a majority of trainers nominated either the Greentree entry of Big Stretch and Hall Of Fame or the C. V. Whitney pair, Counterpoint and Mameluke. In their opinions, the two entries probably will go off at about equal favorites on Saturday, with Battle Morn, Fanfare and Repetoire close behind on the odds board.

Louis Decisions Agramonte Again

DETROIT, May 2 (AP) — Joe Louis won a unanimous 10-round decision over lanky Omelio Agramonte of Cuba tonight. It was the fifth win in Joe's comeback drive.

The Brown Bomber switched from his traditional shuffle, and bored in on Agramonte to floor the dark Cuban for a count of nine in the second round. It was the first time Joe had knocked down a foe in his comeback.

However, Louis, holding nearly a 20 pound edge over Agramonte, couldn't finish him off. In the ninth Louis battered Agramonte and left him dazed. But Joe couldn't land the one punch needed.

The 36-year-old Louis, who ruled the heavyweight world from 1937 to 1949, hopes to tackle Lee Savold next and then battle champion Ezzard Charles in September.

Work will be commenced on the outdoor physical plans of the Y. M. C. A. next week. The Lynn property on the river has been obtained and it will be put in shape for tennis, athletics, hand ball, baseball and swimming. The equipment will be a float, equipped with a good spring board and a diving tower just below the intake, a tennis court, spaces for the various athletic events and hand ball courts. As much of this will be provided as possible. The gymnasium has been equipped with a hand ball court and already the game has met with favor.

The members of the junior department of the Y. M. C. A. will meet on the athletic field on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings instead of in the gymnasium for base ball practice.

1—Did an imported horse ever win the Kentucky Derby?

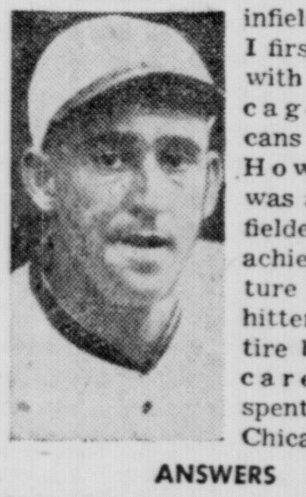
HOOHEE?



I WAS an infielder when I first broke in with the Chicago Americans in 1918. However, it was as an outfielder that I achieved stature as a 300 hitter. My entire big league career was spent with the Chicago club.

ANSWERS

(Hoohee: John Anthony Mostil)
1—Once—Omar Khayyam, winner in 1917.
2—Third round.
3—Not for L. A. As a Cleveland team the Rams won in 1945.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Blanche Lloyd Shergy vs. Kader Shergy. No. 22151 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree divorcing the Plaintiff from the Defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The Bill of Complaint states that on the 6th day of October, 1946, the parties were married in Frostburg, Maryland, and that they lived together as husband and wife until on or about January 20, 1949, when the Defendant abandoned and deserted the Plaintiff and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly from that time down to the present time, and that said abandonment is for at least twenty-seven (27) months, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation.

That no children were born of said marriage.

Blanche Lloyd Shergy vs. Kader Shergy. No. 22151 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree divorcing the Plaintiff from the Defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The Bill of Complaint states that on the 6th day of October, 1946, the parties were married in Frostburg, Maryland, and that they lived together as husband and wife until on or about January 20, 1949, when the Defendant abandoned and deserted the Plaintiff and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly from that time down to the present time, and that said abandonment is for at least twenty-seven (27) months, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation.

That no children were born of said marriage.

"Today smart motorists are taking better care of their cars... it's just plain common sense! That's why you should let your Esso Dealer give your car that important lubrication job NOW!"

"That car you're driving is worth a lot in cold cash — and repairs and replacements can cost plenty too, these days.

"That's why a good service job this Spring is so important — and why it's a better bargain than ever before. It costs so little to help protect so much... to ready your car for this Summer's Happy Motoring.

"See your nearby Esso Dealer for an oil change and lubrication job... and a complete check-up of parts that might give you trouble this Summer. Whether your car is old or new, it's mighty good business to PREPARE now rather than REPAIR later!"

Remember, Esso Dealer Care Saves Wear!

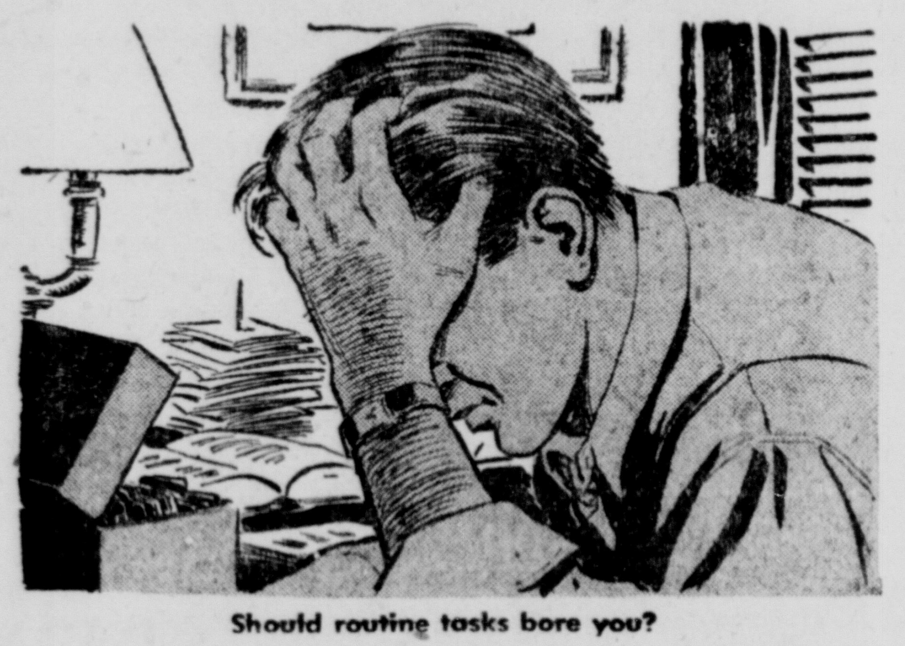
Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist



Should routine tasks bore you?

Answer: That will depend largely on how much you resent having to do them—boredom is about nine-tenth repressed rage. I once knew a rather brilliant man who made his living at what I regard as one of the most boring of all jobs—proofreading. "I like it," he told me, "because I can do it with two cells of my brain and leave the rest free to think with." If you can keep your mind and imagination active and train yourself to do chores like shaving or dishwashing automatically, you can entertain yourself well enough while doing them so that they will not bore you too badly.

65TH VICE PRES.

May prestige mean more than money?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of neurotic who seems to love money for its own sake, though even for him it really is a symbol of security or power. But the average human being years above all for the recognition and approval of his neighbors. If he has grown up feeling that money will bring him the prestige he craves, he will attempt to make as much of it as he can, but if prestige has a different meaning for him, he will be content to be successful as a scientist, a teacher or a poet, even though he knows that he will never get rich that way.

Does curing neurotic symptoms change the patient?

Answer: No, says Dr. F. E. Haldane in Lancet. A neurotic's symptoms are of small importance compared with the "underlying disorder," which is an abnormality of character and personality that "makes him unable to adjust himself to his situation in life." Because character is largely formed in childhood and is "resistive to change" in adult life, a few interviews with a psychiatrist will not have much effect on it, even though they may make you more comfortable for the time being. Real emotional re-education takes about as much time, effort and money as a college degree.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Should routing tasks bore you?

Answer: That will depend largely on how much you resent having to do them—boredom is about nine-tenth repressed rage. I once knew a rather brilliant man who made his living at what I regard as one of the most boring of all jobs—proofreading. "I like it," he told me, "because I can do it with two cells of my brain and leave the rest free to think with." If you can keep your mind and imagination active and train yourself to do chores like shaving or dishwashing automatically, you can entertain yourself well enough while doing them so that they will not bore you too badly.

65TH VICE PRES.

May prestige mean more than money?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of neurotic who seems to love money for its own sake, though even for him it really is a symbol of security or power. But the average human being years above all for the recognition and approval of his neighbors. If he has grown up feeling that money will bring him the prestige he craves, he will attempt to make as much of it as he can, but if prestige has a different meaning for him, he will be content to be successful as a scientist, a teacher or a poet, even though he knows that he will never get rich that way.

Does curing neurotic symptoms change the patient?

Answer: No, says Dr. F. E. Haldane in Lancet. A neurotic's symptoms are of small importance compared with the "underlying disorder," which is an abnormality of character and personality that "makes him unable to adjust himself to his situation in life." Because character is largely formed in childhood and is "resistive to change" in adult life, a few interviews with a psychiatrist will not have much effect on it, even though they may make you more comfortable for the time being. Real emotional re-education takes about as much time, effort and money as a college degree.

The FFA boys have been busy the past several weeks planting pine and spruce trees on the hillside shown in the background and around the school property as part of a long-range soil conservation project. Flintstone FFA Boys Save Soil By Planting Trees On Hillside

Members of the Future Farmers of America Club at Flintstone High School are busy on a soil conservation project that is believed to be the only one of its kind in Western Maryland.

The project is a cooperative arrangement involving the FFA Club, Miss Lena Twigg of Flintstone and Soil Conservationist Martin Gordon.

Evolved Last Year

Plans for the program were evolved last year when Miss Twigg had the desire to have pine trees planted on a 25-acre hillside which she owns but had no laborers available to do the work.

Gordon made arrangements to get 2,500 young red pine trees through the United States Soil Conservation Service. In cooperation with Mrs. Elsie Hill Roland, principal of Flintstone High School, Robert E. L. Ross, vocational agriculture teacher and adviser of the FFA Club, arranged to get the FFA boys to do the tree planting. That was the first part of the agreement.

The past several weeks the FFA boys have been fulfilling the second phase of the project. They have been replacing Miss Twigg's red pines which have died since last year. Then, they also have been planting some 2,500 Scotch pine and spruce trees on the eroded hillside which belongs to Miss Twigg.

Belong To FFA

The Scotch pine and spruce trees belong to the Flintstone FFA. In eight or 10 years, boys who then are members of the Flintstone FFA will be able to sell many of the trees off the land for the Christmas season trade.

Obviously, then, everyone concerned benefits. Gordon is happy to have the trees planted to conserve the soil of that section of Allegany County. Miss Twigg is glad to save the soil on her land through the tree planting. The FFA boys are pleased because it serves as insurance of funds to operate the FFA program in future years.

The hillside where the planting has occurred is on the north side of Route 40, just across the highway from the school. Miss Twigg lives in the old Flintstone Hotel property nearby.

Ross' FFA boys also have been busy in recent weeks planting rosebushes and trees around the school property. Rose bushes also have been planted around the edges of Miss Twigg's property.

Garrett County Blast Being Probed By FBI

A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent is probing the blast that damaged Preston Railroad tracks near Hutton in Garrett county on April 24.

Sheriff Paul W. Fisher, of Garrett county, also reported that the check is being continued but no arrests have been made.

The damage was discovered last Wednesday afternoon when a train of loaded coal cars was being taken from Crellin to Hutton. Only one train a day is operated over the road. It completes its trip at 4:30 p. m.

Sheriff Fisher said the blast caused a hole about three feet deep and 10 feet in diameter, mangling 35 feet of tracks. He estimated the charge contained 20 to 25 sticks of dynamite.

Repairs have been made and the railroad is operating. Damage amounted to several hundred dollars.

KEEPING UP WITH
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2 (INS)—Redhaired Susan Hayward has had to give up her plans to go to Europe, all on account of Darryl Zanuck wants her for "I'll See You In My Dreams," the Jane Froman story.

Susan Hayward

Yes, I know Jeanne Crain was supposed to play the singing Froman gal, but there is another plan cooking for Jeanne.

As I told you, Jane's own voice will be heard while Susie does the emoting, just as Al Jolson's own voice was heard in "The Jolson Story."

You'll see David Wayne as Don Ross, the first husband of the singer, while husky Dale Robertson plays John Burn, an officer on the Lisbon clipper which crashed in 1944 seriously injuring Miss Froman. Burn and Miss Froman are now married as the culmination of a romance born of this tragedy.

This comes straight. All that talk about Warner Brothers Studio being sold is not true.

What happened is that according to the bill of divorcement, Warner brothers have to sell their theaters not later than 1953. Jack was in New York to consider some of the offers with his brothers, Harry and Albert.

So far there is no sale because Warners haven't received the price they want, although there naturally are some takers.

It was difficult for me ever to believe that Warners were going to sell out their studio for television, or sell it, period—still you can never tell.

I have just had a letter saying that Judy Garland will remain on the continent for three concerts—one in Paris, one in Cannes, and one in Monte Carlo.

The season opens in Monte Carlo and Cannes in July. Usually the ballet is at Monte Carlo and the galas are festive and bring all the people in Southern France to these gay events.

It would be a great thing for Judy. I am told she is getting more and more confidence.

Listen to this: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the first American to apply to the five-hundred-year-old College of Arms in London for a knight's coat of arms.

According to the London Sunday Express, Douglas made history with the application. Two years ago he was made a honorary knight commander of the British Empire in recognition of his work for Anglo-American amity.

Although he is not giving up his American citizenship and denies it whenever questioned, Doug has applied for a grant of arms, as they say in jolly old London. According to the London paper, Douglas claims the family arms, inherited from his ancestors.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Mrs. Clark Gable's ex, Lord Stanley of Alderley, was married last month to 24-year-old Mlle. Therese Husson, daughter of a French admiral. The bridegroom is 43.

Sandra Curtis, third wife of Alan Curtis, and now an ex herself, is reported wearing a huge diamond ring and about to marry a millionaire. Alan's current bride, Betty Dodero, lost a million dollars by divorcing Albert Dodero, who was much loved.

Rita Hayworth is being advised to get her divorce from Prince Aly Khan, or her separate maintenance, right in Los Angeles. She owned property up to a few months ago and has the legal right to do so. Since she has no plans to marry, her friends believe this would be the wisest thing.

Are Shelley Winters and Farley Granger planning to marry in New York? And, just off the record, that ring was an engagement ring.

Betty Hutton held open house in her new plush dressing room, and, believe me, it's really something. All the Paramounters on the lot were invited, and Betty made them take off their shoes at the door before they stepped on the velvet carpets.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

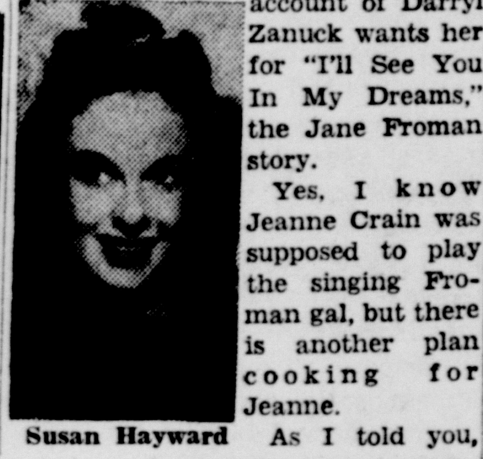
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2 (INS)—Redhaired Susan Hayward has had to give up her plans to go to Europe, all on account of Darryl Zanuck wants her for "I'll See You In My Dreams," the Jane Froman story.



Susan Hayward

Yes, I know Jeanne Crain was supposed to play the singing Froman gal, but there is another plan cooking for Jeanne.

As I told you, Jane's own voice will be heard while Susie does the emoting, just as Al Jolson's own voice was heard in "The Jolson Story."

You'll see David Wayne as Don Ross, the first husband of the singer, while husky Dale Robertson plays John Burn, an officer on the Lisbon clipper which crashed in 1944 seriously injuring Miss Froman. Burn and Miss Froman are now married as the culmination of a romance born of this tragedy.

This comes straight. All that talk about Warner Brothers Studio being sold is not true.

What happened is that according to the bill of divorcement, Warner brothers have to sell their theaters not later than 1953. Jack was in New York to consider some of the offers with his brothers, Harry and Albert.

So far there is no sale because Warners haven't received the price they want, although there naturally are some takers.

It was difficult for me ever to believe that Warners were going to sell out their studio for television, or sell it, period—still you can never tell.

I have just had a letter saying that Judy Garland will remain on the continent for three concerts—one in Paris, one in Cannes, and one in Monte Carlo.

The season opens in Monte Carlo and Cannes in July. Usually the ballet is at Monte Carlo and the galas are festive and bring all the people in Southern France to these gay events.

It would be a great thing for Judy. I am told she is getting more and more confidence.

Listen to this: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the first American to apply to the five-hundred-year-old College of Arms in London for a knight's coat of arms.

According to the London Sunday Express, Douglas made history with the application. Two years ago he was made a honorary knight commander of the British Empire in recognition of his work for Anglo-American amity.

Although he is not giving up his American citizenship and denies it whenever questioned, Doug has applied for a grant of arms, as they say in jolly old London. According to the London paper, Douglas claims the family arms, inherited from his ancestors.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Mrs. Clark Gable's ex, Lord Stanley of Alderley, was married last month to 24-year-old Mlle. Therese Husson, daughter of a French admiral. The bridegroom is 43.

Sandra Curtis, third wife of Alan Curtis, and now an ex herself, is reported wearing a huge diamond ring and about to marry a millionaire. Alan's current bride, Betty Dodero, lost a million dollars by divorcing Albert Dodero, who was much loved.

Rita Hayworth is being advised to get her divorce from Prince Aly Khan, or her separate maintenance, right in Los Angeles. She owned property up to a few months ago and has the legal right to do so. Since she has no plans to marry, her friends believe this would be the wisest thing.

Are Shelley Winters and Farley Granger planning to marry in New York? And, just off the record, that ring was an engagement ring.

Betty Hutton held open house in her new plush dressing room, and, believe me, it's really something. All the Paramounters on the lot were invited, and Betty made them take off their shoes at the door before they stepped on the velvet carpets.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

A Column for Men

STAG LINES

By BERT BACHARACH

Three-in-One

Straight Tie, Square End

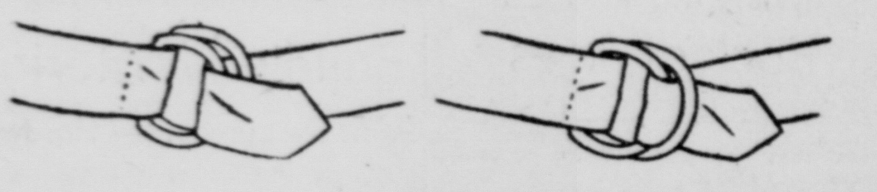
FASHION: TV star Jan Murray's outfit (right) highlights three fashion features—the straight tie with square end; the neat monogram embroidered on the shirt; and the rolled widespread collar.

Care of Clothes: Two moths can produce 625 million descendants in a year! One moth can eat 90 pounds of wool in that time. So mothproof woolens, or send them to storage for the summer. . . . If caught in rainstorm, "finger-press" the cuffs of your trousers before hanging away.

Handyman: Use your wife's nail polish to paint ruler marks on one blade of her scissors—makes a handy gadget. . . . Are you troubled with top-heavy vases around the house? Weight them down with some clean sand.

Gadgets: Shower-Aid, a long plastic tube that hangs on the shower rod. Holds soap, shampoo, brushes, etc. . . . Thermo-Pak for the lunch or picnic box. It will keep your lunch hot or cold—whichever you prefer.

Belt and Buckle: Many men still find the two-ring buckles, now popular on sport belts, a bit of a mystery. The procedure for slip-proof buckling is easy, simply pull free end through both rings, over top ring, under lower one, and pull taut.



Dress Tips: If your closet is crowded, see that fronts of suits are straight and smooth when put away. Saves pressing bills. . . . See that metal parts of wooden clothes hangers are clean and not rusted before using them for light-colored summer clothes.

A Word to Men

Odd Items: Singer Rosalind Courtright (left) says "There's one thing that men everywhere can learn from California. You can be colorful and still be well-dressed in sport clothes." . . . AAL says, "A clean airplane picks up six m.p.h. in speed to one that's dirty." ' The same principle applies to dirty golf balls—so keep 'em scrubbed. . . . If you're a hair wetter, let your brush dry by setting it with bristles down. . . . In three recent pictures, Kirk Douglas died before the fade-out. Shelley Winters tops that record by one. . . . This week's "Pass the Cigars" to—Fred Astaire who, at an age when most men are beginning to take things easy, is dancing better than ever.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Column for Men

STAG LINES

By BERT BACHARACH

Three-in-One

Straight Tie, Square End

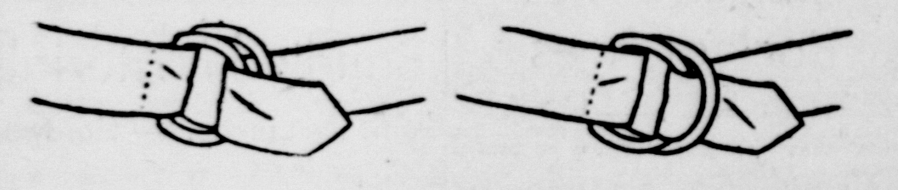
FASHION: TV star Jan Murray's outfit (right) highlights three fashion features—the straight tie with square end; the neat monogram embroidered on the shirt; and the rolled widespread collar.

Care of Clothes: Two moths can produce 625 million descendants in a year! One moth can eat 90 pounds of wool in that time. So mothproof woolens, or send them to storage for the summer. . . . If caught in rainstorm, "finger-press" the cuffs of your trousers before hanging away.

Handyman: Use your wife's nail polish to paint ruler marks on one blade of her scissors—makes a handy gadget. . . . Are you troubled with top-heavy vases around the house? Weight them down with some clean sand.

Gadgets: Shower-Aid, a long plastic tube that hangs on the shower rod. Holds soap, shampoo, brushes, etc. . . . Thermo-Pak for the lunch or picnic box. It will keep your lunch hot or cold—whichever you prefer.

Belt and Buckle: Many men still find the two-ring buckles, now popular on sport belts, a bit of a mystery. The procedure for slip-proof buckling is easy, simply pull free end through both rings, over top ring, under lower one, and pull taut.



Dress Tips: If your closet is crowded, see that fronts of suits are straight and smooth when put away. Saves pressing bills. . . . See that metal parts of wooden clothes hangers are clean and not rusted before using them for light-colored summer clothes.

A Word to Men

Odd Items: Singer Rosalind Courtright (left) says "There's one thing that men everywhere can learn from California. You can be colorful and still be well-dressed in sport clothes." . . . AAL says, "A clean airplane picks up six m.p.h. in speed to one that's dirty." ' The same principle applies to dirty golf balls—so keep 'em scrubbed. . . . If you're a hair wetter, let your brush dry by setting it with bristles down. . . . In three recent pictures, Kirk Douglas died before the fade-out. Shelley Winters tops that record by one. . . . This week's "Pass the Cigars" to—Fred Astaire who, at an age when most men are beginning to take things easy, is dancing better than ever.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

N A Z   A G C A Z Q   E   T E M   R N E M X R,   N A Z
T Y Q Z   N A Z   L Y Q X   "H J V C E Q"   S Z O Y T Z R
J M G M N Z V V G C G S V Z   N Y   A G T — Q J R B G M.

Demand For Rails Braces Otherwise Ragged Market

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—A sustained demand for railroad issues today braced up an other wise ragged stock market.

Action of the rails was much better than any other major group, and gains among the leaders went beyond $2 a share.

Elsewhere in the list the plus signs in some instances hit the $3 mark, but there also were minus signs as large as $2 in prominent stocks.

Lockheed Aircraft was the day's most active issue closing up 1¼ at 40⅞.

Lockheed was stimulated by three things—1. an announcement early yesterday of new jet trainer orders, 2. A proposal by directors for a two-for-one split, 3. the report at the annual meeting that first quarter sales were up 10 per cent from a year ago and the prediction that 1951 will be a very satisfactory year.

Pharmaceuticals flared up at one time with Parke-Davis in the lead. It closed up 3 at 56½. The company reported all-time high first quarter earnings amounting to $1.22 a share as against 89 cents a year ago.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 30 cents to $96.60 with the industrials unchanged, rails up 70 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Volume of trading expanded to 1,900,000 shares as compared with yesterday's 1,760,000 shares.

There were 1,162 individual issues traded of which 519 advanced and 379 declined. New highs came to 71 with 24 new lows.

Position Of Treasury

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The position of the Treasury April 30:

Net budget receipts, $76,247,860.87; budget expenditures, $469,860,705.29; cash balance, $6,955,474,722.00; customs receipts for month, $63,810,572.74; budget receipts fiscal year July 1, $37,907,666,819.35; budget expenditures fiscal year, $34,146,952,779.74; budget surplus $3,760,714,039.61; total debt, $254,747,776,350.91; increase over previous day, $60,243,$39.09; gold assets, $21,804,843,466.-

Demand For Rails Braces Otherwise Ragged Market

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—A sustained demand for railroad issues today braced up an other wise ragged stock market.

Action of the rails was much better than any other major group, and gains among the leaders went beyond $2 a share.

Elsewhere in the list the plus signs in some instances hit the $3 mark, but there also were minus signs as large as $2 in prominent stocks.

Lockheed Aircraft was the day's most active issue closing up 1¼ at 40⅞.

Lockheed was stimulated by three things—1. an announcement early yesterday of new jet trainer orders, 2. A proposal by directors for a two-for-one split, 3. the report at the annual meeting that first quarter sales were up 10 per cent from a year ago and the prediction that 1951 will be a very satisfactory year.

Pharmaceuticals flared up at one time with Parke-Davis in the lead. It closed up 3 at 56½. The company reported all-time high first quarter earnings amounting to $1.22 a share as against 89 cents a year ago.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 30 cents to $96.60 with the industrials unchanged, rails up 70 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Volume of trading expanded to 1,900,000 shares as compared with yesterday's 1,760,000 shares.

There were 1,162 individual issues traded of which 519 advanced and 379 declined. New highs came to 71 with 24 new lows.

McKeldin Proposes Office To Lure Industry To Md.

Governor's Suggestion Comes In Speech To Oakland Group

Uncertainty About Coal Measure Expressed By Chief Executive To Mountain Top C. Of C.

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin tonight suggested a new state office to lure industries to Maryland.

It ought to be small, but have enough authority to coordinate the work of existing state agencies, the Governor said in a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting of the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

"I favor and will work for the establishment of a bureau for industrial development in Maryland," he said.

"Super-Paternalism" Out

McKeldin repeated his antagonism to "super-paternalism of the states over their subdivisions." But he said attracting new business "with emphasis on the areas of greatest economic demand" is a proper field for state government.

He said the bureau he has in mind could deal with the State Planning Commission, Department of Information, other state agencies, chambers of commerce and local public officials.

"Working together, I believe we can build a practical and successful organization for industrial promotion without great expense and without overlapping the functions of other agencies," the Governor said.

Sidetracked Bill

The 1950 Legislature sidetracked a bill to set up a separate unit for industrial development, but passed legislation to increase such activity by the Planning Commission.

Former Governor Lane vetoed the measure because it would have made the commission the state's official liaison agency with interested Federal and other outside offices.

McKeldin, who arrived here last night for a day in what he called "this country that rests on the clouds," admitted he was uncertain about a 1951 act requiring use of Maryland coal in state institutions.

"I favor such legislation primarily in the interest of Maryland citizens who make their living from the mining of coal," he said.

Opposes Exclusion

He didn't like exclusion of miners who live in Crellin. The act covers coal dug in Maryland, although the entrance to one mine is in West Virginia. Crellin men are employed by a Maryland company, but mine coal in West Virginia.

If he does sign the bill, McKeldin said, he will try to have it amended next year "to end the discrimination against the people of Crellin."

In his remarks about industrial expansion, Governor McKeldin emphasized that more heavy industry should be attracted to Western Maryland. He recommended such development especially for Allegany County.

"Picnic Spot"

"Garrett County should be the picnic spot of Maryland," McKeldin stated in another portion of his address, referring to this county's special desirability as a recreational area.

Governor McKeldin tonight repeated his earlier contention that school construction is a county problem and should be financed through county bond issues.

Pointing to his difficulty in reaching a decision concerning the Maryland coal bill which was adopted by the recent Legislature, McKeldin emphasized that Allegany County residents are urging that he sign it into law while interested parties in Garrett County are requesting a veto.

Along Deep Creek Lake

Governor and Mrs. McKeldin arrived in Garrett County Tuesday afternoon for their first visit here since his election last November. They spent Tuesday night and most of this morning along Deep Creek Lake.

Most of this afternoon Governor McKeldin visited in and around around Oakland, where he conferred with a number of Garrett County's Republican leaders.

After his speech, Governor and Mrs. McKeldin drove to Pittsburgh, Pa., where they were scheduled to take a plane for Detroit, Mich. The Governor has a speaking engagement in Michigan tomorrow.

Governor Endorses Festival In Area

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin thinks Western Maryland should put on an outdoor festival, like they do in West Virginia and some other states.

He asked Garrett countians to let him know what they think of the idea. He suggested a "forest" or a "mountain" festival.

"I believe such a special week of festivity and mass demonstration of our hospitality would do much to advertise the county as a vacationland," the Governor said in a speech prepared for the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

To Report On Tests

The Civil Service Commission met last night to begin grading tests given recently for positions in the fire and police departments and for fire chief and assistant fire chief.

Officials said they hope to have results ready for presentation at Monday's meeting of the Mayor and Council.

Contract Talks Continued By Two CIO Unions

Rubber, Brewery Strike Votes Taken

Officials of two CIO unions which took strike votes this week in connection with contract negotiations reported last night that attempts to reach agreements are continuing.

Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO), reported its members voted 20 to one to authorize cancellations of its contract and for strike action if contract issues are not settled.

Heavy Vote

The vote in the poll among the union which had 1,867 active members April 30, was reported heavy.

Raymond C. Burkhart, president, said negotiations toward a settlement will resume this morning. Satisfactory progress has been made in the last few meetings with the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, he added.

A report on contract negotiations will be presented to the membership at a meeting in the union hall Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

Also slated for the meeting is the nomination of officers. They include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, executive board, one trustee, sentinel, guide, members of the Policy and Labor-Management committees.

Contract Expires

Members of Local 265, Brewery Workers Union (CIO), whose contract expired Monday, took a strike vote yesterday. Results of the poll were not divulged.

An informed union source said discussions are continuing and that the union hopes a satisfactory settlement will be reached.

The union, it is understood, has asked $6 a week wage boost, based on the 10 per cent formula, with the Queen City and Cumberland Brewing Companies offering $5. Some 250 workers are involved in the contract talks.

Adams Will Head Area Fire Chiefs

Other officers are Warren Livengood, LaVale, vice president; Austin G. Snyder, Bowling Green, secretary; Joseph G. Wenrich, Cresaptown, treasurer; John Shoemaker, Accident; Frederick Purnell, Bedford Road; Melvin DeHaven, Baltimore Pike, and Eldred Fletcher, Bowman's Addition, trustees.

In a round-table discussion, the firemen considered the advisability of conducting an educational campaign to discourage young children from chasing fire trucks. Carloads of youngsters hurrying to a fire create a traffic hazard, they agreed.

The firemen also discussed phases of the mutual aid system under the civil defense program. This will avert such a catastrophe as struck Hyndman, Pa., Christmas Day, 1949, they said.

Cafe Rent Dispute Set Today In Court

A jury in Allegany County Circuit Court today is scheduled to hear a $2,500 damage suit which stems from the rental of premises at 26 Baltimore Street for a cafe.

The suit was filed March 2 for Louis LaNeve and Elizabeth LaNeve by their attorney, Earl E. Manges, against Frank Molinari. The plaintiffs said that they had leased the premises to Molinari September 10, 1945. The period of the lease, they said, was from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1950. Molinari was to pay $250 per month rent from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1947, and $225 per month thereafter. The LaNeves charge that Molinari occupied the premises for three months after the expiration of the lease and paid no rent during that time. The plaintiff also contend that Molinari removed duct work and decorations in a "grossly negligent and unworkmanlike manner" and caused considerable damage.

Club Begins Garden Project

Baltimore Pike Group Cultivates Own Ground

By CHARLES H. KELLY
News Staff Writer

Anyone interested in seeing a fine example of cooperative spirit among American youth with a bit of competition blended in, should visit a plot of land in the rear of the Baltimore Pike Volunteer Fire Company.

For here, a garden project is being carried on by members of the 4-H Club in that area. Seventeen members of the group led by Harold Bean, instructor at Flintstone School, are cultivating an eighth of an acre of ground to raise their own vegetables.

Since its organization about a year and a half ago the club has been fostering small projects at home or at the neighbors. Such chores as caring for and watering livestock, feeding chickens, and raising vegetables in small gardens add to their points in 4-H circles.

Ground for this year's project was broken Friday with plowing "know how," equipment and the time of A. M. Kight being donated. Martin L. Gordon, conservation aide of the Allegany Soil Conservation District will mark off the hillside and instruct the youthful members on the proper method of tilling the soil in order to prevent erosion.

Plan To Sell Products

The boys, who ages range from nine to 14, attend school at East Side Grade School and Fort Hill, Cumberland, and the project work comes after classes and on Saturday. Money for the purchase of potatoes, sweet corn, tomatoes, and beans will be drawn from the club's treasury and at harvesting time the members will sell their products and return the proceeds to the treasurer.

"Handling money is one of the responsibilities of the 4-H program and members of our club will be given an opportunity to keep records on the profits of their project," Harold Bean remarked.

Land for the cultivation of crops is being loaned by the firemen of the area, who were glad to be of assistance in furthering the program.

Accurate Records Kept

The competitive spirit enters the picture since each member of the club will be given credit for the amount of work he does and the results of his endeavors. "Accurate records are kept from day to day," Bean added.

Of course "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" so evidence that some play enters into the project was shown as the Ferguson Tractor-Plow turned over the first furrow of soil Friday. The unanimous comment of the youthful agriculturalists was that a can would have been useful at the time to gather up worms for fishing "down the stream."

Carl Upole, 12-year-old East Side Grade School pupil, remarked that he "was fishing with my dad this morning. We got up at 4 o'clock and he caught three and I got a 12 and one-half inch trout." His eyes sparkled as he told of his accomplishment "in Evitts Creek."

Help The Neighbors

With a more serious glance Colvin Athey, a seventh grade pupil of Fort Hill, related that he has "belonged to the club about a year and I help some neighbors who have cows and pigs to tend to most everyday."

According to the president of the Liming of Penn Avenue Field was completed yesterday and the outfield will be disked, dragged and seeded today, Edmund F. Hoey, city recreation director, announced yesterday.

Slated to start today is the erection of a new bleacher section providing 1,155 additional seats. Hoey said the Vandegrift construction company is donating labor for the project.

Still to be completed prior to the formal opening of the field May 15 is the erection of a backstop, the installation of additional drains and laying of crushed stone walkways.

King Brother's Circus Will Show Here Monday, May 14

Shriners Sponsor Big Top Exhibit

Monday, May 14, will be Circus Day in Cumberland. This year the King Brother's Circus will appear for two performances at the Taylor Tin Plate grounds at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m.

The "show under the big top" will be sponsored by Ali Ghan Shrine. A traveling zoo of wild animals, clowns, acrobats, cowboys, cowgirls, popcorn and peanuts will all be part of the program. Over 150 performers will appear with the King Brother's Circus.

A feature of the program will be the horseback riding skill of pretty 21-year-old June Cristiani. Like the other members of her family, she has inherited strength, skill and daring.

The life of sawdust and spangles is the only life she has ever known as she was born while her parents were with a circus exhibiting in Copenhagen, Denmark. She represents the third generation of a famous circus family.

While her acts last but eight minutes, years of practice were required to perfect her act. She is an accomplished somersaulting rider and after six years of practice has perfected the turning of a backward somersault from one running horse to another.

Tickets for underprivileged children were distributed to welfare organizations last week and the Shrine hopes to give as many children as possible the "thrill of Circus Days."

Hitchcock Will Present Data On Smoke Work Here

George M. Hitchcock, smoke abatement engineer for the City of Cumberland, will attend the 44th annual convention of the Air Pollution and Smoke Prevention Association of America which will be held in Roanoke, Va., May 6 to 10.

He will report on progress in smoke abatement in Cumberland during a panel discussion on air pollution.

The report will include data on the use of PH readings in determining the toxic condition of dustfall in the city.

The method, Hitchcock explained, consists of determining the acidity of alkalinity of the dustfall, plus chemical tests to check on the presence of harmful substances.

Hitchcock said Cumberland is the only city in the United States to use the PH method, adding that the system has been in use in Great Britain since 1930.

His report will include data on smoke violations, which dropped to .42 per 100 last year from 1950's 7.29.

Even better results will be obtained this year, he will report, due to the virtual dieselization of the Cumberland yards.

Auto License Deadline Set For May 10

Commercial Plates Needed By May 31

The long-extended deadline for use of old automobile license plates will end at midnight Thursday, May 10, Deputy Tax Collector Ernest B. Treat was informed yesterday afternoon.

Originally, the deadline was midnight March 31, but Governor McKeldin extended the time indefinitely because a shortage of metal has prevented delivery of plates.

Yesterday afternoon a telegram from State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Thomas B. R. Mudd informed Treat of the new deadline. This new deadline will be midnight May 10 for all passenger car and motorcycle licenses, according to the telegram.

Mudd's dispatch also stipulated that the deadline for all commercial license plates will be midnight Thursday, May 31. Applications for commercial plates will be mailed out May 10.

Treat expects to have $15 and $17 commercial license plates for sale at his office later this month. These will serve half and three-quarter ton trucks and farm trucks.

The tax collector has been selling passenger car license plates at his Court House office ever since the last week in February. After the deadline was extended the sale fell off to only about 25 to 50 sets each day. He still has about 800 sets of passenger car plates out of 14,000 that have been issued to him.

Coronation Of Queen Is Program Feature

WINCHESTER, Va., (AP)—A carnival air gripped Winchester last night with the arrival earlier in the day of the blonde Norwegian girl who will rule over the 24th annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

While Miss Curi Lie met last night with festival workers and with radio and newspaper representatives, thousands of persons were busy putting on the finishing touches for the start of official activity today.

The feature of today's opening program of the two-day affair will be the coronation of Miss Lie, daughter of United Nations Secretary General and Mrs. Trygvie Lie, as Queen Shenandoah XXIV.

Marshall To Crown Queen

Crown-placing honors will be performed by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall before thousands of persons assembled to watch the coronation and the ensuing presentation of a pageant, "our Heritage."

150,000 Expected

A series of dances each night and hundreds of other activities are on tap for the estimated 150,000 persons who will jam this apple-growing center of 12,000 inhabitants today and tomorrow.

Preliminary Report On Area Economic Survey Submitted

Steering Group Receives Copies Of First Draft

Cumberland's advantageous position with respect to a market of 80 million people was highlighted as one of many findings in an economic survey of this area made by federal and state experts.

The preliminary findings of this survey were presented at the City Hall yesterday afternoon by representatives of a joint U. S. Department of Commerce and U. S. Department of Labor Committee to the Steering Committee for the Economic Development of Allegany County. Members of the Steering Committee who had arranged with John Steelman, assistant to the President, to have the survey undertaken, were asked to review the report and submit their comments before the final report is made public.

Analyzes Resources

It was explained that the purpose of the report was to analyze the economic resources of the area and to call attention to its potentialities for employment and business enterprise. It is anticipated that on the basis of the survey the community itself will be able to develop an integrated action program through which the opportunities of the area can be realized.

The preliminary findings were presented by a group from Washington including Victor Rotemus and David Campbell of the U. S. Department of Commerce and Gladys Fielding of the U. S. Department of Labor to the meeting at which David Kauffman, chairman of the Steering Committee, presided.

State representatives at the meeting included Alvin Pasarew, director of the Maryland State Planning Commission, John Trimmer, Director of Maryland Department of Information, and William Spangler, State Veterans Employment Service Director.

The survey was prepared by a combined team of the Departments of Labor, Commerce, Agriculture and Industry, along with the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Security Agency, the Maryland Department of Employment and Security, West Virginia Department of Employment Security, Maryland State Department of Public Welfare and the American Federation of Labor.

The Steering Committee of which Kauffman is chairman and F. Allan Weatherholt secretary, requested and encouraged the survey along with recommendations from this survey team, for a plan to improve local economic conditions and remedy the economic ills and joblessness of the area.

The Steering Committee is composed of representatives of the Mayor and City Council, Board of Allegany County Commissioners, Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission, Allegany County Industrial Promotion Company, Emergency Relief Committee, Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Western Maryland Full Employment Committee, Industrial Promotion Commission and State Veterans Service Committee of Allegany County.

Two Main Avenues

Campbell, who directed the survey stated that the two main avenues open to the Cumberland area for expanding its employment opportunities were in the fields of industry and recreation.

It was noted by committee members last night that the proposal of Gov. McKeldin to set up a state office to attract industry into Mary-

HomeNursing Course Opens In City School

The second in a series of county-wide home nursing courses, sponsored by the American Red Cross, got underway last night at Penn Avenue School. Mrs. Harriet Boor, Shade's Lane, a registered nurse and qualified Red Cross instructor, will conduct the class of 15 women.

The 12 hour course will be held on Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock and is in conjunction with the Civil Defense Program.

The purpose of the courses is to instruct county residents in fundamentals of home nursing, the manner in which to care for a patient until arrival of a physician and methods of improving equipment.

The National Red Cross, Mrs. Leo Witherup, executive-secretary of the Allegany Chapter said yesterday, is endeavoring to train 100,000 such qaulified persons and the county is attempting to instruct its quota.

A similar 30-hour course was started in Lonaconing last week where 12 members under the direction of Mrs. Carl C. Daum, 740 Brookfield Avenue, are being taught the home nursing fundamentals. They meet Monday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m.

Local Jewish Fund Rally Is Planned Sunday

Charles Auerbach To Be Guest Speaker

Charles Auerbach, Cleveland attorney, will be principal speaker at a meeting next Sunday in the Vestry Room of B'er Chayim Temple, South Centre Street, at 8 p. m. when plans will be made for Cumberland's participation in the national $500,000,000 State of Israel Bond issue.

CHARLES AUERBACH

Auerbach received AB and LLB degrees at Western Reserve University in 1920 and 1922 and has served as a member of the Committee on Judicial Campaigns of the Cleveland Bar Association, served as trial counsel for the association and on the civil rights committee for the Ohio Bar Association.

For many years he served as a national director of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver and served on the Speaker's Division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, the United Jewish Appeal, the Jewish Welfare Federation of Cleveland and in 1946 toured Central America for the Jewish Agency.

In 1940 he was admitted to membership of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States and for the past eight years has been on the staff of the Cleveland Marshall Law School.

Announcement of the national bond purchases will be made to the Prime Minister of the State of Israel, David Ben Gurion, on his visit to Madison Square Garden, New York, May 10.

Proceeds of the bond issue will be used by the Israeli government for agricultural and industrial enterprises, for the full promotion of the country's economic potential and to develop trade and commercial possibilities.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, heads the nationwide effort. George Ossip, president of the Cumberland District Zionist organization, is chairman of the local group. The meeting is open to the public.

Union Will Map Contract Plans

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will hold a special membership meeting next Wednesday to continue discussion and action on a new contract at the Amcelle plant.

Playford Aldridge, president, said the meeting will be a continuation of meetings held April 18 and 25 to plan the pact.

He said the union hopes to have its contract demands ready for presentation immediately after negotiations open this spring.

By June 9, the union must present a 60-day notice of intentions of amending the present pact and formal contract talks must begin within 10 days of the date of the notice. The pact is effective until August 8.

Hyndman Resident Accidentally Shot

Howard Berkheimer, Hyndman, Pa., was admitted to Memorial Hospital last night at 9:10 o'clock with a gunshot wound in his left arm near the shoulder.

Hospital attaches said that he had been working on his farm and accidentally shot himself. His condition last night was reported as "good."

WEATHER

The weatherman blended all the ingredients necessary for a perfect summer day yesterday and convinced Cumberlanders that the summer wardrobe should be put to use. The official weather station at Constitution Park reports the highest temperature of the year thus far with a reading of 84, a low of 51 and it was 76 degrees at 8:15 p. m. yesterday. The dew point was 51.9 and humidity 43 percent. The forecast for today is cooler.

McKeldin Proposes Office To Lure Industry To Md.

Governor's Suggestion Comes In Speech To Oakland Group

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin tonight suggested a new state office to lure industries to Maryland.

It ought to be small, but have enough authority to coordinate the work of existing state agencies, the Governor said in a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting of the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

"I favor and will work for the establishment of a bureau for industrial development in Maryland," he said.

"Super-Paternalism" Out

McKeldin repeated his antagonism to "super-paternalism of the states over their subdivisions." But he said attracting new business "with emphasis on the areas of greatest economic demand" is a proper field for state government.

He said the bureau he has in mind could deal with the State Planning Commission, Department of Information, other state agencies, chambers of commerce and local public officials.

"Working together, I believe we can build a practical and successful organization for industrial promotion without great expense and without overlapping the functions of other agencies," the Governor said.

Sidetracked Bill

The 1950 Legislature sidetracked a bill to set up a separate unit for industrial development, but passed legislation to increase such activity by the Planning Commission.

Former Governor Lane vetoed the measure because it would have made the commission the state's official liaison agency with interested Federal and other outside offices.

McKeldin, who arrived here last night for a day in what he called "this country that rests on the clouds," admitted he was uncertain about a 1951 act requiring use of Maryland coal in state institutions.

"I favor such legislation primarily in the interest of Maryland citizens who make their living from the mining of coal," he said.

Opposes Exclusion

He didn't like exclusion of miners who live in Crellin. The act covers coal dug in Maryland, although the entrance to one mine is in West Virginia. Crellin men are employed by a Maryland company, but mine coal in West Virginia.

If he does sign the bill, McKeldin said, he will try to have it amended next year "to end the discrimination against the people of Crellin."

In his remarks about industrial expansion, Governor McKeldin emphasized that more heavy industry should be attracted to Western Maryland. He recommended such development especially for Allegany County.

"Picnic Spot"

"Garrett County should be the picnic spot of Maryland," McKeldin stated in another portion of his address, referring to this county's special desirability as a recreational area.

Governor McKeldin tonight repeated his earlier contention that school construction is a county problem and should be financed through county bond issues.

Pointing to his difficulty in reaching a decision concerning the Maryland coal bill which was adopted by the recent Legislature, McKeldin emphasized that Allegany County residents are urging that he sign it into law while interested parties in Garrett County are requesting a veto.

Along Deep Creek Lake

Governor and Mrs. McKeldin arrived in Garrett County Tuesday afternoon for their first visit here since his election last November. They spent Tuesday night and most of this morning along Deep Creek Lake.

Most of this afternoon Governor McKeldin visited in and around around Oakland, where he conferred with a number of Garrett County's Republican leaders.

After his speech, Governor and Mrs. McKeldin drove to Pittsburgh, Pa., where they were scheduled to take a plane for Detroit, Mich. The Governor has a speaking engagement in Michigan tomorrow.

Contract Talks Continued By Two CIO Unions

Rubber, Brewery Strike Votes Taken

Officials of two CIO unions which took strike votes this week in connection with contract negotiations reported last night that attempts to reach agreements are continuing.

Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO), reported its members voted 20 to one to authorize cancellations of its contract and for strike action if contract issues are not settled.

Heavy Vote

The vote in the poll among the union which had 1,867 active members April 30, was reported heavy.

Raymond C. Burkhart, president, said negotiations toward a settlement will resume this morning. Satisfactory progress has been made in the last few meetings with the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, he added.

A report on contract negotiations will be presented to the membership at a meeting in the union hall Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

Also slated for the meeting is the nomination of officers. They include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, executive board, one trustee, sentinel, guide, members of the Policy and Labor-Management committees.

Contract Expires

Members of Local 265, Brewery Workers Union (CIO), whose contract expired Monday, took a strike vote yesterday. Results of the poll were not divulged.

An informed union source said discussions are continuing and that the union hopes a satisfactory settlement will be reached.

The union, it is understood, has asked $6 a week wage boost, based on the 10 per cent formula, with the Queen City and Cumberland Brewing Companies offering $5. Some 250 workers are involved in the contract talks.

Adams Will Head Area Fire Chiefs

Other officers are Warren Livengood, LaVale, vice president; Austin G. Snyder, Bowling Green, secretary; Joseph G. Wenrich, Cresaptown, treasurer; John Shoemaker, Accident; Frederick Purnell, Bedford Road; Melvin DeHaven, Baltimore Pike, and Eldred Fletcher, Bowman's Addition, trustees.

In a round-table discussion, the firemen considered the advisability of conducting an educational campaign to discourage young children from chasing fire trucks. Carloads of youngsters hurrying to a fire create a traffic hazard, they agreed.

The firemen also discussed phases of the mutual aid system under the civil defense program. This will avert such a catastrophe as struck Hyndman, Pa., Christmas Day, 1949, they said.

Cafe Rent Dispute Set Today In Court

A jury in Allegany County Circuit Court today is scheduled to hear a $2,500 damage suit which stems from the rental of premises at 26 Baltimore Street for a cafe.

The suit was filed March 2 for Louis LaNeve and Elizabeth LaNeve by their attorney, Earl E. Manges, against Frank Molinari. The plaintiffs said that they had leased the premises to Molinari September 10, 1945. The period of the lease, they said, was from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1950. Molinari was to pay $250 per month rent from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1947, and $225 per month thereafter. The LaNeves charge that Molinari occupied the premises for three months after the expiration of the lease and paid no rent during that time. The plaintiff also contend that Molinari removed duct work and decorations in a "grossly negligent and unworkmanlike manner" and caused considerable damage.

Governor Endorses Festival In Area

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin thinks Western Maryland should put on an outdoor festival, like they do in West Virginia and some other states.

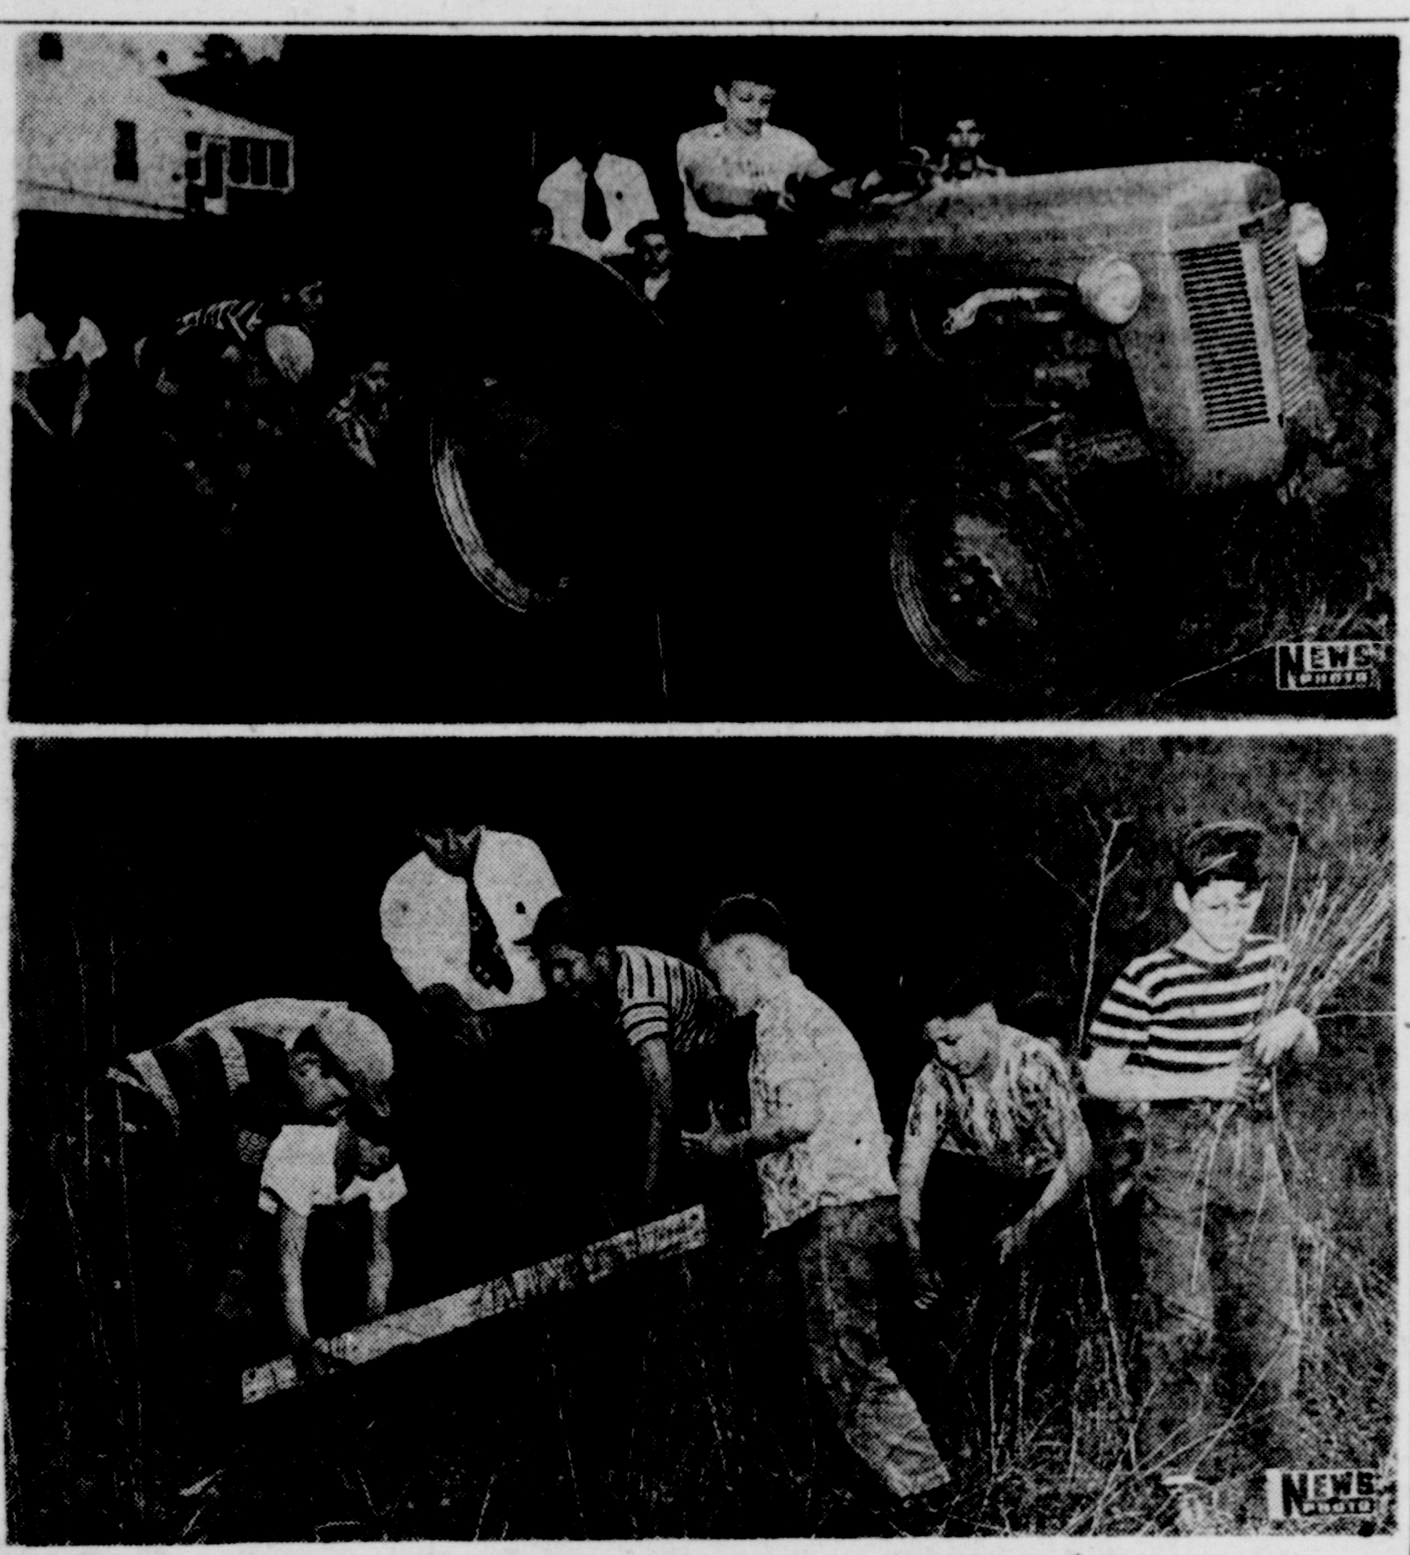
He asked Garrett countians to let him know what they think of the idea. He suggested a "forest" or a "mountain" festival.

"I believe such a special week of festivity and mass demonstration of our hospitality would do much to advertise the county as a vacationland," the Governor said in a speech prepared for the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

To Report On Tests

The Civil Service Commission met last night to begin grading tests given recently for positions in the fire and police departments and for fire chief and assistant fire chief.

Officials said they hope to have results ready for presentation at Monday's meeting of the Mayor and Council.



Club Begins Garden Project

Baltimore Pike Group Cultivates Own Ground

By CHARLES H. KELLY
News Staff Writer

Anyone interested in seeing a fine example of cooperative spirit among American youth with a bit of competition blended in, should visit a plot of land in the rear of the Baltimore Pike Volunteer Fire Company.

For here, a garden project is being carried on by members of the 4-H Club in that area. Seventeen members of the group led by Harold Bean, instructor at Flintstone School, are cultivating an eighth of an acre of ground to raise their own vegetables.

Since its organization about a year and a half ago the club has been fostering small projects at home or at the neighbors. Such chores as caring for and watering livestock, feeding chickens, and raising vegetables in small gardens add to their points in 4-H circles.

Ground for this year's project was broken Friday with plowing "know how," equipment and the time of A. M. Kight being donated. Martin L. Gordon, conservation aide of the Allegany Soil Conservation District will mark off the hillside and instruct the youthful members on the proper method of tilling the soil in order to prevent erosion.

Plan To Sell Products

The boys, who ages range from nine to 14, attend school at East Side Grade School and Fort Hill, Cumberland, and the project work comes after classes and on Saturday. Money for the purchase of potatoes, sweet corn, tomatoes, and beans will be drawn from the club's treasury and at harvesting time the members will sell their products and return the proceeds to the treasurer.

"Handling money is one of the responsibilities of the 4-H program and members of our club will be given an opportunity to keep records on the profits of their project," Harold Bean remarked.

Land for the cultivation of crops is being loaned by the firemen of the area, who were glad to be of assistance in furthering the program.

Accurate Records Kept

The competitive spirit enters the picture since each member of the club will be given credit for the amount of work he does and the results of his endeavors. "Accurate records are kept from day to day," Bean added.

Of course "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" so evidence that some play enters into the project was shown as the Ferguson Tractor-Plow turned over the first furrow of soil Friday. The unanimous comment of the youthful agriculturalists was that a can would have been useful at the time to gather up worms for fishing "down the stream."

Carl Upole, 12-year-old East Side Grade School pupil, remarked that he "was fishing with my dad this morning. We got up at 4 o'clock and he caught three and I got a 12 and one-half inch trout." His eyes sparkled as he told of his accomplishment "in Evitts Creek."

Help The Neighbors

With a more serious glance Colvin Athey, a seventh grade pupil of Fort Hill, related that he has "belonged to the club about a year and I help some neighbors who have cows and pigs to tend to most everyday."

According to the president of the

Still to be completed prior to the formal opening of the field May 15 is the erection of a backstop, the installation of additional drains and laying of crushed stone walkways.

State representatives at the meeting included Alvin Pasarew, director of the Maryland State Planning Commission, John Trimmer, Director of Maryland Department of Information, and William Spangler, State Veterans Employment Service Director.

The survey was prepared by a combined team of the Departments of Labor, Commerce, Agriculture and Industry, along with the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Security Agency, the Maryland Department of Employment and Security, West Virginia Department of Employment Security, Maryland State Department of Public Welfare and the American Federation of Labor.

The Steering Committee of which Kauffman is chairman and F. Allan Weatherholt secretary, requested and encouraged the survey along with recommendations from this survey team, for a plan to improve local economic conditions and remedy the economic ills and joblessness of the area.

The Steering Committee is composed of representatives of the Mayor and City Council, Board of Allegany County Commissioners, Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission, Allegany County Industrial Promotion Company, Emergency Relief Committee, Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Western Maryland Full Employment Committee, Industrial Promotion Commission and State Veterans Service Committee of Allegany County.

Two Main Avenues

Campbell, who directed the survey stated that the two main avenues open to the Cumberland area for expanding its employment opportunities were in the fields of industry and recreation.

It was noted by committee members last night that the proposal of Gov. McKeldin to set up a state office to attract industry into Mary-

HomeNursing Course Opens In City School

The second in a series of county-wide home nursing courses, sponsored by the American Red Cross, got underway last night at Penn Avenue School. Mrs. Harriet Boor, Shade's Lane, a registered nurse and qualified Red Cross instructor, will conduct the class of 15 women.

The 12 hour course will be held on Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock and is in conjunction with the Civil Defense Program.

The purpose of the courses is to instruct county residents in fundamentals of home nursing, the manner in which to care for a patient until arrival of a physician and methods of improving equipment.

The National Red Cross, Mrs. Leo Witherup, executive-secretary of the Allegany Chapter said yesterday, is endeavoring to train 100,000 such qaulified persons and the county is attempting to instruct its quota.

A similar 30-hour course was started in Lonaconing last week where 12 members under the direction of Mrs. Carl C. Daum, 740 Brookfield Avenue, are being taught the home nursing fundamentals. They meet Monday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m.

Charles Auerbach, Cleveland attorney, will be principal speaker at a meeting next Sunday in the Vestry Room of B'er Chayim Temple, South Centre Street, at 8 p. m. when plans will be made for Cumberland's participation in the national $500,000,000 State of Israel Bond issue.

CHARLES AUERBACH

Auerbach received AB and LLB degrees at Western Reserve University in 1920 and 1922 and has served as a member of the Committee on Judicial Campaigns of the Cleveland Bar Association, served as trial counsel for the association and on the civil rights committee for the Ohio Bar Association.

For many years he served as a national director of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver and served on the Speaker's Division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, the United Jewish Appeal, the Jewish Welfare Federation of Cleveland and in 1946 toured Central America for the Jewish Agency.

Union Will Map Contract Plans

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will hold a special membership meeting next Wednesday to continue discussion and action on a new contract at the Amcelle plant.

Playford Aldridge, president, said the meeting will be a continuation of meetings held April 18 and 25 to plan the pact.

He said the union hopes to have its contract demands ready for presentation immediately after negotiations open this spring.

By June 9, the union must present a 60-day notice of intentions of amending the present pact and formal contract talks must begin within 10 days of the date of the notice. The pact is effective until August 8.

Reds Prepare To Renew Drive

Clear And Sound Foreign Policy Urged By C. Of C.

Calls For Disclosure Of "Essential Facts"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The U. S. Chamber of Commerce today called for an end to the "frustration, uncertainty and political partisanship indicated in our present foreign policy."

The 2,500 delegates to the chamber's annual meeting asked in a resolution for "full disclosure of the essential facts," so that there can be an informed public opinion, and then for development of a "sound foreign policy x x x without regard to partisan politics."

Hulcy Elected President

This resolution, unanimously approved, was offered from the floor by Powell C. Groner of Kansas City, newly-elected vice president of the chamber, who said that from the facts so far given it is difficult to tell whether the country has any clear foreign policy.

Groner's resolution said the nation should have a policy "to protect and preserve the best interests of all the people of the U. S. and of those other free peoples of the world who are prepared to cooperate fully with us in preserving the fundamental constitutional principles upon which this nation was founded."

Dechard H. Hulcy, Dallas, Texas, president of the Lone Star Gas Co., was elected president of the chamber. The self-educated, 59-year-old Hulcy also is president of the American Gas Association, which speaks for the gas utility industry.

Johnston Paints Rosy Picture

Hulcy succeeds Otto A. Seyferth, Muskegon, Mich.

But he said a lot of hard work and sacrifice will be needed to keep it that color.

Johnston promised that the government will hold the dam against "a new inflation flood" expected about Christmas when the full force of the arms production program makes itself felt in greater buying power.

Md. Air National Guard To Get Jet Planes Soon

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP)—Swift jet fighter planes will soon add their punch to Maryland's Air National Guard, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord said today.

The State Adjutant General said that equipping the Maryland unit with jets is part of an overall plan for improving air defense along the Atlantic coast.

Three Enemy Divisions May Assault Seoul

Van Fleet Claims "Great Victory"

TOKYO, Thursday, May 3 (AP) — The Reds today were reported getting ready to renew their bogged-down spring offensive in Korea with a three-division assault on Seoul.

The Allied field commander proclaimed the first round of the big Red drive a great Allied victory but warned that bigger blows possibly were to come.

Today intelligence officers on the western front told AP Correspondent George McArthur of reports that two North Korean divisions and a Chinese Red division were to be hurled at Seoul.

These forces were regrouping out of range of Allied artillery which helped blow up the Communist timetable to capture the Korean capital by May Day.

Red Night Fighters Appear

So were other Red buildup forces in the center where a new attack also was expected.

Communist night fighter planes were definitely identified in action over Korea last night for the first time in the war.

A U. S. B-26 bomber crew reported it was attacked by three propeller-driven Communist planes over North Korea as it dropped flares.

The Americans said their plane was not damaged. They said they may have hit one of the attacking planes in the brief fight.

The Reds, having lost more than 75,000 men in the first round of their offensive, played it so cautious Wednesday that only 395 were killed or wounded in ground action all across Korea.

This Eighth Army estimate was the lowest for a single day in weeks.

Wednesday's biggest action was a thunderous artillery duel northwest of Seoul. The Allies won it. After the Chinese opened up with hundreds of shells on United Nations positions, the big Allied guns replied and silenced the foe's batteries.

Allied planes — carrier and land-based — ranged the width of the peninsula and far to the north in stepped-up raids on Red troop concentrations, transport lines, ammunition dumps and warehouses. More than 450 miles of rail lines were ripped up by Navy planes alone Wednesday.

Cruiser Shells Reds

An unidentified plane dropped four bombs today a few thousand yards in front of U. N. positions in Central Korea near Chunchon. It was not determined immediately if the plane was Communist or Allied.

Pilots of Allied carrier-based planes claimed they killed 133 Reds Wednesday in close combat support missions.

House Cuts Fund For Interior Dept.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The House today passed a sharply trimmed Interior Department money bill allowing the department $496,764,500 for the year starting July 1.

This amount was about 11 per cent less than requested by the administration.

The cut was the biggest made by the House in any of the money bills passed this year. These bills include those providing funds for the Treasury, Post Office, and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Administration.

Biggest cuts were in Reclamation Bureau construction funds, reduced $10,190,000 from the $207,190,000 requested.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

West Virginia Bank Robbed Third Time Since November

WINONA, W. Va., May 2 (AP)Two young men wearing Indian war paint and brandishing guns held up the Winona National Bank shortly before closing time today and escaped with $15,500.

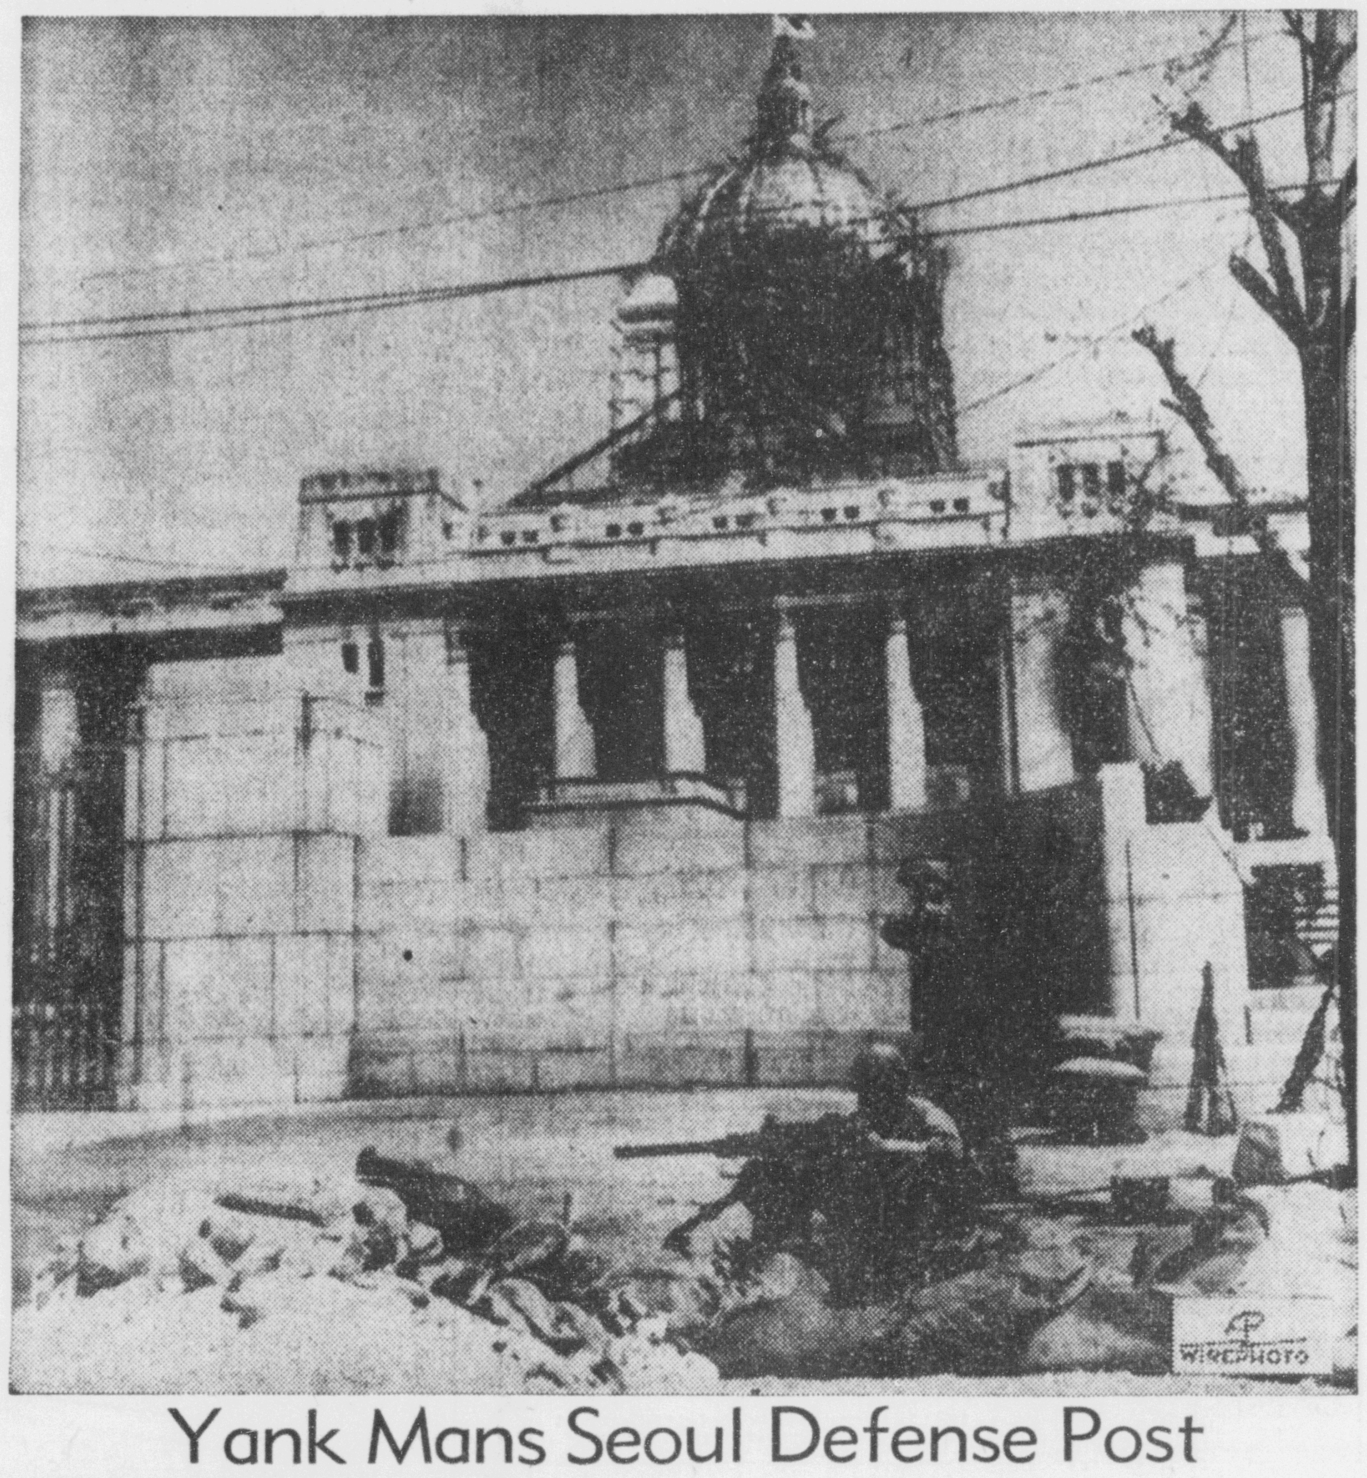
It was the third time since last November that the bank has been held up.

Paul Beresford of the Mount Hope Insurance Company gave the estimate of loot.

State police earlier had fixed the amount at between $40,000 and $45,000, based upon what is usually in the bank tills at that hour of the day.

Investigators said the two men entered the bank shortly before 1:45 p. m., one waving a sawed-off rifle, the other brandishing a cocked pistol. They forced Cashier J. R. Hisey to turn over all the loose cash in the bank to them.

They fled in a red sedan parked outside the bank, accompanied by a blonde girl who waited in the car during the robbery. They were last seen heading toward Route 60. State police immediately set up road blocks.



Yank Mans Seoul Defense Post

An American machine-gunner mans his post in front of the Republic of Korea capitol in Seoul as United Nations soldiers prepare to defend the city against approaching Red armies. A South Korean comrade carries additional sandbags to the emplacement. The battered capitol, still under repair, appeared threatened for the fifth time by the Red tide, but yesterday, enemy pressure lifted.

Israel Reports Syrians Driven Out Of Territory

TEL AVIV, Israel, May 2 (AP)—Syrian forces which penetrated into Israel's territory today were driven back into Syria tonight, an Israeli military spokesman announced.

The Israeli counterattack, the spokesman said, was directed against regular forces of the Syrian army and Syrian "irregulars" who, during the day, had occupied a two-mile stretch of the demilitarized zone along the border.

He claimed the Syrians had also penetrated into Israel beyond the demilitarized zone.

The spokesman said Israeli troops remained on their own territory and that all was quiet tonight in the trouble area.

The disputed territory is north of the Sea of Galilee and was demilitarized under the United Nations-sponsored truce between Jews and Arabs.

(At Lake Success, Israel charged Syria with aggression. Her representative, Abba Eban, demanded immediate action by the Security Council. The Israeli troops were reported to have suffered three killed and one wounded in the first hours of the shooting.)

A month ago, seven Israeli policemen were shot to death on patrol in another frontier area, southeast of the Sea of Galilee, and Israeli warplanes bombed Syrian-held points in retaliation.

For more than a week, things had been quiet in the frontier zone where, over Syrian objections, Israel is draining the Huleh swamps for farm land.

Syria contends that Israeli development work in the demilitarized zone and removal of 650 Arabs from the area violates the armistice which ended the Syrian-Israeli phase of the Palestine War in 1948.

Commons Approves Health Service Bill

LONDON, Thursday, May 3 (AP)—Britain's socialist government fought off a revolt within its own ranks early today and pushed through its bill ending free spectacles and false teeth under the public health service.

Only three of a long list of opponents backed their protests by voting against the government in the final showdown in the House of Commons. The government measure was approved by 262 votes to 3. Many members did not vote.

The bill provides that Britons must pay half the costs of glasses and dentures which they have been getting for nothing since 1947.

"Farm Safety Week"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — President Truman today proclaimed the week of July 22 "National Farm Safety Week."

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today he sees no evidence that U. S.-Mexican relations have been hurt by the Senate Crime Committee's chiding of Ambassador William O'Dwyer.

And White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said he was unaware of any plan to recall O'Dwyer from his Mexico City post, as demanded by a number of Republicans following yesterday's publication of the crime committee's report.

The committee charged that O'Dwyer, while mayor of New York, associated with racketeers and failed to act effectively against big time lawbreakers. The report said his actions "impeded" some prosecutions and "contributed to the growth of ogranized crime."

Smith Wants O'Dwyer Fired

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ), a member of Foreign Relations Committee, added his voice today to the Republican clamor for O'Dwyer's dismissal as ambassador to Mexico.

"It is contrary to every good principle of democracy and diplomacy for us to be represented in Mexico by a man whose political activities in this country have been, at the very least, open to question," said Smith in a statement.

Acheson replied with a crisp no when asked at a news conference if he thought the crime committee's report had an unfavorable effect on this country's relations with Mexico.

He said he had no plan to confer with O'Dwyer as a result of the committee's findings.

"Loaded" Question Evaded

Acheson said that if he thought there was any reason to remove an ambassador, he naturally would take the matter up with President Truman.

A reporter asked if he planned to take such a step with regard to O'Dwyer. Smiling, the Secretary said he had not comment on a loaded question like that.

The President undoubtedly will be asked about O'Dwyer at his own news conference tomorrow.

He said on March 29 that he didn't contemplate any change in O'Dwyer's status. That was after the former Mayor had testified before the crime committee at a televised hearing in New York.

Senators Vote To Hear Dawson

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — A Senate Banking subcommittee voted today to hear White House Aide Donald Dawson at a public hearing beginning May 10.

The subcommittee has charged Dawson with wielding outside influence on RFC loans. Dawson has remained silent but President Truman called the charges asinine.

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark), the chairman, said the group voted at a closed door session this afternoon to allow up to three days for the examination of Mr. Truman's patronage adviser.

Dawson, he said, will be questioned, "about his influence with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation" including his associations with members of the big lending agency's board of directors and borrowers.

Fulbright told reporters he still does not have written confirmation of Dawson's announced decision to finally face the subcommittee.

He said Dawson, in a phone call yesterday, had given no hint that he would set up any reservations against cross-examination by the subcommittee.

The Senator declared that on his own initiative as chairman he intends to reject a request from a television broadcasting company for permission to televise the hearing. He did not identify the company.

Three Young Sisters Die In Capitol Fire

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Three young sisters suffered fatal burns and nine persons were injured today in a fire that swept through a three-story rooming house.

The dead: Hattie Butler, 6, and her sisters, Margaret, 5, and Barbara, 4.

Their parents, Paul Butler and Mrs. Evelyn Butler, were among the injured.

Most of those injured were hurt in jumping from windows. All were negroes.

Native Of Japan Is Named "Catholic Mother Of 1951"

NEW YORK, May 2 (INS) —Mrs. Teresa Matsudaira, Seattle, a native of Japan, and mother of 13 children, was announced today as the "Catholic Mother of 1951" by the National Catholic Conference on Family Life.

The announcement was made by Mrs. John S. Reilly, conference president, who said that Mrs. Matsudaira's three older boys are veterans of World War II and one daughter died in childhood.

Mrs. Matsudaira, and her husband, Thomas Tokuisha Matsudaira, a Seattle restaurant worker, are natives of Kanazawa, Japan. They were married in Japan and a short time later came to the U. S., where their first child was born in 1922.

The family, like all other Japanese, was interned in 1942 at a camp near Hunt, Idaho, when the war with Japan raged.

The winning mother was converted to the Catholic faith in 1929 and her husband, in 1942. Mrs. Matsudaira said she became interested in the Catholic faith when she sent her children to the Maryknoll parish school in Seattle and "the children told me about God and Heaven."

Matsudaira was asked about the problem of providing for such a large family, and one of the sons replied: "Well you can say it really isn't cheaper by the dozen."

Mrs. Matsudaira will receive a gold medal in Seattle on May 13, Mother's Day, which also marks the close of National Family Week.

Ridgway Says He Has Proof Korean Reds Aggressors

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway sent a special report to the United Nations today asserting he had obtained documentary proof that the North Koreans were the aggressors against South Korea.

The report was the first received here from Ridgway since he succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur as U. N. commander in Korea. It was dated May 2 and dealt exclusively with the discovery of two military orders issued shortly before the Korean fighting started last June 25.

Ridgway said the orders provided clear proof that the Communist attack "was carefully prepared and carried out in accordance with a deliberate and preconceived plan for the conquest of the Republic of Korea."

120,000 Tons Sent To China Since War

LONDON, May 2 (AP)—The Colonial Office disclosed today British Malaya sold 120,000 tons of rubber to Communist China and 40,400 tons to Soviet Russia in the nine months ended in March—all since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Angry words on the handling of this strategic material bounced about parliament. The sales to Red China had increased heavily since United Nations forces undertook to stop Communist aggression in Korea. During all 1949, Malaya sent only 27,500 tons to China.

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill and Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell tangled in the House of Commons.

The storm apparently caught Shinwell by surprise. He ducked and parried some of the questions hurled at him from the Conservative benches.

Conference Took No Action

The rubber shipment figures were given by T. F. Cook, undersecretary of the Colonial Office, in reply to a question. A. G. Bottomley, secretary for overseas trade, reported that no steps were taken by the recent rubber conference in Rome to prevent the export of rubber to the Communist sphere.

No one outside the Communist world officially knows what happens to rubber landed in China, but it is required for tires and scores of other military needs.

The storm in Commons was touched off after Shinwell reported that the fighting in Korea "has entered a new and possibly critical phase." He said British casualties from the new push by the Chinese Communists totaled 48 dead, 223 wounded and 803 missing.

Charges Still Sent To China

Independent Raymond Blackburn charged that, between January and March, Britain "supplied the Chinese with thousands of tons of steel, with locomotives, ships and aircraft."

"Is it not high time we ceased to supply the people again whom our boys are fighting in Korea?" he asked.

Declaring Blackburn's statement inaccurate, Shinwell said:

"For several months we have placed an embargo on exports of strategic materials to China. We have done everything possible to prevent strategic materials from reaching China which could be employed against our forces."

Senate Demos Talk, Prevent Vote On Move

Neely Says GOP "Using" General

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Senate Democrats, after using filibuster tactics, tonight blocked a Republican move for wide open hearings on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ouster.

The Senate, on a vote of 42 to 40, recessed at 8:40, E.S.T., without reaching a vote on a Republican motion that MacArthur be heard in open committee session. He is due to start testifying tomorrow at 9 a. m., E.S.T., behind closed doors.

The recess put off any action on the motion until at least 11 a. m. (EST), tomorrow two hours after MacArthur is due to start testifying.

All Republicans voting opposed recessing while all Democrats voted to recess, except Sen. McCarran of Nevada who sided with Republicans as he had on earlier tests.

Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said Republicans will continue the fight for public sessions.

GOP lawmakers fought hard to strip the secrecy from MacArthur's testimony before the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, while the bitter Truman-MacArthur policy dispute gained headway with the release of a secret report on the MacArthur-Truman conference on Wake Island last October.

Neely Assails GOP

But the Democrats were determined to keep the five-star General's testimony behind closed doors, saying that otherwise the nation's security would be violated. They said everything that did not violate security would be made public.

Sen. Neely (D-WVa) and Kerr (D-Okla) jumped into the talkfest which hog-tied the Republicans in their efforts to get a vote on a resolution calling for an open hearing.

Neely accused Republicans of using MacArthur as a political tool. He also spent a long time in a filibustering speech about "home rule" for the District of Columbia. Kerr used up his first hour going over, in detail, a tiff he once had with Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich), sponsor of the GOP move for open hearings.

An effort was made to compromise the argument by permitting senators to hear MacArthur even though they are not members of the two committees which will conduct the inquiry.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) said the combined committees over which he will preside may meet 15 minutes before MacArthur's scheduled appearance tomorrow to try to decide whether to admit other senators to the hearing.

Demos Caught By Surprise

But Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican leader, declared the GOP lawmakers would not be satisfied with such a compromise.

The GOP maneuver to bring the MacArthur hearing into the open caught democrats by surprise.

The move was made in the form of a resolution by Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich) calling for a public hearing.

But under the parliamentary situation, the resolution could not

U. S. To Demand China Embargo

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—The United States will call tomorrow for a world-wide embargo on Red China to stop shipment of supplies for making atomic weapons and on all other war materials, informed quarters said tonight.

The U. S. ideas will be put in a secret meeting of the U. N. Committee on Additional Collective Measures, which is the technical name of the group studying punishments against Communist China. The committee will meet at 2 p. m. E.S.T.

Ambassador Ernest A. Gross, deputy United States delegate, was said to have been busy sounding out delegates on the committee about the American ideas. He was said to be advocating an embargo by all U. N. countries on everything that Red China could use to make atomic weapons—if Red China ever is in position to make them—and on other weapons and war materials.

This action would come in the form of a recommendation by the General Assembly to all U. N. members, it was said. The United States already has clamped severe restrictions on shipments to Red China and is asking other countries to do the same.

Reds Prepare To Renew Drive

Clear And Sound Foreign Policy Urged By C. Of C.

Calls For Disclosure Of "Essential Facts"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The U. S. Chamber of Commerce today called for an end to the "frustration, uncertainty and political partisanship indicated in our present foreign policy."

The 2,500 delegates to the chamber's annual meeting asked in a resolution for "full disclosure of the essential facts," so that there can be an informed public opinion, and then for development of a "sound foreign policy x x x without regard to partisan politics."

Hulcy Elected President

This resolution, unanimously approved, was offered from the floor by Powell C. Groner of Kansas City, newly-elected vice president of the chamber, who said that from the facts so far given it is difficult to tell whether the country has any clear foreign policy.

Groner's resolution said the nation should have a policy "to protect and preserve the best interests of all the people of the U. S. and of those other free peoples of the world who are prepared to cooperate fully with us in preserving the fundamental constitutional principles upon which this nation was founded."

Dechard H. Hulcy, Dallas, Texas, president of the Lone Star Gas Co., was elected president of the chamber. The self-educated, 59-year-old Hulcy also is president of the American Gas Association, which speaks for the gas utility industry.

Johnston Paints Rosy Picture

Hulcy succeeds Otto A. Seyferth, Muskegon, Mich.

But he said a lot of hard work and sacrifice will be needed to keep it that color.

Johnston promised that the government will hold the dam against "a new inflation flood" expected about Christmas when the full force of the arms production program makes itself felt in greater buying power.

Md. Air National Guard To Get Jet Planes Soon

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP)—Swift jet fighter planes will soon add their punch to Maryland's Air National Guard, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord said today.

The State Adjutant General said that equipping the Maryland unit with jets is part of an overall plan for improving air defense along the Atlantic coast.

Three Enemy Divisions May Assault Seoul

Van Fleet Claims "Great Victory"

TOKYO, Thursday, May 3 (AP) — The Reds today were reported getting ready to renew their bogged-down spring offensive in Korea with a three-division assault on Seoul.

The Allied field commander proclaimed the first round of the big Red drive a great Allied victory but warned that bigger blows possibly were to come.

Today intelligence officers on the western front told AP Correspondent George McArthur of reports that two North Korean divisions and a Chinese Red division were to be hurled at Seoul.

These forces were regrouping out of range of Allied artillery which helped blow up the Communist timetable to capture the Korean capital by May Day.

Red Night Fighters Appear

So were other Red buildup forces in the center where a new attack also was expected.

Communist night fighter planes were definitely identified in action over Korea last night for the first time in the war.

A U. S. B-26 bomber crew reported it was attacked by three propeller-driven Communist planes over North Korea as it dropped flares.

The Americans said their plane was not damaged. They said they may have hit one of the attacking planes in the brief fight.

The Reds, having lost more than 75,000 men in the first round of their offensive, played it so cautious Wednesday that only 395 were killed or wounded in ground action all across Korea.

This Eighth Army estimate was the lowest for a single day in weeks.

Wednesday's biggest action was a thunderous artillery duel northwest of Seoul. The Allies won it. After the Chinese opened up with hundreds of shells on United Nations positions, the big Allied guns replied and silenced the foe's batteries.

Allied planes — carrier and land-based — ranged the width of the peninsula and far to the north in stepped-up raids on Red troop concentrations, transport lines, ammunition dumps and warehouses. More than 450 miles of rail lines were ripped up by Navy planes alone Wednesday.

Cruiser Shells Reds

An unidentified plane dropped four bombs today a few thousand yards in front of U. N. positions in Central Korea near Chunchon. It was not determined immediately if the plane was Communist or Allied.

Pilots of Allied carrier-based planes claimed they killed 133 Reds Wednesday in close combat support missions.

House Cuts Fund For Interior Dept.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The House today passed a sharply trimmed Interior Department money bill allowing the department $496,764,500 for the year starting July 1.

This amount was about 11 per cent less than requested by the administration.

The cut was the biggest made by the House in any of the money bills passed this year. These bills include those providing funds for the Treasury, Post Office, and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Administration.

Biggest cuts were in Reclamation Bureau construction funds, reduced $10,190,000 from the $207,190,000 requested.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

West Virginia Bank Robbed Third Time Since November

WINONA, W. Va., May 2 (AP)Two young men wearing Indian war paint and brandishing guns held up the Winona National Bank shortly before closing time today and escaped with $15,500.

It was the third time since last November that the bank has been held up.

Paul Beresford of the Mount Hope Insurance Company gave the estimate of loot.

State police earlier had fixed the amount at between $40,000 and $45,000, based upon what is usually in the bank tills at that hour of the day.

Investigators said the two men entered the bank shortly before 1:45 p. m., one waving a sawed-off rifle, the other brandishing a cocked pistol. They forced Cashier J. R. Hisey to turn over all the loose cash in the bank to them.

They fled in a red sedan parked outside the bank, accompanied by a blonde girl who waited in the car during the robbery. They were last seen heading toward Route 60. State police immediately set up road blocks.

Israel Reports Syrians Driven Out Of Territory

TEL AVIV, Israel, May 2 (AP)—Syrian forces which penetrated into Israel's territory today were driven back into Syria tonight, an Israeli military spokesman announced.

The Israeli counterattack, the spokesman said, was directed against regular forces of the Syrian army and Syrian "irregulars" who, during the day, had occupied a two-mile stretch of the demilitarized zone along the border.

He claimed the Syrians had also penetrated into Israel beyond the demilitarized zone.

The spokesman said Israeli troops remained on their own territory and that all was quiet tonight in the trouble area.

The disputed territory is north of the Sea of Galilee and was demilitarized under the United Nations-sponsored truce between Jews and Arabs.

(At Lake Success, Israel charged Syria with aggression. Her representative, Abba Eban, demanded immediate action by the Security Council. The Israeli troops were reported to have suffered three killed and one wounded in the first hours of the shooting.)

A month ago, seven Israeli policemen were shot to death on patrol in another frontier area, southeast of the Sea of Galilee, and Israeli warplanes bombed Syrian-held points in retaliation.

For more than a week, things had been quiet in the frontier zone where, over Syrian objections, Israel is draining the Huleh swamps for farm land.

Syria contends that Israeli development work in the demilitarized zone and removal of 650 Arabs from the area violates the armistice which ended the Syrian-Israeli phase of the Palestine War in 1948.

Commons Approves Health Service Bill

LONDON, Thursday, May 3 (AP)—Britain's socialist government fought off a revolt within its own ranks early today and pushed through its bill ending free spectacles and false teeth under the public health service.

Only three of a long list of opponents backed their protests by voting against the government in the final showdown in the House of Commons. The government measure was approved by 262 votes to 3. Many members did not vote.

The bill provides that Britons must pay half the costs of glasses and dentures which they have been getting for nothing since 1947.

"Farm Safety Week"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — President Truman today proclaimed the week of July 22 "National Farm Safety Week."

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today he sees no evidence that U. S.-Mexican relations have been hurt by the Senate Crime Committee's chiding of Ambassador William O'Dwyer.

And White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said he was unaware of any plan to recall O'Dwyer from his Mexico City post, as demanded by a number of Republicans following yesterday's publication of the crime committee's report.

The committee charged that O'Dwyer, while mayor of New York, associated with racketeers and failed to act effectively against big time lawbreakers. The report said his actions "impeded" some prosecutions and "contributed to the growth of ogranized crime."

Smith Wants O'Dwyer Fired

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ), a member of Foreign Relations Committee, added his voice today to the Republican clamor for O'Dwyer's dismissal as ambassador to Mexico.

"It is contrary to every good principle of democracy and diplomacy for us to be represented in Mexico by a man whose political activities in this country have been, at the very least, open to question," said Smith in a statement.

Acheson replied with a crisp no when asked at a news conference if he thought the crime committee's report had an unfavorable effect on this country's relations with Mexico.

He said he had no plan to confer with O'Dwyer as a result of the committee's findings.

"Loaded" Question Evaded

Acheson said that if he thought there was any reason to remove an ambassador, he naturally would take the matter up with President Truman.

A reporter asked if he planned to take such a step with regard to O'Dwyer. Smiling, the Secretary said he had not comment on a loaded question like that.

The President undoubtedly will be asked about O'Dwyer at his own news conference tomorrow.

He said on March 29 that he didn't contemplate any change in O'Dwyer's status. That was after the former Mayor had testified before the crime committee at a televised hearing in New York.

Senators Vote To Hear Dawson

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — A Senate Banking subcommittee voted today to hear White House Aide Donald Dawson at a public hearing beginning May 10.

The subcommittee has charged Dawson with wielding outside influence on RFC loans. Dawson has remained silent but President Truman called the charges asinine.

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark), the chairman, said the group voted at a closed door session this afternoon to allow up to three days for the examination of Mr. Truman's patronage adviser.

Dawson, he said, will be questioned, "about his influence with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation" including his associations with members of the big lending agency's board of directors and borrowers.

Fulbright told reporters he still does not have written confirmation of Dawson's announced decision to finally face the subcommittee.

He said Dawson, in a phone call yesterday, had given no hint that he would set up any reservations against cross-examination by the subcommittee.

The Senator declared that on his own initiative as chairman he intends to reject a request from a television broadcasting company for permission to televise the hearing. He did not identify the company.

Three Young Sisters Die In Capitol Fire

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Three young sisters suffered fatal burns and nine persons were injured today in a fire that swept through a three-story rooming house.

The dead: Hattie Butler, 6, and her sisters, Margaret, 5, and Barbara, 4.

Their parents, Paul Butler and Mrs. Evelyn Butler, were among the injured.

Most of those injured were hurt in jumping from windows. All were negroes.

Native Of Japan Is Named "Catholic Mother Of 1951"

NEW YORK, May 2 (INS) —Mrs. Teresa Matsudaira, Seattle, a native of Japan, and mother of 13 children, was announced today as the "Catholic Mother of 1951" by the National Catholic Conference on Family Life.

The announcement was made by Mrs. John S. Reilly, conference president, who said that Mrs. Matsudaira's three older boys are veterans of World War II and one daughter died in childhood.

Mrs. Matsudaira and her husband, Thomas Tokuisha Matsudaira, a Seattle restaurant worker, are natives of Kanazawa, Japan. They were married in Japan and a short time later came to the U. S., where their first child was born in 1922.

The family, like all other Japanese, was interned in 1942 at a camp near Hunt, Idaho, when the war with Japan raged.

The winning mother was converted to the Catholic faith in 1929 and her husband, in 1942. Mrs. Matsudaira said she became interested in the Catholic faith when she sent her children to the Maryknoll parish school in Seattle and "the children told me about God and Heaven."

Matsudaira was asked about the problem of providing for such a large family, and one of the sons replied: "Well you can say it really isn't cheaper by the dozen."

Mrs. Matsudaira will receive a gold medal in Seattle on May 13, Mother's Day, which also marks the close of National Family Week.

Ridgway Says He Has Proof Korean Reds Aggressors

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway sent a special report to the United Nations today asserting he had obtained documentary proof that the North Koreans were the aggressors against South Korea.

The report was the first received here from Ridgway since he succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur as U. N. commander in Korea. It was dated May 2 and dealt exclusively with the discovery of two military orders issued shortly before the Korean fighting started last June 25.

Ridgway said the orders provided clear proof that the Communist attack "was carefully prepared and carried out in accordance with a deliberate and preconceived plan for the conquest of the Republic of Korea."

120,000 Tons Sent To China Since War

LONDON, May 2 (AP)—The Colonial Office disclosed today British Malaya sold 120,000 tons of rubber to Communist China and 40,400 tons to Soviet Russia in the nine months ended in March—all since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Angry words on the handling of this strategic material bounced about parliament. The sales to Red China had increased heavily since United Nations forces undertook to stop Communist aggression in Korea. During all 1949, Malaya sent only 27,500 tons to China.

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill and Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell tangled in the House of Commons.

The storm apparently caught Shinwell by surprise. He ducked and parried some of the questions hurled at him from the Conservative benches.

Conference Took No Action

The rubber shipment figures were given by T. F. Cook, undersecretary of the Colonial Office, in reply to a question. A. G. Bottomley, secretary for overseas trade, reported that no steps were taken by the recent rubber conference in Rome to prevent the export of rubber to the Communist sphere.

No one outside the Communist world officially knows what happens to rubber landed in China, but it is required for tires and scores of other military needs.

The storm in Commons was touched off after Shinwell reported that the fighting in Korea "has entered a new and possibly critical phase." He said British casualties from the new push by the Chinese Communists totaled 48 dead, 223 wounded and 803 missing.

Charges Still Sent To China

Independent Raymond Blackburn charged that, between January and March, Britain "supplied the Chinese with thousands of tons of steel, with locomotives, ships and aircraft."

"Is it not high time we ceased to supply the people again whom our boys are fighting in Korea?" he asked.

Declaring Blackburn's statement inaccurate, Shinwell said:

"For several months we have placed an embargo on exports of strategic materials to China. We have done everything possible to prevent strategic materials from reaching China which could be employed against our forces."

Senate Demos Talk, Prevent Vote On Move

Neely Says GOP "Using" General

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Senate Democrats, after using filibuster tactics, tonight blocked a Republican move for wide open hearings on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ouster.

The Senate, on a vote of 42 to 40, recessed at 8:40, E.S.T., without reaching a vote on a Republican motion that MacArthur be heard in open committee session. He is due to start testifying tomorrow at 9 a. m., E.S.T., behind closed doors.

The recess put off any action on the motion until at least 11 a. m. (EST), tomorrow two hours after MacArthur is due to start testifying.

All Republicans voting opposed recessing while all Democrats voted to recess, except Sen. McCarran of Nevada who sided with Republicans as he had on earlier tests.

Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, said Republicans will continue the fight for public sessions.

GOP lawmakers fought hard to strip the secrecy from MacArthur's testimony before the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, while the bitter Truman-MacArthur policy dispute gained headway with the release of a secret report on the MacArthur-Truman conference on Wake Island last October.

Neely Assails GOP

But the Democrats were determined to keep the five-star General's testimony behind closed doors, saying that otherwise the nation's security would be violated. They said everything that did not violate security would be made public.

Sen. Neely (D-WVa) and Kerr (D-Okla) jumped into the talkfest which hog-tied the Republicans in their efforts to get a vote on a resolution calling for an open hearing.

Neely accused Republicans of using MacArthur as a political tool. He also spent a long time in a filibustering speech about "home rule" for the District of Columbia. Kerr used up his first hour going over, in detail, a tiff he once had with Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich), sponsor of the GOP move for open hearings.

An effort was made to compromise the argument by permitting senators to hear MacArthur even though they are not members of the two committees which will conduct the inquiry.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) said the combined committees over which he will preside may meet 15 minutes before MacArthur's scheduled appearance tomorrow to try to decide whether to admit other senators to the hearing.

Demos Caught By Surprise

But Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican leader, declared the GOP lawmakers would not be satisfied with such a compromise.

The GOP maneuver to bring the MacArthur hearing into the open caught democrats by surprise.

The move was made in the form of a resolution by Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich) calling for a public hearing.

But under the parliamentary situation, the resolution could not

U. S. To Demand China Embargo

LAKE SUCCESS, May 2 (AP)—The United States will call tomorrow for a world-wide embargo on Red China to stop shipment of supplies for making atomic weapons and on all other war materials, informed quarters said tonight.

The U. S. ideas will be put in a secret meeting of the U. N. Committee on Additional Collective Measures, which is the technical name of the group studying punishments against Communist China. The committee will meet at 2 p. m. E.S.T.

Ambassador Ernest A. Gross, deputy United States delegate, was said to have been busy sounding out delegates on the committee about the American ideas. He was said to be advocating an embargo by all U. N. countries on everything that Red China could use to make atomic weapons—if Red China ever is in position to make them—and on other weapons and war materials.

This action would come in the form of a recommendation by the General Assembly to all U. N. members, it was said. The United States already has clamped severe restrictions on shipments to Red China and is asking other countries to do the same.

Peron's Claim Of Atomic Blast Called 'Hot Air'

NEW YORK, (INS)—A world-famous Viennese nuclear physicist believes that the atomic explosion which President Juan Peron claims was successfully achieved in Argentina by an Austrian scientist is just a lot of "hot air."

Professor Hans Thirring, director of theoretical physics at the University of Vienna, writing in the May issue of United Nations World magazine, said the chances are 99 to 1 that the atomic explosion occurred "only in the imagination of a crank or a fraud."

The professor suggested that Austrian Ronald Ritcher who was said by President Peron to have achieved the demonstration, may be the same man who appeared in Vienna in 1950 with a quack demonstration of a thermal-nuclear atomic explosion—one which relies on heat to trip the explosion and keep it going.

Professor Thirring quoted a colleague who recalled a student named Ronald Ritcher as saying:

"Richter, who took his degree with the well-known experimental physicist, Rausch Von Trauberburg, was a peculiar student noted for fantastic ideas and eccentric behavior.

"Since his graduation 30 years ago he has produced no scientific achievement which has reached the attention of specialists."

But Professor Thirring observed: "On the other hand, the explosion in Argentina, and the one the strange Austrian attempted in Vienna, are of a type which has baffled the best scientists to date, despite their possession of all the instruments and facilities for experimentation."

Professor Thirring said that "power-thirsy dictators" are easy prey to cranks and swindlers who seemingly place in their hands the means to unlimited strength.

Malted Milks Get Youth Into Army

NEW YORK, (AP)—John Fitzpatrick, 19, was hungry for Army life. But not for malted milks.

When he showed up at the Army induction center last month, he weighed only 101—four pounds under the Army minimum.

But he came back this week humming a triumphant tune.

Stripped to his shorts, he stepped on the scales and registered 115 pounds. The induction sergeant stepped back in amazement—a gain of 14 pounds in 18 days!

Then the sergeant noticed a bulge around Fitzpatrick's waist beneath his shorts. An inspection revealed a belt hung with 13 half-pound lead sinkers, and a three-inch strip of iron.

When these were removed, Fitzpatrick was back down to 104, one pound too light.

"Go out and eat a big meal," the sergeant suggested.

"I've got no appetite," Fitzpatrick said. "I ate all the breakfast I could, and some malted milks besides."

But he went anyway. When he came back, the indicator just hit 105, enough for him to be sworn in. How did he do it?

"More malted milks," Fitzpatrick said, burping.

Scientists Find Method To Remove Calcium Rapidly From Blood Stream

YELLOW SPRINGS, O.—(AP)—A method of removing calcium rapidly and continuously from the blood stream of animals is reported by Fels Research Institute scientists.

The development, the scientists said, "makes it possible to extend the study of the functions of calcium in the living animal."

It also may possibly be extended in the future to control the level of other chemical elements in the blood stream. For example, they pointed out, it may be possible to remove certain poisonous substances from blood when the kidney fails.

Dr. Lester W. Sontag is director of Fels Institute, located at Antioch College here.

The experiments originally were conducted to find a way to keep blood incoaguable while being pumped in a mechanical heart-lung machine developed at Fels. The successful by-passing of blood of dogs around the heart and lungs by using this machine was reported last December.

When the tests were started it already was known that calcium-free blood cannot clot. The problem was to find a means of keeping calcium out of the blood. (Calcium salts are an esstnial part of the bodies of most plants and animals).

This finally was accomplished by circulating the blood through a plastic chamber filled with an ion exchange resin similar to that used in ordinary water softening equipment. The filter and chamber were conceived and constructed by Fels scientists.

The Fels experiments also showed that, when the animal body is almost completely depleted of calcium, the heart stops pumping. But it can be completely restored to normal by a single injection of calcium.

The effect on the heart, however, can be completely prevented by the slow infusin of a calcium solution into a vein. In this way the blood outside the body can be kept calcium free while blood within the body remains normal.

Professor Thirring quoted a colleague who recalled a student named Ronald Ritcher as saying:

"Richter, who took his degree with the well-known experimental physicist, Rausch Von Trauberburg, was a peculiar student noted for fantastic ideas and eccentric behavior.

"Since his graduation 30 years ago he has produced no scientific achievement which has reached the attention of specialists."

But Professor Thirring observed: "On the other hand, the explosion in Argentina, and the one the strange Austrian attempted in Vienna, are of a type which has baffled the best scientists to date, despite their possession of all the instruments and facilities for experimentation."

Professor Thirring said that "power-thirsy dictators" are easy prey to cranks and swindlers who seemingly place in their hands the means to unlimited strength.

Malted Milks Get Youth Into Army

NEW YORK, (AP)—John Fitzpatrick, 19, was hungry for Army life. But not for malted milks.

When he showed up at the Army induction center last month, he weighed only 101—four pounds under the Army minimum.

But he came back this week humming a triumphant tune.

Stripped to his shorts, he stepped on the scales and registered 115 pounds. The induction sergeant stepped back in amazement—a gain of 14 pounds in 18 days!

Then the sergeant noticed a bulge around Fitzpatrick's waist beneath his shorts. An inspection revealed a belt hung with 13 half-pound lead sinkers, and a three-inch strip of iron.

When these were removed, Fitzpatrick was back down to 104, one pound too light.

"Go out and eat a big meal," the sergeant suggested.

"I've got no appetite," Fitzpatrick said. "I ate all the breakfast I could, and some malted milks besides."

But he went anyway. When he came back, the indicator just hit 105, enough for him to be sworn in. How did he do it?

"More malted milks," Fitzpatrick said, burping.

Scientists Find Method To Remove Calcium Rapidly From Blood Stream

YELLOW SPRINGS, O.—(AP)—A method of removing calcium rapidly and continuously from the blood stream of animals is reported by Fels Research Institute scientists.

The development, the scientists said, "makes it possible to extend the study of the functions of calcium in the living animal."

It also may possibly be extended in the future to control the level of other chemical elements in the blood stream. For example, they pointed out, it may be possible to remove certain poisonous substances from blood when the kidney fails.

Dr. Lester W. Sontag is director of Fels Institute, located at Antioch College here.

The experiments originally were conducted to find a way to keep blood incoaguable while being pumped in a mechanical heart-lung machine developed at Fels. The successful by-passing of blood of dogs around the heart and lungs by using this machine was reported last December.

When the tests were started it already was known that calcium-free blood cannot clot. The problem was to find a means of keeping calcium out of the blood. (Calcium salts are an esstnial part of the bodies of most plants and animals).

This finally was accomplished by circulating the blood through a plastic chamber filled with an ion exchange resin similar to that used in ordinary water softening equipment. The filter and chamber were conceived and constructed by Fels scientists.

The Fels experiments also showed that, when the animal body is almost completely depleted of calcium, the heart stops pumping. But it can be completely restored to normal by a single injection of calcium.

The effect on the heart, however, can be completely prevented by the slow infusin of a calcium solution into a vein. In this way the blood outside the body can be kept calcium free while blood within the body remains normal.

Freedom From Fear

A knock on the door in the middle of the night can sound like thunder. It can be loud enough to hurt a man's ears and break his heart, if he lives in a police state. For there it may be the police come to take him to prison for something he believes or doesn't believe, or something he said or is supposed to have thought. Hungary's release of Robert Vogeler brings reminders of what a man's rights mean to a police state.

Vogeler, American businessman, heard the knock on the door in the still of night; he was taken to prison and accused of many crimes against the Hungarian state. He was sentenced to 15 years, and was released after 17 months only as a result of a deal between the American and Hungarian governments.

Vogeler has now warned his countrymen that what happened to him can happen to anyone. He said that a man needs the right to say what he thinks and go where he likes without the fear of being taken from his home during the night to face accusations before policemen and officials.

We should heed the warning that Vogeler gives us. We need to guard against the Communists whose philosophy imprisoned Vogeler. We must also be sure that in guarding ourselves we do not destroy the freedom we would defend. The knock on the door in the dark of night is a terrible and a hateful thing to a man within who must be afraid. It does not matter to him whether the knock is made by a Communist policeman, the leader of a lynch mob, or the representative of any other kind of government which has concluded that the way to deal with opposition is to suppress it by force. The name given to the politics of a police state matters little to its hapless citizens.

The words of Vogeler sum it up well: "You never realize what freedom means until you lose it."

War's Consequences

The United States Army has a civil assistance section. Its triple aim is the prevention of "starvation, disease and unrest." In Korea the section has had plenty to do.

The Korean program is not an innovation. Wherever the Army has gone, in Cuba, the Philippines, the Canal Zone, in North Africa, Italy and Germany, it has introduced American techniques for dealing with endemic disease. To the Army's credit are such notable achievements as the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and malaria and improvements in the control of typhoid.

In Korea millions have been vaccinated against smallpox and inoculated against typhoid and typhus. Plans are to complete giving these treatments to the 22,000,000 inhabitants of South Korea by the end of July. In the ports 2,000,000 are being inoculated against cholera. A campaign against diphtheria, with all children under 10 being immunized, is planned. A program of malaria control is under way.

In part this effort is humanitarian, its aim the conservation of human life. In part it is dictated by self-interest, for epidemics arising in civilian populations invariably spread to the troops.

However, the Army can do little about tuberculosis, a disease which is not subject to mass treatment. It is bred by poverty and inadequate sanitation. Moreover, the fighting is intensifying poverty and its consequences. Sewers, water systems and other sanitary facilities are the first to be destroyed when a city is attacked.

War invariably takes the lives of a nation's healthiest young men, thereby weakening the next generation and, in Korea's case, impairing its agricultural manpower. This, in turn, brings the certain prospect of famine, a scourge as deadly as the most virulent disease.

All the Army's efforts cannot spare Korea the evil by-products of war, many of which are worse than war itself, for they persist long after the fighting ceases.

Golden Isolde

If the past, for no other reason than it is the past, is enveloped in a golden haze, then the Metropolitan Opera House has had not one, but a succession of "golden ages." This, of course, is not true within any range of accurate meaning.

Few are likely to quarrel with the assertion that at least one "golden age" extended from about 1900 to the outbreak of World War I in 1914. Caruso was at his peak then, Scotti was flourishing and the Wagnerian wing boasted of a number of women singers, whose performances remain unsurpassed.

Three might be mentioned—Johanna Gadski and Ernestine Schumann-Heink, both German, and Olive Fremstad, Swedish. The first two died long ago, and now death has come for the third, at 79, after a long retirement.

Fremstad was an outstanding Wagnerian soprano, whose greatest roles were Isolde and Brunnehilde. All of these women were trained in the grand manner of singing. Fremstad, who had come to the United States as a child, was a pupil of Lilli Lehman.

When Wagner was banned from the Metropolitan repertoire, in World War I, the preeminence of the German wing was obscured. Fremstad's farewell performance was given in 1914. Years later another Scandinavian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad, made an unforgettable Isolde, but those who heard Fremstad will remember her Isolde as having special qualities of charm and strength.

UN And The League

Nobody, even if pro-UN, can deny that most Americans are more skeptical about UN than when it set up shop in 1945. The optimists are hoping that the American people will before too long regain whatever confidence they once had in UN. The pessimists are predicting that most Americans will finally turn against it as they ultimately turned against the League of Nations.

How American public opinion felt about the League originally will never be known. Membership in the League with reservations was favored in 1920 by a clear majority of the Senators, even though not the necessary two-thirds. And if President Wilson had accepted certain of those reservations, the Senate, as is now known, would have foregone the others.

It is true that the Democratic party espoused the League without reservations in the 1920 election and was soundly trounced. But the Republicans were not unqualifiedly anti-League in the 1920 campaign; Senator Harding promised, if elected, to effect some "association of nations." By 1920 the Democratic Administration had become thoroughly unpopular on many scores — nobody can tell how many people voted Republican in 1920 even though favoring the League.

At all events, it cannot be denied that four years later American public opinion had become definitely anti-League.

How To Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Alcohol As A Way Out

THE chronic alcoholic is the problem child of medicine. In many respects the victim should be pitied rather than maligned. Such individuals are maladjusted and emotionally disturbed and are driven to drink as an escape from their conflicts and vexations.

The alcoholic makes a poor husband and father and frequently neglects not only his family but his business. Some are brilliant and, when on the wagon, are capable of doing exceptional work. Others are timid, docile, and highly conforming persons but sooner or later their anxieties and dilemmas become so overwhelming they cannot overcome the urge to forget it all by resorting to drink. During a spree, inhibitions are cast off and many slip deeper into the notch of degradation. These individuals evade their troubles by a flight into intemperance in contrast to neurotics who develop an illness. While under the influence, the alcoholic is able to do what he suppresses when sober; the one who beats his wife at that time probably would like to beat her when he is sober but doesn't dare.

All these factors make treatment formidable. The conflicts responsible for the alcoholic's reaction to life have existed so long they are forgotten. Deeply hidden, unconscious, unacceptable inclinations, wishes, and urges are involved which may be unethical or below our moral standards. Many of these motivating forces cannot be helped but the physician makes an attempt to correct marital incompatibilities, sexual maladjustments environmental and family problems, and difficulties with in-laws. Various agencies also offer assistance. Alcoholic Anonymous, for example, is valuable in the fight against alcoholism; this organization teaches the alcoholic to admit and confess his shortcomings and then to put himself in the hands of a higher Power.

Social drinking is not comparable to chronic alcoholism in severity yet the two cannot be divorced. Many topers were social drinkers at one time but this does not mean that all social drinkers will become chronic alcoholics. The social drinker should be on guard, however, especially when he becomes intoxicated occasionally to flee from reality or to do a better job of entertaining his friends.

On the other hand, many persons enjoy a cocktail or two for reasons that have nothing to do with their emotional system, escape from reality, or compulsions. Their drinking habits may be products of social or cultural influences. The French and Italians have a love of wine, particularly when the vintage is just right. The Irish liking for companionship and drinking go hand in hand and the German beer garden is traditional. Most of these individuals can take it or leave it alone, depending upon how they feel. It is advisable to watch out, however, when alcohol becomes a problem because in this transitional stage it is easy to progress from a problem drinker to a chronic alcoholic. Many authorities believe that the two are one and the same.

HANGOVERS

M. G. writes: The morning after the night before my fingers feel thick and I can't hold anything, not even a pencil. What is happening to me?

REPLY

Not having been there, I don't know but many drunks awaken the next morning with more than a hangover. Your trouble may represent neuritis or the effects of trauma or even sleeping with the arms overhead. "Saturday night paralysis" also should be considered. This condition comes from falling asleep in a chair, with one arm thrown over its back. Allergy and arthritis are additional possibilities.

COLD AND CIRCULATION

G. T. writes: Could frostbite of the shins cause Buerger's disease?

REPLY

No, but exposure to cold aggrevates most circulatory disorders, including Buerger's disease.

ITCH MITE

L. J. writes: Is scabies due to a germ or to vermin?

REPLY

DRUMS HEAL

M. R. writes: Do eardrums that have been punctured ever heal?

REPLY

Usually they do.

DISLOCATED HIP

K. W. writes: Every few weeks I get a kink in my right lower back and have trouble straightening up. At the same time the right hip seems to swing out of place and the left leg appears shorter than the right. Could you explain this condition?

REPLY

Maybe the hip is slipping out of place. At any rate, why not call your family physician the next time this happens?

DREW PEARSON on—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

House Committee Withholds Important Testimony On Chiang Kai-shek; Taft Found MacArthur Politically Cool; Herbert Hoover Had His General

WASHINGTON—Locked in the files of the House Foreign Affairs Committee is some dynamite-laden evidence by a former adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, which would be of great interest in the MacArthur-Truman debate if it were made public.

Secret testimony was given on April 6, 1949, before the Foreign Affairs Committee by Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, former military advisor to Chiang. At that time Barr testified, among other things, that Chiang's staff officers were incompetent, lazy, derelict and in some cases downright dishonest. He described the surrender of some Manchurian cities to the Communists by Chiang's generals as so suspicious as to raise possible doubt of a sell-out to the enemy. In some cases, Chiang's staff officers were not even present when the troops under them surrendered.

General Barr also told how great quantities of American equipment which we supplied the Nationalist forces fell into Communist hands, and in turn made the Red conquest of China much easier and quicker.

In one case a big Allied supply base at Chinchow was left virtually and mysteriously undefended. Considering the amount of American equipment stored there, the actions of the Nationalist Chinese had all the earmarks of a sellout to the Communists who shortly thereafter captured it. It was not long before all Manchuria fell to the Communists.

General Barr testified that he believed Chiang himself was honest, but that his troops, lacking leadership, long ago had lost the will to fight. For a while the war against the Communists on the Chinese mainland simply depended upon how rapidly Mao Tse-Tung's men wanted to travel.

For reasons best known to himself, John Kee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee has been sitting on this testimony for two years.

NOTE — Another witness who could shed great light on Chiang Kai-shek's fighting qualities and his real feeling toward the United States is Col. James McHugh, retired Marine Corps officer. McHugh was aide to Chiang Kai-shek during the war, speaks Chinese, and is one of the few Americans who have written a textbook in the Chinese language. Experts such as Colonel McHugh and General Barr, who have lived in China and know Chiang Kai-shek intimately, should be called as witnesses before the Armed Services Committee.

Taft And MacArthur

Friends of Senator Taft report that the Senator's visit with General MacArthur at the Waldorf Tower, New York, netted only two things—Taft's firm conviction that MacArthur meant what he said about keeping out of politics, and second, that the General could outtalk the rather loquacious Senator from Ohio.

Taft went to see MacArthur to find out discreetly whether the General had any political intentions; and second, if not, to lay some diplomatic groundwork so that the General might later get on the Taft bandwagon.

MacArthur was cordial, but politically negative. He gave Taft a shortened version of his congressional speech, quoting it in such verbatim detail that it almost seemed as if he had memorized it. Taft, who is no mean talker himself, could hardly get a word in edgewise.

Taft's friends say that he did not tell the General that he, the Senator, was a candidate for the Presidency though he did hint that the Republicans were most grateful to MacArthur for what he had done and that they would certainly want him to be a leading defense planner if they won in 1952.

However, MacArthur was noticeably cool toward every political overture and in effect repeated his ambition to "fade away."

History Repeats

Herbert Hoover, who has been the chief confidante of General MacArthur during the present big debate, paradoxically was on the other end of a somewhat similar situation when he was President of the United States.

Hoover made the mistake of ordering the court martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, a popular Marine Corps figure, after Butler had stated in a lecture that Benito Mussolini, then dictator of Italy, had run over a child with his car but failed to stop. General Butler's court martial was ordered after Italian Ambassador Di Martino had protested officially.

But immediately there arose a tremendous outcry from the American press and public, and for weeks Hoover was the butt of possibly more scathing criticism than Harry Truman.

The situation was somewhat comparable to the present MacArthur debate in that the admirals did not like General Butler any more than some of the leaders in the Pentagon love General MacArthur.

It was also significant that Hoover's popularity at that time had sunk to an extremely low ebb, comparable to that of Truman's today.

In the end, Hoover did what Harry Truman has not done. He abjectly surrendered and called off General Butler's court martial.

NOTE—Hoover privately has been something of an admirer of President Truman, extolled his virtues at a Gridiron Club dinner, and has expressed private appreciation of the fact that Truman brought him back to Washington in various advisory capacities after the 13-year, anti-Hoover boycott by FDR.

The British Position

A BY-PRODUCT of the MacArthur situation must be an investigation and re-study of our relations with Great Britain. For no matter how it is sliced, General Douglas MacArthur is a victim of the constant pressure of the British upon our State Department and President to have him recalled. Now that he has been officially humiliated, his program is being adopted even to the extent of giving Chiang Kai-shek $80,000,000.

The British attitude toward General MacArthur was in on manner a personal antipathy. MacArthur's attitude toward the Korean War ran counter to the British attitude, and they got their man.

But the American people have never had, from their own officials or the British, an explanation of precisely what the British position toward Asia is and why. Lewis W. Douglas, who is the foremost protagonist of British policy in this country, tried to explain it at the recent Associated Press luncheon. But what he said clarified nothing except that the British sought to keep India within the commonwealth and therefore sacrificed both China and the United States to that purpose.

Mr. Douglas gave no explanation as to the morality of such a position nor did he quiver that such a course has already cost the lives of 10,500 of our sons.

This also appears in the picture and cannot be ignored: British policy in China since 1842 has always been to recognize the de facto ruler of an area, even if that ruler was in rebellion against the established and recognized government. The theory was that trade must go on.

This was one reason why the British rather than the Japanese and Russians were the most disliked foreigners in China for a century: The Chinese assumption was that the British were always seeking to keep China divided and weak. In the great boycott of 1925, the object of the Chinese was to bring the British to heel, and when by 1927 they could show an appreciable success in that enterprise, the authority of the British Empire was damaged; its prestige in Asia was demolished.

British policy in China has been and is a mercantile policy. It is dominated by the great firms, Jardine, Matheson, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank, the P & O, the British-American Tobacco Company, and the shipping lines. These and other firms and the manufacturers who supply them have, in recent years, in effect been a cartel headed by Jardine's. They represent a huge investment and are paramount in empire trade.

They are willing to trade with anyone who can pay. This is, granted, a short-sighted policy, for when the Chinese Communists no longer need them, they will cast them aside. But who, on the other hand, can guarantee how long Soviet China will last and what its policies will be ten years from now? Therefore, why not go forward with trade as long as possible and wherever it is available?

If the British can hold their East Asian trade profitably, great losses elsewhere may be offset. But this is to be observed, namely, that the British will never be able to trade in areas held by Chiang Kai-shek, for he will know how to impose a boycott on British goods, similar to the one he imposed between 1925 and 1927. Therefore, if Chiang Kai-shek is restored anwhere to the mainland, it will be American traders who will benefit.

Throughout World War II and thereafter, it has been British policy to keep American traders out of Asia. They regarded that as their sphere and even took the position that if the United States wanted to restore Great Britain, we ought to be sympathetic to their trading aspirations. Our State Department has on the whole been sympathetic to this British point of view, as I have pointed out on several occasions, particularly in connection with such products as pottery and chinaware.

The British therefore have been pursuing an advantage in the Communist antagonism to the United States and in stimulating the antagonism of the Indians toward us.

This is not altogether speculative because events and forces clarified since June 25, 1950, have established this pattern of activity. Even to this day, British trade has continued with the Chinese Communists, British military goods being delivered to them for use in Korea, not only against Americans but against the British contingents there.

Matter Of Fact

By STEWART ALSOP

MacArthur, Taft, And Eisenhower

WASHINGTON

IT IS perfectly obvious that Sen. Robert A. Taft has bet his political shirt on Gen. Douglas MacArthur. And at least for the present, the bet seems to be paying off handsomely.

At first, Taft inclined to take a rather cautious line. But now, after consulting with MacArthur in the General's sanctuary in the Waldorf Towers, Taft has criticized Defense Secretary George Marshall and he has lambasted Gen. Omar Bradley and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who are much more dangerous MacArthur antagonists than President Truman. He has called for "a more aggressive war against China." And he has stated that we cannot hesitate to adopt the MacArthur program "simply because we fear that the Russians might come into the war."

For a man who was not long ago opposing the North Atlantic pact on the grounds that it might "provoke" the Soviets, this is going pretty far. The fact that Taft has gone so far must be considered in relation to the fact that Taft is an active candidate for the Presidential nomination — so active that Taft workers are already lining up delegates in pivotal states like Massachusetts. Thus it is only reasonable to assume that Taft is counting on his all-out commitment to MacArthur to lead to his own nomination, and to the final triumph of the Taft wing in the inner struggle within the Republican party.

Republicans Join Taft

Taft may be right. So far, two things have happened. There have been some muted protests from Republicans of the stripe of Senators Morse, Duff, and Saltonstall. But by and large, the Republicans in Congress have lined up solidly—much more solidly than on any other foreign policy issue—behind Taft. This has been a major victory for Taft.

This in turn has markedly reduced the chances of nominating Dwight D. Eisenhower on the Republican ticket, as the Republican backers of Eisenhower in Congress somberly agree. This has been another major victory for Taft, for the obvious reason that Eisenhower has been the chief obstacle to Taft's nomination.

It is true that a new obstacle has been erected, at least by Col. Robert McCormick of the Chicago "Daily Tribute." It would be interesting to know Taft's private reaction to McCormick's suggestion that Taft should take second place on a ticket headed by Gen. MacArthur. But in fact, it is hardly conceivable that the Republicans should nominate a man who would be almost 77 years old at the end of his first term.

Thus the MacArthur crisis would seem at first glance to be a tremendous bonanza for Sen. Taft. But it may not work out this way in the end. Much depends on how Gen. MacArthur, who has not been accustomed to answering searching questions, answers the very searching questions, which embattled Democrats on the Russell committee are steeling themselves to ask him. Much depends also on what Marshall and Bradley—who are by no means without a public following—have to say to the committee Advance hints from the Pentagon indicate that they will be, not bitter, but outspoken.

May Call Eisenhower

Finally, a great deal depends on whether Gen. Eisenhower is called home to testify. The chances seem a good deal better than even that this will happen at some point during "the great debate."

Eisenhower is of course too sensible to attack Gen. MacArthur or even to criticize openly the course MacArthur advocates. But his mere presence would underline the greatest weakness in that course. It may seem nonesense to label "isolationist" a policy which calls for "a more aggressive war against China." Yet the adjective is accurate in the sense that this course would isolate us from all our major allies. Thus MacArthur (who never mentioned our European allies in his speech) stands for the idea that allies are not essential, which is certainly one reason why he is acclaimed by Taft and all the former isolationists.

The political strength of the MacArthur-Taft program derives from the fact that everyone wants to end the Korean War, by winning it. But its weakness is that no one wants to end the Korean War by starting a much bigger one, which we should have to fight alone if only because our allies are not yet prepared to defend themselves. Eisenhower whose great mission is to help prepare our allies to defend themselves, is the very symbol of the idea that this country's allies in Western Europe are vital to our existence. Eisenhower's return to testify would serve as a very powerful reminder of the weakness in the course proposed by MacArthur and embraced by Taft.

Here it is well to remember that, if the public opinion polls are to be trusted at all, Eisenhower has a political following which dwarfs Taft's and even MacArthur's. It is well also to remember that, if Eisenhower were prepared to accept it, and Truman to offer it, Eisenhower could have the Democratic nomination on the traditional platter. This is something which the Republican leaders, possibly including Sen. Taft, are not likely to forget in their moments of sober reflection.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Who are the "presidential advisers" who keep feeding out misleading information about President Truman's relations with General MacArthur before the dismissal occured? Is it possible that persons interested in promoting differences between Mr. Truman and the former supreme commander in the Far East are now trying to defend their part in a serious political blunder?

These questions will be raised and can be answered now only by the Senate Investigating Committee. Since they do not involve any "security" information, it ought to be possible to get the facts.

Meanwhile, it is curious that, despite an explicitly worded denial by General MacArthur that he never saw or read the so-called peace offer which the United Nations was reported to have been preparing last March, the White House, through the medium of so-called "presidential advisers," is placed in the position now of saying that he did receive the document.

Say Message Was Sent

The statement in question was circulated to the 14 governments whose troops are serving in Korea. A Washington dispatch last Saturday—16 days after MacArthur's denial—stated that, "according to the President's advisers," the proposed UN statement was "teletyped to MacArthur in Tokyo with the clear notation that this was to be a presidential statement which he should see in advance so that he could be guided accordingly. According to the President's advisers, the General not only rushed in to forestall Truman but actually appropriated some of the language in the document."

The foregoing charge was first made before President Truman dismissed General MacArthur. It appeared in the April 2 issue of the magazine "Newsweek," which said:

"It (the proposed UN statement) had been sent to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who in turn dispatched it to General MacArthur for his observations. To the complete consternation of the White House and the State Department, MacArthur adopt the essential points of the statement in his own declaration of March 24."

Apparently the substance of the magazine article was telegraphed to General MacArthur, who telegraphed to "Newsweek" a denial which that magazine, with commendable fairness, publicized in a full-page advertisement in the newspapers of April 12. General MacArthur's radiogram read as follows:

"The statement contained in your issue of April second to the effect that prior to the issuance of my statement on March twenty-fourth of the military situation in Korea I had been furnished a copy of a policy statement by the President cleared by the governments having military forces in Korea is entirely without basis in fact. I have never seen such a statement and do not know if it even exists. Please publish this in the interest of truth."

Yet, despite this explicit denial some White House advisers keep on saying that MacArthur did receive a copy of the proposed UN statement. The coming hearings will certainly establish the fact that the Joint Chiefs did not send the proposed statement. What the Joint Chiefs did send on March 20 was a brief message merely advising the General that the State Department was "planning presidential announcement shortly that, with clearings of bulk of South Korea of aggressors, United Nations now prepared to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea." The message added that a "strong UN feeling persists that further diplomatic effort toward settlement should be made before any advance with major forces north of the 38th Parellel."

No Evidence In Record

General MacArthur, as a field commander, had a right at any time to propose a truce to the Communist commander, which he did on March 24. This right has since been publicly affirmed by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the UN.

There is absolutely no evidence in the record that the Joint Chiefs sent the text of any proposed UN declaration to General MacArthur. There is some doubt whether they themselves even saw it. The General's statement of March 24 addressed to the Chinese was about 600 words long, and in that entire statement only one sentence occurs which bears any similarity to the Joint Chiefs' message which the General did receive. He said merely that his forces "have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces." This is hardly an observation that would occur only to Washington planners. For it is a statement of the obvious in the Korean military situation as of March 24.

Why the White House insists on feeding out stories that General MacArthur saw a copy of the proposed UN declaration, when there is no record that it ever was sent to him, is one of the mysteries which, if cleared up, may throw light on the identity of the persons who influenced the President to dismiss MacArthur.

Freedom From Fear

A knock on the door in the middle of the night can sound like thunder. It can be loud enough to hurt a man's ears and break his heart, if he lives in a police state. For there it may be the police come to take him to prison for something he believes or doesn't believe, or something he said or is supposed to have thought. Hungary's release of Robert Vogeler brings reminders of what a man's rights mean to a police state.

Vogeler, American businessman, heard the knock on the door in the still of night; he was taken to prison and accused of many crimes against the Hungarian state. He was sentenced to 15 years, and was released after 17 months only as a result of a deal between the American and Hungarian governments.

Vogeler has now warned his countrymen that what happened to him can happen to anyone. He said that a man needs the right to say what he thinks and go where he likes without the fear of being taken from his home during the night to face accusations before policemen and officials.

We should heed the warning that Vogeler gives us. We need to guard against the Communists whose philosophy imprisoned Vogeler. We must also be sure that in guarding ourselves we do not destroy the freedom we would defend. The knock on the door in the dark of night is a terrible and a hateful thing to a man within who must be afraid. It does not matter to him whether the knock is made by a Communist policeman, the leader of a lynch mob, or the representative of any other kind of government which has concluded that the way to deal with opposition is to suppress it by force. The name given to the politics of a police state matters little to its hapless citizens.

The words of Vogeler sum it up well: "You never realize what freedom means until you lose it."

War's Consequences

The United States Army has a civil assistance section. Its triple aim is the prevention of "starvation, disease and unrest." In Korea the section has had plenty to do.

The Korean program is not an innovation. Wherever the Army has gone, in Cuba, the Philippines, the Canal Zone, in North Africa, Italy and Germany, it has introduced American techniques for dealing with endemic disease. To the Army's credit are such notable achievements as the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and malaria and improvements in the control of typhoid.

In Korea millions have been vaccinated against smallpox and inoculated against typhoid and typhus. Plans are to complete giving these treatments to the 22,000,000 inhabitants of South Korea by the end of July. In the ports 2,000,000 are being inoculated against cholera. A campaign against diphtheria, with all children under 10 being immunized, is planned. A program of malaria control is under way.

In part this effort is humanitarian, its aim the conservation of human life. In part it is dictated by self-interest, for epidemics arising in civilian populations invariably spread to the troops.

However, the Army can do little about tuberculosis, a disease which is not subject to mass treatment. It is bred by poverty and inadequate sanitation. Moreover, the fighting is intensifying poverty and its consequences. Sewers, water systems and other sanitary facilities are the first to be destroyed when a city is attacked.

War invariably takes the lives of a nation's healthiest young men, thereby weakening the next generation and, in Korea's case, impairing its agricultural manpower. This, in turn, brings the certain prospect of famine, a scourge as deadly as the most virulent disease.

All the Army's efforts cannot spare Korea the evil by-products of war, many of which are worse than war itself, for they persist long after the fighting ceases.

Golden Isolde

If the past, for no other reason than it is the past, is enveloped in a golden haze, then the Metropolitan Opera House has had not one, but a succession of "golden ages." This, of course, is not true within any range of acourate meaning.

Few are likely to quarrel with the assertion that at least one "golden age" extended from about 1900 to the outbreak of World War I in 1914. Caruso was at his peak then, Scotti was flourishing and the Wagnerian wing boasted of a number of women singers, whose performances remain unsurpassed.

Three might be mentioned—Johanna Gadski and Ernestine Schumann-Heink, both German, and Olive Fremstad, Swedish. The first two died long ago, and now death has come for the third, at 79, after a long retirement.

Fremstad was an outstanding Wagnerian soprano, whose greatest roles were Isolde and Brunnehilde. All of these women were trained in the grand manner of singing. Fremstad, who had come to the United States as a child, was a pupil of Lilli Lehman.

When Wagner was banned from the Metropolitan repertoire, in World War I, the preeminence of the German wing was obscured. Fremstad's farewell performance was given in 1914. Years later another Scandinavian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad, made an unforgettable Isolde, but those who heard Fremstad will remember her Isolde as having special qualities of charm and strength.

UN And The League

Nobody, even if pro-UN, can deny that most Americans are more skeptical about UN than when it set up shop in 1945. The optimists are hoping that the American people will before too long regain whatever confidence they once had in UN. The pessimists are predicting that most Americans will finally turn against it as they ultimately turned against the League of Nations.

How American public opinion felt about the League originally will never be known. Membership in the League with reservations was favored in 1920 by a clear majority of the Senators, even though not the necessary two-thirds. And if President Wilson had accepted certain of those reservations, the Senate, as is now known, would have foregone the others.

It is true that the Democratic party espoused the League without reservations in the 1920 election and was soundly trounced. But the Republicans were not unqualifiedly anti-League in the 1920 campaign; Senator Harding promised, if elected, to effect some "association of nations." By 1920 the Democratic Administration had become thoroughly unpopular on many scores — nobody can tell how many people voted Republican in 1920 even though favoring the League.

At all events, it cannot be denied that four years later American public opinion had become definitely anti-League.

Alcohol As A Way Out

THE chronic alcoholic is the problem child of medicine. In many respects the victim should be pitied rather than maligned. Such individuals are maladjusted and emotionally disturbed and are driven to drink as an escape from their conflicts and vexations.

The alcoholic makes a poor husband and father and frequently neglects not only his family but his business. Some are brilliant and, when on the wagon, are capable of doing exceptional work. Others are timid, docile, and highly conforming persons but sooner or later their anxieties and dilemmas become so overwhelming they cannot overcome the urge to forget it all by resorting to drink. During a spree, inhibitions are cast off and many slip deeper into the notch of degradation. These individuals evade their troubles by a flight into intemperance in contrast to neurotics who develop an illness. While under the influence, the alcoholic is able to do what he suppresses when sober; the one who beats his wife at that time probably would like to beat her when he is sober but doesn't dare.

All these factors make treatment formidable. The conflicts responsible for the alcoholic's reaction to life have existed so long they are forgotten. Deeply hidden, unconscious, unacceptable inclinations, wishes, and urges are involved which may be unethical or below our moral standards. Many of these motivating forces cannot be helped but the physician makes an attempt to correct marital incompatibilities, sexual maladjustments environmental and family problems, and difficulties with in-laws. Various agencies also offer assistance. Alcoholic Anonymous, for example, is valuable in the fight against alcoholism; this organization teaches the alcoholic to admit and confess his shortcomings and then to put himself in the hands of a higher Power.

Social drinking is not comparable to chronic alcoholism in severity yet the two cannot be divorced. Many topers were social drinkers at one time but this does not mean that all social drinkers will become chronic alcoholics. The social drinker should be on guard, however, especially when he becomes intoxicated occasionally to flee from reality or to do a better job of entertaining his friends.

On the other hand, many persons enjoy a cocktail or two for reasons that have nothing to do with their emotional system, escape from reality, or compulsions. Their drinking habits may be products of social or cultural influences. The French and Italians have a love of wine, particularly when the vintage is just right. The Irish liking for companionship and drinking go hand in hand and the German beer garden is traditional. Most of these individuals can take it or leave it alone, depending upon how they feel. It is advisable to watch out, however, when alcohol becomes a problem because in this transitional stage it is easy to progress from a problem drinker to a chronic alcoholic. Many authorities believe that the two are one and the same.

HANGOVERS

M. G. writes: The morning after the night before my fingers feel thick and I can't hold anything, not even a pencil. What is happening to me?

REPLY

Not having been there, I don't know but many drunks awaken the next morning with more than a hangover. Your trouble may represent neuritis or the effects of trauma or even sleeping with the arms overhead. "Saturday night paralysis" also should be considered. This condition comes from falling asleep in a chair, with one arm thrown over its back. Allergy and arthritis are additional possibilities.

COLD AND CIRCULATION

G. T. writes: Could frostbite of the shins cause Buerger's disease?

REPLY

No, but exposure to cold aggrevates most circulatory disorders, including Buerger's disease.

ITCH MITE

L. J. writes: Is scabies due to a germ or to vermin?

REPLY

DRUMS HEAL

REPLY

Usually they do.

DISLOCATED HIP

K. W. writes: Every few weeks I get a kink in my right lower back and have trouble straightening up. At the same time the right hip seems to swing out of place and the left leg appears shorter than the right. Could you explain this condition?

Maybe the hip is slipping out of place. At any rate, why not call your family physician the next time this happens?

House Committee Withholds Important Testimony On Chiang Kai-shek; Taft Found MacArthur Politically Cool; Herbert Hoover Had His General

WASHINGTON—Locked in the files of the House Foreign Affairs Committee is some dynamite-laden evidence by a former adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, which would be of great interest in the MacArthur-Truman debate if it were made public.

Secret testimony was given on April 6, 1949, before the Foreign Affairs Committee by Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, former military advisor to Chiang. At that time Barr testified, among other things, that Chiang's staff officers were incompetent, lazy, derelict and in some cases downright dishonest. He described the surrender of some Manchurian cities to the Communists by Chiang's generals as so suspicious as to raise possible doubt of a sell-out to the enemy. In some cases, Chiang's staff officers were not even present when the troops under them surrendered.

General Barr also told how great quantities of American equipment which we supplied the Nationalist forces fell into Communist hands, and in turn made the Red conquest of China much easier and quicker.

In one case a big Allied supply base at Chinchow was left virtually and mysteriously undefended. Considering the amount of American equipment stored there, the actions of the Nationalist Chinese had all the earmarks of a sellout to the Communists who shortly thereafter captured it. It was not long before all Manchuria fell to the Communists.

General Barr testified that he believed Chiang himself was honest, but that his troops, lacking leadership, long ago had lost the will to fight. For a while the war against the Communists on the Chinese mainland simply depended upon how rapidly Mao Tse-Tung's men wanted to travel.

For reasons best known to himself, John Kee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee has been sitting on this testimony for two years.

NOTE — Another witness who could shed great light on Chiang Kai-shek's fighting qualities and his real feeling toward the United States is Col. James McHugh, retired Marine Corps officer. McHugh was aide to Chiang Kai-shek during the war, speaks Chinese, and is one of the few Americans who have written a textbook in the Chinese language. Experts such as Colonel McHugh and General Barr, who have lived in China and know Chiang Kai-shek intimately, should be called as witnesses before the Armed Services Committee.

Taft And MacArthur

Friends of Senator Taft report that the Senator's visit with General MacArthur at the Waldorf Tower, New York, netted only two things—Taft's firm conviction that MacArthur meant what he said about keeping out of politics, and second, that the General could outtalk the rather loquacious Senator from Ohio.

Taft went to see MacArthur to find out discreetly whether the General had any political intentions; and second, if not, to lay some diplomatic groundwork so that the General might later get on the Taft bandwagon.

MacArthur was cordial, but politically negative. He gave Taft a shortened version of his congressional speech, quoting it in such verbatim detail that it almost seemed as if he had memorized it. Taft, who is no mean talker himself, could hardly get a word in edgewise.

Taft's friends say that he did not tell the General that he, the Senator, was a candidate for the Presidency though he did hint that the Republicans were most grateful to MacArthur for what he had done and that they would certainly want him to be a leading defense planner if they won in 1952.

However, MacArthur was noticeably cool toward every political overture and in effect repeated his ambition to "fade away."

History Repeats

Herbert Hoover, who has been the chief confidante of General MacArthur during the present big debate, paradoxically was on the other end of a somewhat similar situation when he was President of the United States.

Hoover made the mistake of ordering the court martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, a popular Marine Corps figure, after Butler had stated in a lecture that Benito Mussolini, then dictator of Italy, had run over a child with his car but failed to stop. General Butler's court martial was ordered after Italian Ambassador Di Martino had protested officially.

But immediately there arose a tremendous outcry from the American press and public, and for weeks Hoover was the butt of possibly more scathing criticism than Harry Truman.

The situation was somewhat comparable to the present MacArthur debate in that the admirals did not like General Butler any more than some of the leaders in the Pentagon love General MacArthur.

It was also significant that Hoover's popularity at that time had sunk to an extremely low ebb, comparable to that of Truman's today.

In the end, Hoover did what Harry Truman has not done. He abjectly surrendered and called off General Butler's court martial.

NOTE—Hoover privately has been something of an admirer of President Truman, extolled his virtues at a Gridiron Club dinner, and has expressed private appreciation of the fact that Truman brought him back to Washington in various advisory capacities after the 13-year, anti-Hoover boycott by FDR.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The British Position

A BY-PRODUCT of the MacArthur situation must be an investigation and re-study of our relations with Great Britain. For no matter how it is sliced, General Douglas MacArthur is a victim of the constant pressure of the British upon our State Department and President to have him recalled. Now that he has been officially humiliated, his program is being adopted even to the extent of giving Chiang Kai-shek $80,000,000.

The British attitude toward General MacArthur was in on manner a personal antipathy. MacArthur's attitude toward the Korean War ran counter to the British attitude, and they got their man.

But the American people have never had, from their own officials or the British, an explanation of precisely what the British position toward Asia is and why. Lewis W. Douglas, who is the foremost protagonist of British policy in this country, tried to explain it at the recent Associated Press luncheon. But what he said clarified nothing except that the British sought to keep India within the commonwealth and therefore sacrificed both China and the United States to that purpose.

Mr. Douglas gave no explanation as to the morality of such a position nor did he quiver that such a course has already cost the lives of 10,500 of our sons.

This also appears in the picture and cannot be ignored: British policy in China since 1842 has always been to recognize the de facto ruler of an area, even if that ruler was in rebellion against the established and recognized government. The theory was that trade must go on.

This was one reason why the British rather than the Japanese and Russians were the most disliked foreigners in China for a century. The Chinese assumption was that the British were always seeking to keep China divided and weak. In the great boycott of 1925, the object of the Chinese was to bring the British to heel, and when by 1927 they could show an appreciable success in that enterprise, the authority of the British Empire was damaged; its prestige in Asia was demolished.

British policy in China has been and is a mercantile policy. It is dominated by the great firms, Jardine, Matheson, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank, the P & O, the British-American Tobacco Company, and the shipping lines. These and other firms and the manufacturers who supply them have, in recent years, in effect been a cartel headed by Jardine's. They represent a huge investment and are paramount in empire trade.

They are willing to trade with anyone who can pay. This is, granted, a short-sighted policy, for when the Chinese Communists no longer need them, they will cast them aside. But who, on the other hand, can guarantee how long Soviet China will last and what its policies will be ten years from now? Therefore, why not go forward with trade as long as possible and wherever it is available?

If the British can hold their East Asian trade profitably, great losses elsewhere may be offset. But this is to be observed, namely, that the British will never be able to trade in areas held by Chiang Kai-shek, for he will know how to impose a boycott on British goods, similar to the one he imposed between 1925 and 1927. Therefore, if Chiang Kai-shek is restored anwhere to the mainland, it will be American traders who will benefit.

Throughout World War II and thereafter, it has been British policy to keep American traders out of Asia. They regarded that as their sphere and even took the position that if the United States wanted to restore Great Britain, we ought to be sympathetic to their trading aspirations. Our State Department has on the whole been sympathetic to this British point of view, as I have pointed out on several occasions, particularly in connection with such products as pottery and chinaware.

The British therefore have been pursuing an advantage in the Communist antagonism to the United States and in stimulating the antagonism of the Indians toward us.

This is not altogether speculative because events and forces clarified since June 25, 1950, have established this pattern of activity. Even to this day, British trade has continued with the Chinese Communists, British military goods being delivered to them for use in Korea, not only against Americans but against the British contingents there.

Matter Of Fact

MacArthur, Taft, And Eisenhower

WASHINGTON

IT IS perfectly obvious that Sen. Robert A. Taft has bet his political shirt on Gen. Douglas MacArthur. And at least for the present, the bet seems to be paying off handsomely.

At first, Taft inclined to take a rather cautious line. But now, after consulting with MacArthur in the General's sanctuary in the Waldorf Towers, Taft has criticized Defense Secretary George Marshall and he has lambasted Gen. Omar Bradley and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who are much more dangerous MacArthur antagonists than President Truman. He has called for "a more aggressive war against China." And he has stated that we cannot hesitate to adopt the MacArthur program "simply because we fear that the Russians might come into the war."

For a man who was not long ago opposing the North Atlantic pact on the grounds that it might "provoke" the Soviets, this is going pretty far. The fact that Taft has gone so far must be considered in relation to the fact that Taft is an active candidate for the Presidential nomination — so active that Taft workers are already lining up delegates in pivotal states like Massachusetts. Thus it is only reasonable to assume that Taft is counting on his all-out commitment to MacArthur to lead to his own nomination, and to the final triumph of the Taft wing in the inner struggle within the Republican party.

Republicans Join Taft

Taft may be right. So far, two things have happened. There have been some muted protests from Republicans of the stripe of Senators Morse, Duff, and Saltonstall. But by and large, the Republicans in Congress have lined up solidly—much more solidly than on any other foreign policy issue—behind Taft. This has been a major victory for Taft.

This in turn has markedly reduced the chances of nominating Dwight D. Eisenhower on the Republican ticket, as the Republican backers of Eisenhower in Congress somberly agree. This has been another major victory for Taft, for the obvious reason that Eisenhower has been the chief obstacle to Taft's nomination.

It is true that a new obstacle has been erected, at least by Col. Robert McCormick of the Chicago "Daily Tribute." It would be interesting to know Taft's private reaction to McCormick's suggestion that Taft should take second place on a ticket headed by Gen. MacArthur. But in fact, it is hardly conceivable that the Republicans should nominate a man who would be almost 77 years old at the end of his first term.

Thus the MacArthur crisis would seem at first glance to be a tremendous bonanza for Sen. Taft. But it may not work out this way in the end. Much depends on how Gen. MacArthur, who has not been accustomed to answering searching questions, answers the very searching questions, which embattled Democrats on the Russell committee are steeling themselves to ask him. Much depends also on what Marshall and Bradley—who are by no means without a public following—have to say to the committee. Advance hints from the Pentagon indicate that they will be, not bitter, but outspoken.

May Call Eisenhower

Finally, a great deal depends on whether Gen. Eisenhower is called home to testify. The chances seem a good deal better than even that this will happen at some point during "the great debate."

Eisenhower is of course too sensible to attack Gen. MacArthur or even to criticize openly the course MacArthur advocates. But his mere presence would underline the greatest weakness in that course. It may seem nonesense to label "isolationist" a policy which calls for "a more aggressive war against China." Yet the adjective is accurate in the sense that this course would isolate us from all our major allies. Thus MacArthur (who never mentioned our European allies in his speech) stands for the idea that allies are not essential, which is certainly one reason why he is acclaimed by Taft and all the former isolationists.

The political strength of the MacArthur-Taft program derives from the fact that everyone wants to end the Korean War, by winning it. But its weakness is that no one wants to end the Korean War by starting a much bigger one, which we should have to fight alone if only because our allies are not yet prepared to defend themselves. Eisenhower whose great mission is to help prepare our allies to defend themselves, is the very symbol of the idea that this country's allies in Western Europe are vital to our existence. Eisenhower's return to testify would serve as a very powerful reminder of the weakness in the course proposed by MacArthur and embraced by Taft.

Here it is well to remember that, if the public opinion polls are to be trusted at all, Eisenhower has a political following which dwarfs Taft's and even MacArthur's. It is well also to remember that, if Eisenhower were prepared to accept it, and Truman to offer it, Eisenhower could have the Democratic nomination on the traditional platter. This is something which the Republican leaders, possibly including Sen. Taft, are not likely to forget in their moments of sober reflection.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Who are the "presidential advisers" who keep feeding out misleading information about President Truman's relations with General MacArthur before the dismissal occured? Is it possible that persons interested in promoting differences between Mr. Truman and the former supreme commander in the Far East are now trying to defend their part in a serious political blunder?

These questions will be raised and can be answered now only by the Senate Investigating Committee. Since they do not involve any "security" information, it ought to be possible to get the facts.

Meanwhile, it is curious that, despite an explicitly worded denial by General MacArthur that he never saw or read the so-called peace offer which the United Nations was reported to have been preparing last March, the White House, through the medium of so-called "presidential advisers," is placed in the position now of saying that he did receive the document.

Say Message Was Sent

The statement in question was circulated to the 14 governments whose troops are serving in Korea. A Washington dispatch last Saturday—16 days after MacArthur's denial—stated that, "according to the President's advisers," the proposed UN statement was "teletyped to MacArthur in Tokyo with the clear notation that this was to be a presidential statement which he should see in advance so that he could be guided accordingly. According to the President's advisers, the General not only rushed in to forestall Truman but actually appropriated some of the language in the document."

The foregoing charge was first made before President Truman dismissed General MacArthur. It appeared in the April 2 issue of the magazine "Newsweek," which said:

"It (the proposed UN statement) had been sent to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who in turn dispatched it to General MacArthur for his observations. To the complete consternation of the White House and the State Department, MacArthur adopt the essential points of the statement in his own declaration of March 24."

Apparently the substance of the magazine article was telegraphed to General MacArthur, who telegraphed to "Newsweek" a denial which that magazine, with commendable fairness, publicized in a full-page advertisement in the newspapers of April 12. General MacArthur's radiogram read as follows:

"The statement contained in your issue of April second to the effect that prior to the issuance of my statement on March twenty-fourth of the military situation in Korea I had been furnished a copy of a policy statment by the President cleared by the governments having military forces in Korea is entirely without basis in fact. I have never seen such a statement and do not know if it even exists. Please publish this in the interest of truth."

Yet, despite this explicit denial some White House advisers keep on saying that MacArthur did receive a copy of the proposed UN statement. The coming hearings will certainly establish the fact that the Joint Chiefs did not send the proposed statement. What the Joint Chiefs did send on March 20 was a brief message merely advising the General that the State Department was "planning presidential announcement shortly that, with clearings of bulk of South Korea of aggressors, United Nations now prepared to discuss conditions of settlement in Korea." The message added that a "strong UN feeling persists that further diplomatic effort toward settlement should be made before any advance with major forces north of the 38th Parellel."

No Evidence In Record

General MacArthur, as a field commander, had a right at any time to propose a truce to the Communist commander, which he did on March 24. This right has since been publicly affirmed by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the UN.

There is absolutely no evidence in the record that the Joint Chiefs sent the text of any proposed UN declaration to General MacArthur. There is some doubt whether they themselves even saw it. The General's statement of March 24 addressed to the Chinese was about 600 words long, and in that entire statement only one sentence occurs which bears any similarity to the Joint Chiefs' message which the General did receive. He said merely that his forces "have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces." This is hardly an observation that would occur only to Washington planners. For it is a statement of the obvious in the Korean military situation as of March 24.

Why the White House insists on feeding out stories that General MacArthur saw a copy of the proposed UN declaration, when there is no record that it ever was sent to him, is one of the mysteries which, if cleared up, may throw light on the identity of the persons who influenced the President to dismiss MacArthur.

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

BECAUSE of the large demand from the people of Maryland that something be done about Secretary Acheson in the State Department and under the Constitution the House can do nothing to remove a Cabinet officer, I introduced a bill last week prohibiting the use of any funds to the State Department until Acheson is removed. It is my belief that the American people have lost confidence in the State Department and the only way to restore that confidence is the removal of Secretary Acheson. By withholding appropriations until Acheson is removed. I feel we will be doing what the people want.

Price control is now three months old. At the present time that agency has 1,500 employes in Washington, 1,500 in 14 regional offices and 1,000 in District offices. By June 30 Administrator DiSalle expects to have 16,000 on his payroll. The National Civil Service League, a non-partisan organization, states that political influence and civil service have "become inextricably entwined" in the selection of employes and warned that lack of confidence in OPS could wreck price control.

Major General E. E. Hume, Surgeon General of the Far East Command, said in Tokyo, April 21, that the casualties in the Korean War are the fourth most costly in United States history. The latest casualty report from the Defense Department states that 61,744 Americans have been killed, wounded or missing. General Hume said the Korean losses are five times those of the American Revolution, eleven times the War of 1812, four times the Mexican War, and six times those for the Spanish-American War.

A recent survey discloses that the United States will have more men under arms by this summer than all the European members of the Atlantic Pact nations combined. According to unofficial estimates the European members of the pact will have about 1,400,000 ground troops by July 1, compared with a U. S. Army of approximately 1,550,000. The population of the Western European pact members is 173,200,000 compared with 151,800,000 in the United States.

According to the latest Gallup Poll, 62 per cent of the American people believe General MacArthur should have been kept on the job; 29 per cent approved the President's action, and 9 per cent undecided. General MacArthur is to appear before the combined Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees today at which time an attempt will be made to get all the facts regarding General MacArthur's dismissal and to go over the entire field of our foreign policy.

The dispersal bill, which would have placed various government agencies in a series of small communities in portions of Maryland and Virginia from 10 to 20 miles outside of Washington was defeated in the sub-committee of the House Public Workers Committee of which I am a member. The Senate Committee also concurred in this action. The opinion was that the prospect of spending more than $190,000,000 on a program that would offer little assurance of security in event of an all-out atomic war was not appropriate when there is need for drastic economy and that these nearby areas did not welcome the federal government taking more land off the tax rolls. It was also felt that this dispersal program did not mean less employes in Washington since their places would be filled immediately by an ever expanding federal payroll.

UNDER THE DOME

At the request of the officials of the City of Cumberland, I asked the Department of the Interior to issue a permit for the Recreation Department of Cumberland to use the land along the C. and O. Canal which is known as the "Old Community Ball Park." It is expected that the permit will be issued in the very near future.

I was advised by the Appeals Board of the National Production Authority that they had approved the construction of a shopping center at Bethesda. A further check is being made into the possibility of securing critical materials needed for this project.

I have received hundreds of letters and telegrams opposing further taxation of automobiles as well as television equipment.

The sum total of all tin mined within the jurisdiction of the United States in 1949 amounted to only 68 long tons—51 in Alaska and 17 in Colorado. Yet the gaping jaws of American industries must be fed more than 70,000 tons of tin a year. The supply comes across long sea lanes, the National Geographic Society notes, from Asia, Africa, and South America.

A delicious filling for a festive luncheon omelet is one of creamed chicken and mushrooms. Garnish with sprigs of parsley, or fold a little chopped parsley into the filling.

MRS. BLAIR MOODY, newest Senate lady, since her husband was appointed to serve the unexpired term of the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg, at first said she was scared by the new job! But she says now she has calmed down. . . And if the sun's out she and the two boys (Hopalong fans) will be out in the back yard of their little white house in suburban Spring Valley, taking their usual sunbaths in the privacy afforded by a high wall of balsam trees.

That handsome, black haired ex-athlete she's married to (he's the first member of the Gridiron Club to go to the Senate) has served in the Press Gallery for 18 years. . . Only five Senators have served longer on the Senate floor than Blair has served in the Press Gallery. . .

"And every day for those 18 years," says his wife, "he's had the same cereal for breakfast and mashed potatoes for dinner. I'm getting more and more tired of mashed potatoes." Brown-eyed, brown-haired 112-pound Mrs. Moody doesn't expect he will change habits in spite of his change in jobs.

Mrs. Moody, who says she likes all shades of brown and bronze, hates hats and buys too many shoes, also likes to climb into bed "with a clean heart at the end of the day, knowing I've done all I should" and read a good whodunit. . . Has two toy poodles, one Acey, the other Deucey, which she inherited from Senator William Knowland's mother. . . Thinks they bring the Moodys good luck. I decided not to ask her if she thinks her husband is Moody.

Feuds a 'bustin' out all over. . . 'Tween the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the freshly-formed Senate Sub-Committee on Internal Security headed by Senator Pat McCarran. . . What competition rages between the two committees! For instance, when McCarran's group asked the House Committee on Un-American Activities group for access to files on subversives, the House fellows said in effect: "We'll permit you to request anything in our files. But we won't let you boys from the Senate Committee look directly into our files unless you are watched by one of our staff members."

House Committee members tell newsmen (off the record, of course) that they have to guard their files because many have been tampered with or lifted! . . . Heretofore all government investigative agencies, such as Secret Service, FBI, Central Intelligence Agency, Army-Navy and Air Force Intelligence and Loyalty Boards of various government agencies, have all been permitted free access to the files. . . But because of mysterious disappearance of records and documents from now on others in the government who inspect those files now must be supervised by a member of the committee staff, assigned to accompany and help any person who wants to inspect files on subversives.

Will working affect your personality? Yes . . . but for the better, if you approach your job right!

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

ARE YOU a career girl . . . or a would-be one? How does, or how will, working affect your personality?

That all depends on you . . . your goals and your approach to your job.

What Is Your Goal?

Many a new graduate sets out to work with no other intention than to mark time until she is married. Some dopesters argue that this aloofness to business responsibilities and conflicts preserves the gentle, feminine qualities, allegedly often lost in the marts of trade by more purposeful sisters. But such superficial reasoning ignores the corrosive effects of a job half done. Frustrations, insecurity and evasion always leave their mark on any personality. You always know in your heart when you are not making the grade. The self-confidence gained in doing a job well in the business world is a sound base for shouldering the responsibilities of marriage. The business knowledge gained helps a wife to understand her husband's problems when he most needs the help of her understanding.

But, as disastrous as letting your work slide, is the practice of being career-minded to the exclusion of all else. The woman who figures to get to the top by resorting to brusque manners and steam-roller tactics is apt to find her job rubbing her personality to the point of erasing her womanliness.

Changed for the Better

The famous women in business, the big names, are the most feminine and gracious of women. They accomplish their rightful ends by coupling their ability with their charm. Not of the spurious variety, of course — the great scorn to play the coquette at the conference table. They win their goals through the gentle art of persuasion, combined with solid knowledge, good reasoning, and sensitivity to the feelings of others. They develop and utilize their whole personality.

The woman who is guided by this principle achieves success not only in business but in her social and home life. Business life will always affect any personality — but when it's good, it's always for the better!

Eat Breakfast, Pop: You Won't Have To Breathe So Hard On The Hills

By FRANK CAREY

CLEVELAND (AP)—Make sure you eat your breakfast, Pop: You won't have to breathe so hard on the hills.

This advice was implied in a report to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Doctors W. W. Tuttle and Kate Daum of the University of Iowa reported they had made a study among elderly people showing that omission of breakfast resulted in a greater requirement of oxygen to perform work.

The oldsters—aged between 62 and 83—were put to work walking at two miles an hour on a slightly-graded treadmill. They did their stuff for several weeks while packing away three square meals a day.

Then, the tests were repeated for several more weeks during which the elderly folks went without breakfast. Methods were available for testing the amount of oxygen the folks used in performing their tasks. It was found that seven out of eight required "significantly" more oxygen when they went breakfastless than they did when they packed away the morning groceries.

In another dietary report, Dr. Pearl Swanson of Iowa State College said there is a strong possibility that the person who cuts down drastically on the fats, sugars and starches in his everyday living in order to cut down on calories may be taking chances with his physical well-being.

She said six years work on rats shows there is a very close relationship between the amounts of fats and carbohydrates — so-called "energy" foods—needed in the diet and the use in the body of the proteins eaten. Proteins include such things as eggs, meat and cereal, and are sometimes called the "building stones" of tissue.

The research has indicated, she related, that calories originating from fats and carbohydrates can be cut down 50 per cent in a low-protein diet without causing a tearing down of body tissue. But she said indications are that if they're cut beyond that point the body begins to use its own tissue to furnish energy.

Apparently, she declared, fats have some function in diet over and beyond the provision of calories.

The enrollment of American Sunday schools is estimated at nearly 23,000,000.

MACARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

1. Come With Me . . .

It was raining that June morning in 1950. Haneda airfield, just outside Tokyo, was a moist but chilly place even in the sticky early dawn. On the tarmac the C-54 with the word "Bataan" across its nose warmed up; a fine spray whipped up from the propellers, hung for a moment, then lashed back across the concrete runway. "The Old Man should be here any minute," a lieutenant shouted.

True, he was an "old man." He would be the last to deny it. At 70 age became a matter of reflection rather than denial. "Napoleon," he once said, "failed only because he was tired—the drive that kept him going was wearing him out." Napoleon was only 46 when he failed. But this general had never been given a chance to tire out; he had never given himself a chance to grow old in the strictly mental sense of the word.

And now on this rain-swept morning, this man of 70, General of the Armies Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Japan and United Nations Commander in Korea, was about to fly to the front where American troops with South Koreans, green and untried, were desperately trying to hold back a vicious, well-equipped enemy who had crossed the border from North to South Korea and thus placed the world on the edge of an abyss.

The convoy of cars pulled up by the plane. The General stepped out. He wore a leather jacket; his trousers had a knife-like edge. His hat, a famous hat embossed with heavy golden "scrambled eggs," seemed to lack sheen. His face was older, fuller; his eyes were hidden by sunglasses; his hands shook a little. But there was that same look of adventure, that same look of determination about the eyes that observers had seen before: Philippines, 1903; Mexico, 1914; the Western Front, 1918; Washington, 1930-35; Bataan, 1941; and all the blood splashed islands of the Pacific of World War II. These were the eyes of the soldier. Turning to his aides and four correspondents he said: "Gentlemen, we go."

"We Go"

Was this "we go" the "I shall return" of another war? Was this, in fact, really another war?

The sound of the first shots in Korea had hardly died away before General MacArthur's critics began sniping from the side lines. One armchair strategist had this to say: "MacArthur has been caught flat-footed in Korea . . . . It appears the General did not even suspect that the Communists in North Korea were about to strike."

A little checking on the part of MacArthur's critics would have shown that MacArthur has had no control over Korea for the past 15 months, and Washington was warned that troops were massing on the 38th Parellel but the intelligence apparently failed to impress anybody of importance in the Pentagon.

For two years MacArthur had warned of Communist preparedness in Asia. His words fell on deaf ears; so did his plea for more troops, arms, and air force units. But to his many critics it was MacArthur and he alone who was responsible for our lack of preparedness in the Far East.

Controversy is nothing new in the life of General Douglas MacArthur. He is probably the most beloved and most hated general on the entire American military stage.

The mere mention of his name—particularly in Washington — can incite either outbursts of superlatives pledging undying support, or bitter cries of vehement denunciation. There seems to be no happy middle ground, no in-between.

Part of Both

There are those who claim that he is a "swashbuckling, overdressed, egotistical, outdated Alexander the Great who thinks he has deistic qualities," and others who describe him as a "modern Julius Caesar radiating glamour like a Barrymore in khaki . . . no coarse, tobacco-stained, whisky - guzzling Ulyses Grant . . . here is a magnificent leader with unrivaled political perception, unequaled military skill." Perhaps he is part of both schools of thought.

• — • — •

Like all leaders, MacArthur will always be subject to adulation and hatred. His every action, word and communique increases the fury of the everboiling cauldron of controversy. Yet one thing stands clear: few have ever belittled his military achievements. Gen. George C. Marshall thought of him as "our most brilliant general." The late James Forrestal saw in him "America's beachhead in Asia — our greatest strategist." Churchill called him "a glorious commander."

• — • — •

Again and again MacArthur was criticized for his public statements in which he insistently invoked the name of the Deity. This, plus his majestic aloofness, gave rise to the famous Marine poem which ended with the verse:

And while possibly a rumor now
Someday it will be a fact
That the Lord will hear a deep voice say,
Move over, God, it's Mac.

The Navy, too, laid emphasis on the general's "Bible-pounding." In a parody on the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" one wit wrote these lines:

Mine eyes have seen MacArthur
With a Bible on his knee,
A-typin' out communiques
For guys like you and me.
"Our heavy bombers hit Rabaul
And God is filled with glee!"
While Mac goes marching on.

Most Daring Commander

The term "Dougout Doug" was a belittling of MacArthur's courage, completely unjustified and uncalled for. MacArthur can be criticized for many faults, but certainly not on the subject of his personal bravery. He has never been known to wear a helmet, even in World War I. In that bloody conflict he was called the "most daring brigade commander on the Western Front," and won the DSC twice for bravery in action. MacArthur holds the nation's highest military distinction—the Congressional Medal of Honor.

• — • — •

The Navy and Air Force charges that MacArthur's communiques described them as "my navy" and "my air force" caused intense bitterness among all ranks, including senior officers, of both services.

The Navy particularly disliked the General. The former Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson (1940-45), writing in his book On Active Service in Peace and War on Navy disagreements said that "MacArthur was a constant bone of contention. . . The extraordinary brilliance of the officer was not always matched by his fact, but the Navy's astonishing bitterness toward him seemed childish."

Always conscious of his place in history and abnormally sensitive to press criticism of any kind, MacArthur or his press officers—it is extremely difficult to draw a dividing line—made one blunder after another.

His personal appearance has even been criticized. In Australia he was accused of being overdressed, because he wore full-dress uniform with 11 rows of medals. Nobody criticized Eisenhower, Patton, or Montgomery for wearing full dress. The General has not worn full dress since. Today he invariably wears suntans, the only embellishment the famous "scrambled-egg" cap which he is said to have designed. This, too, has had its share of criticism, yet it is interesting to note that the new uniform of the Air Force calls for senior officers to wear caps very much like the MacArthur variety.

Talks On Any Subject

His hands are thin and finely wrinkled now, but they sweep through the air with vigor and forcefulness as he gesticulates to make a point. He will talk on any subject brilliantly, and what begins as a five-minutes interview can stretch to half an hour or an hour. It is generally a very one-sided conversation. You do not talk with MacArthur; he talks at you.

He does not joke easily. He can see the humor in a situation or series of events, but he will barely smile when told a story with an amusing end. He can be a very warm and human person in a private interview. Those who meet him for the first time leave his office completely hypnotized, muttering words such as "genius," "brilliant," "great." For here is MacArthur's real forte.

There are millions throughout the world who think of MacArthur as an "egotistical dictator," but, he is worshipped by the Japanese. They tell him so, too, in thousands of letters, on every subject imaginable, which arrive at his headquarters each week. Yet MacArthur has never toured Japan and has been at his desk in Tokyo seven days a week, ten hours a day, for the last five years.

Few people realize that he had not set foot in his homeland since 1937. The nearest he has been to the United States was when he conferred with President Roosevelt at Hawaii. Furthermore, MacArthur has not had a complete vacation since the beginning of the Pacific struggle. Many another man would have long since cracked under the strain. The uncharitable rarely remember these things.

Pacific Dash Criticised

Perhaps the one event which still rankles MacArthur is his flight from Bataan to Australia in a PT-boat. Ordered out by Presidential order, his famous dash across the Pacific resulted in harsh and unjust criticism from many quarters. Judging from many of the stories that were written on the amount of worldly goods the MacArthurs took with them one would think that they surely must have used a freighter. Just for the record: besides MacArthur, wife, child, and Chinese nurse, they took one mattress (because Mrs. MacArthur was ill) and four suitcases. That story, too, has become part of the controversy.

MacArthur has rarely answered his detractors. Thus much of the fact and legend which surround him must remain for proper evaluation by future historians and biographers. He once said: "You are only remembered and become famous because of your mistakes." MacArthur will be remembered for more than his mistakes. Meanwhile, until the definitive history of MacArthur is painted, his critics might do worse than to study what has been called "MacArthur's Credo" — a framed piece by the Roman historian Livy which hung in the Supreme Commander's office. Here is the true character of MacArthur. The piece tells how a famous Roman general told off his critics. Directly after he had been appointed by the Roman senate, after much denunciation and criticism (apparently senate investigations were not unknown even then), this Roman general marched out into the rotunda, where his detractors had gathered, and said:

"Commanders should be counseled chiefly by persons of known talent; by those who have made the art of war their particular study, and whose knowledge is derived from experience; by those who are present at the scene of action, who see the enemy, who see the advantages that occasions offer, and who like people embarked on the same ship are sharers of the danger. If, therefore, anyone thinks himself qualified to give advice respecting the war which I am to conduct, let him not refuse assistance to the state . . but come with me to Macedonia . . .

"He shall be furnished with a ship, a horse, a tent; even his traveling charges shall be defrayed. But if he thinks this too much trouble and prefers the repose of the city life to the toils of war, let him not on land assume the office of pilot.

"The city in itself furnishes abundance of topics for conversation; let it confine its passion for talking to its own precincts and rest assured that we shall pay no attention to any counsel but such as shall be framed within our camp."

WHY THERE IS A WAITING LIST FOR GAS HEAT
and what we're doing about it

Those on our waiting list will receive gas heat in the order and class in which request was made.

Since March 1, 1947, thousands of our customers have placed their names on our waiting list for gas heating. This waiting list is the result of an endeavor by the company to provide for systematic allocation of gas for home heating on the basis of available supplies. This procedure is in accordance with rules and regulations on file with, or orders of the state regulatory commission.

No exceptions can be made in our policy of approving applications for gas heat in the order and class in which requests are filed.

This whole situation is brought about from the fact that there just isn't enough gas for home heating for all of our customers who would like to have it.

HERE'S WHY EVERYBODY CAN'T HAVE GAS HEAT IMMEDIATELY

1. Demand for gas heat keeps getting greater and greater because gas is the most modern heating fuel.
2. Gas is the cheapest fuel. While costs of other fuels have soared, the cost of gas has been held at low levels.
3. Most additional supplies of natural gas must be piped from the far Southwest, requiring long pipelines of large size. With the present shortage of steel, this pipe is almost impossible to obtain.

Unrestricted addition of new gas heating installations would, in cold weather, raise the demand for gas above total available supplies. This would jeopardize the welfare of all our customers who depend on gas for cooking, water heating, refrigeration, clothes drying, etc. Our waiting list protects everybody.

Naturally, you want to know what we're doing to solve this problem. The purpose of this report is to tell you as completely as possible.

Thousands of Early Applicants Have Already Been Served

The 9,000 families now on our waiting list are not the same families that were on it when the list was started, but are only those since last fall. We have approved applications as our gas supplies have improved. All the families on our original list, plus many thousands more, have been offered the convenience of gas heat. Today, 85,000 more homes on our lines are heating with gas than there were when our waiting list was started.

Many More Families Will Be Served

We are constantly working to solve the gas supply problem. Since 1946, we have spent over $50,000,000 on new gas lines and other transmission facilities. Since 1946, we have added more than 300,000,000 cubic feet to our gas deliveries on a zero day. We have already signed contracts for still additional supplies of gas to be delivered as soon as we can expand our pipelines and other facilities.

Pipe and other materials are the bottleneck. It is a condition over which we have no control.

What are the prospects for "Waiting List Families?"

During the past five years, our gas supplies have improved steadily. We hope to continue this trend. We can't, however, say definitely when any particular family on our waiting list will get gas for heating. We regret our inability to keep up with your desire for gas; however, in fairness to our present heating customers, it is essential that each await his turn. To do otherwise would endanger the supply to all.

We recognize our obligation as a Public Utility to make available to our customers as much gas as they need whenever they need it. We will not rest until we have met this obligation.

The above statements are made on the basis of present information and cannot be guaranteed against possible complications such as Federal restrictions on the use of materials, or other contingencies beyond our control.

WE HAVE SPENT OVER $50,000,000 TO IMPROVE YOUR GAS SUPPLY!
HERE'S HOW—

We have added hundreds of miles of new pipelines to meet the sky-rocketing demands for gas—our gas heating customers alone have increased 565% since 1945.

We've built new facilities, expanded existing facilities to move enormously increased quantities of gas to you.

We've drilled hundreds of new wells in our efforts to locate new gas supplies in nearby fields to supplement supplies piped from the far Southwest.

We've increased our vast underground storage from 16 billion cubic feet to over 37 billion cubic feet, an increase of 133%. Gas is pumped into storage in summer, so that we can better meet your demands during cold weather.

We have already budgeted over $83,000,000 to be spent on additional expansion during the next five years to provide finest possible gas service for our customers.

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

1. Come With Me . . .

It was raining that June morning in 1950. Haneda airfield, just outside Tokyo, was a moist but chilly place even in the sticky early dawn. On the tarmac the C-54 with the word "Bataan" across its nose warmed up; a fine spray whipped up from the propellers, hung for a moment, then lashed back across the concrete runway. "The Old Man should be here any minute," a lieutenant shouted.

True, he was an "old man." He would be the last to deny it. At 70 age became a matter of reflection rather than denial. "Napoleon," he once said, "failed only because he was tired—the drive that kept him going was wearing him out." Napoleon was only 46 when he failed. But this general had never been given a chance to tire out; he had never given himself a chance to grow old in the strictly mental sense of the word.

And now on this rain-swept morning, this man of 70, General of the Armies Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Japan and United Nations Commander in Korea, was about to fly to the front where American troops with South Koreans, green and untried, were desperately trying to hold back a vicious, well-equipped enemy who had crossed the border from North to South Korea and thus placed the world on the edge of an abyss.

The convoy of cars pulled up by the plane. The General stepped out. He wore a leather jacket; his trousers had a knife-like edge. His hat, a famous hat embossed with heavy golden "scrambled eggs," seemed to lack sheen. His face was older, fuller; his eyes were hidden by sunglasses; his hands shook a little. But there was that same look of adventure, that same look of determination about the eyes that observers had seen before: Philippines, 1903; Mexico, 1914; the Western Front, 1918; Washington, 1930-35; Bataan, 1941; and all the blood splashed islands of the Pacific of World War II. These were the eyes of the soldier. Turning to his aides and four correspondents he said: "Gentlemen, we go."

"We Go"

Was this "we go" the "I shall return" of another war? Was this, in fact, really another war?

The sound of the first shots in Korea had hardly died away before General MacArthur's critics began sniping from the side lines. One armchair strategist had this to say: "MacArthur has been caught flat-footed in Korea . . . . It appears the General did not even suspect that the Communists in North Korea were about to strike."

A little checking on the part of MacArthur's critics would have shown that MacArthur has had no control over Korea for the past 15 months, and Washington was warned that troops were massing on the 38th Parellel but the intelligence apparently failed to impress anybody of importance in the Pentagon.

For two years MacArthur had warned of Communist preparedness in Asia. His words fell on deaf ears; so did his plea for more troops, arms, and air force units. But to his many critics it was MacArthur and he alone who was responsible for our lack of preparedness in the Far East.

Controversy is nothing new in the life of General Douglas MacArthur. He is probably the most beloved and most hated general on the entire American military stage.

The mere mention of his name—particularly in Washington — can incite either outbursts of superlatives pledging undying support, or bitter cries of vehement denunciation. There seems to be no happy middle ground, no in-between.

Part of Both

There are those who claim that he is a "swashbuckling, overdressed, egotistical, outdated Alexander the Great who thinks he has deistic qualities," and others who describe him as a "modern Julius Caesar radiating glamour like a Barrymore in khaki . . . no coarse, tobacco-stained, whisky - guzzling Ulyses Grant . . . here is a magnificent leader with unrivaled political perception, unequaled military skill." Perhaps he is part of both schools of thought.

Like all leaders, MacArthur will always be subject to adulation and hatred. His every action, word and communique increases the fury of the everboiling cauldron of controversy. Yet one thing stands clear: few have ever belittled his military achievements. Gen. George C. Marshall thought of him as "our most brilliant general." The late James Forrestal saw in him "America's beachhead in Asia — our greatest strategist." Churchill called him "a glorious commander."

* * *

Again and again MacArthur was criticized for his public statements in which he insistently invoked the name of the Deity. This, plus his majestic aloofness, gave rise to the famous Marine poem which ended with the verse:

And while possibly a rumor now
Someday it will be a fact
That the Lord will hear a deep voice say,
Move over, God, it's Mac.

The Navy, too, laid emphasis on the general's "Bible-pounding." In a parody on the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" one wit wrote these lines:

Mine eyes have seen MacArthur
With a Bible on his knee,
A-typin' out communiques
For guys like you and me.
"Our heavy bombers hit Rabaul
And God is filled with glee!"
While Mac goes marching on.

Most Daring Commander

The term "Dougout Doug" was a belittling of MacArthur's courage, completely unjustified and uncalled for. MacArthur can be criticized for many faults, but certainly not on the subject of his personal bravery. He has never been known to wear a helmet, even in World War I. In that bloody conflict he was called the "most daring brigade commander on the Western Front," and won the DSC twice for bravery in action. MacArthur holds the nation's highest military distinction—the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The Navy and Air Force charges that MacArthur's communiques described them as "my navy" and "my air force" caused intense bitterness among all ranks, including senior officers, of both services.

The Navy particularly disliked the General. The former Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson (1940-45), writing in his book On Active Service in Peace and War on Navy disagreements said that "MacArthur was a constant bone of contention. . . The extraordinary brilliance of the officer was not always matched by his fact, but the Navy's astonishing bitterness toward him seemed childish."

Always conscious of his place in history and abnormally sensitive to press criticism of any kind, MacArthur or his press officers—it is extremely difficult to draw a dividing line—made one blunder after another.

His personal appearance has even been criticized. In Australia he was accused of being overdressed, because he wore full-dress uniform with 11 rows of medals. Nobody criticized Eisenhower, Patton, or Montgomery for wearing full dress. The General has not worn full dress since. Today he invariably wears suntans, the only embellishment the famous "scrambled-egg" cap which he is said to have designed. This, too, has had its share of criticism, yet it is interesting to note that the new uniform of the Air Force calls for senior officers to wear caps very much like the MacArthur variety.

Talks On Any Subject

"I was just giving Butterfly a bath."

His hands are thin and finely wrinkled now, but they sweep through the air with vigor and forcefulness as he gesticulates to make a point. He will talk on any subject brilliantly, and what begins as a five-minutes interview can stretch to half an hour or an hour. It is generally a very one-sided conversation. You do not talk with MacArthur; he talks at you.

He does not joke easily. He can see the humor in a situation or series of events, but he will barely smile when told a story with an amusing end. He can be a very warm and human person in a private interview. Those who meet him for the first time leave his office completely hypnotized, muttering words such as "genius," "brilliant," "great." For here is MacArthur's real forte.

There are millions throughout the world who think of MacArthur as an "egotistical dictator," but, he is worshipped by the Japanese. They tell him so, too, in thousands of letters, on every subject imaginable, which arrive at his headquarters each week. Yet MacArthur has never toured Japan and has been at his desk in Tokyo seven days a week, ten hours a day, for the last five years.

Few people realize that he had not set foot in his homeland since 1937. The nearest he has been to the United States was when he conferred with President Roosevelt at Hawaii. Furthermore, MacArthur has not had a complete vacation since the beginning of the Pacific struggle. Many another man would have long since cracked under the strain. The uncharitable rarely remember these things.

Pacific Dash Criticised

Perhaps the one event which still rankles MacArthur is his flight from Bataan to Australia in a PT-boat. Ordered out by Presidential order, his famous dash across the Pacific resulted in harsh and unjust criticism from many quarters. Judging from many of the stories that were written on the amount of worldly goods the MacArthurs took with them one would think that they surely must have used a freighter. Just for the record: besides MacArthur, wife, child, and Chinese nurse, they took one mattress (because Mrs. MacArthur was ill) and four suitcases. That story, too, has become part of the controversy.

MacArthur has rarely answered his detractors. Thus much of the fact and legend which surround him must remain for proper evaluation by future historians and biographers. He once said: "You are only remembered and become famous because of your mistakes." MacArthur will be remembered for more than his mistakes. Meanwhile, until the definitive history of MacArthur is painted, his critics might do worse than to study what has been called "MacArthur's Credo" — a framed piece by the Roman historian Livy which hung in the Supreme Commander's office. Here is the true character of MacArthur. The piece tells how a famous Roman general told off his critics. Directly after he had been appointed by the Roman senate, after much denunciation and criticism (apparently senate investigations were not unknown even then), this Roman general marched out into the rotunda, where his detractors had gathered, and said:

"Commanders should be counseled chiefly by persons of known talent; by those who have made the art of war their particular study, and whose knowledge is derived from experience; by those who are present at the scene of action, who see the enemy, who see the advantages that occasions offer, and who like people embarked on the same ship are sharers of the danger. If, therefore, anyone thinks himself qualified to give advice respecting the war which I am to conduct, let him not refuse assistance to the state . . but come with me to Macedonia . . .

"He shall be furnished with a ship, a horse, a tent; even his traveling charges shall be defrayed. But if he thinks this too much trouble and prefers the repose of the city life to the toils of war, let him not on land assume the office of pilot.

"The city in itself furnishes abundance of topics for conversation; let it confine its passion for talking to its own precincts and rest assured that we shall pay no attention to any counsel but such as shall be framed within our camp."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALERTNESS PAYS HIGHLY

In almost any field of competition, alertness pays high dividends. It is vital to the prosecutor and investigator concerned with ferreting out miscreants. And it is a capital quality to be owned by a defender at the bridge table against an astute declarer. The ability to sense just what the opponent is trying to get you to do, and then finding a way to do just the opposite, is one mark of the truly great competer.

It seemed that the South player at this table, after a bold start, got cold feet later and refused to go above game despite his partner's positive response to the two-bid and eventual support of the hearts. Maybe he became a bit overawed when he learned that the East player at his table was Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, whom Governor Dewey of New York has just appointed to the head of the special Commission to Investigate Crime.

By other routes, most declarers reached a heart game on this deal in one of the duplicate tournaments aboard the Independence on its recent maiden cruise in the Mediterranean. Those who essayed 3-No Trumps walked in with nine tricks. They were beaten by those that made 4-Hearts, a contract in which there were three varieties of play.

At each heart game table the club Q lead was won by the K, and three hearts cleared trumps. Some declarers next led to the spade A and then lost the diamond finesse to the K, later inevitably dropping another diamond trick and two in spades to be down.

Two tables, following the opening club and three hearts, found South giving up two spades to East; South won the returned club, led to the spade A and used the spade thirteener to discard a diamond. That assured the contract, though the diamond finesse lost.

At another table that style was attempted, but Judge Proskauer in the East saw what South was up to. So when he won the first spade, he switched to a diamond return. If you follow the sequence of events, you will see that this caused the loss of two diamond tricks, before the discard of a diamond on a spade could be obtained, and set South.

Gurley Purchases Building In Garage Expansion Plan

The Kelso building on South Liberty Street has been purchased by Woodrow W. Gurley, local car dealer and insurance man, for $75,000.

Of two-story brick construction, the building runs back to an alley in the rear of the Post Office. Gurley has been operating the Dodge-Plymouth auto dealership in the building for seven years.

George Kelso, from whom Gurley purchased the building, operated a bowling alley on the second floor front for six years. This additional space will be used for car parking and storage, according to Gurley.

It will require two months to remodel the 130 by 60 foot section formerly housing the bowling alleys. Ten alleys were in use by Kelso.

The building comprises 30,000 square feet of floor space and Gurley has 34 employes at the establishment. Besides the garage and auto dealership, Gurley also conducts business for the Farm Bureau Insurance Company.

The new section, which formerly housed the bowling alleys, will be able to handle about 60 parked cars, Gurley said.

When the business was first started seven years ago Gurley was in partnership with his brother, Charles F. Gurley, now a resident of Florida.

George Kelso said he will go to Florida and enter business in the St. Petersburg area.

The new enterprise will be known as Gurley Garage, Inc.

Jonkel Charged With Violating Election Laws

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP) — The Baltimore grand jury today charged Jon. M. Jonkel with violating Maryland's Corrupt Practices Act in managing Sen. John M. Butler's successful election campaign last year.

Bail of $2,500 was posted by a professional bondsman for Jonkel, a Chicago public relations man, pending action of the Baltimore Criminal Court.

Jonkel served as campaign manager for the Republican senator in both the primary and general elections. Butler bested Millard E. Tydings, the veteran Democrat, in the November election.

Tydings complained to the Senate that Butler's forces violated the state election laws on spending and used smear tactics. Butler denied this.

A Senate subcommittee then conducted lengthy hearings in Washington, ending the taking of testimony three weeks ago today. State's Attorney Anslem Sodaro began examining the committee records before the hearings ended, and announced recently he had turned the evidence over to the grand jury.

Yesterday, the jury heard seven witnesses and adjourned without making a statement. All of the witnesses had been heard by the Senate group in Washington.

Miss Jean F. Kerr of Washington, research assistant in the office of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis), had been summoned by the jury but couldn't appear because of a leg injury.

Among other things, the jury charged Jonkel failed to keep "detailed, full and accurate accounts in a proper book" listing campaign expenditures and disbursements.

Secret Report

United Nations forces in Korea and created what MacArthur called a "new war."

A letter from Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to the committee said five copies of the report were sent to MacArthur 12 days after the conference.

Bradley's letter added:

"To my knowledge, since that time we have received no information from Gen. MacArthur, or his headquarters, that would indicate any non-concurrence with the record of the conference."

Compiled From Notes

MacArthur was quoted in conversational form in the summary, which Bradley told the senators was compiled from notes during the return trip from Wake Island.

Bradley was one of those who attended the Wake Island meeting. Bradley said all those who took part, including a stenographer, helped supply data that was combined for the report labelled "Substance of Statements Made at Wake Island Conference."

The summary said that at the opening of the conference Gen. MacArthur told President Truman and others:

"I believe that formal resistance will end throughout North and South Korea by Thanksgiving."

A little later MacArthur was quoted:

"It is my hope to be able to withdraw the Eighth Army to Japan by Christmas."

This was at a time when United Nations and U. S. forces were advancing into North Korea and before Chinese Communists entered the Korean fighting.

shelled by the U. S. cruiser Toledo, firing from the Yellow Sea.

"The enemy has failed in the first phase of his offensive," said Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Allied ground commander in Korea.

"He has paid a heavy price. The first part of the battle has ended in a great victory for the United Nations."

However, Van Fleet cautioned: "He (the Reds) has the capability of hitting again as hard as before or harder. I am confident the results will be the same."

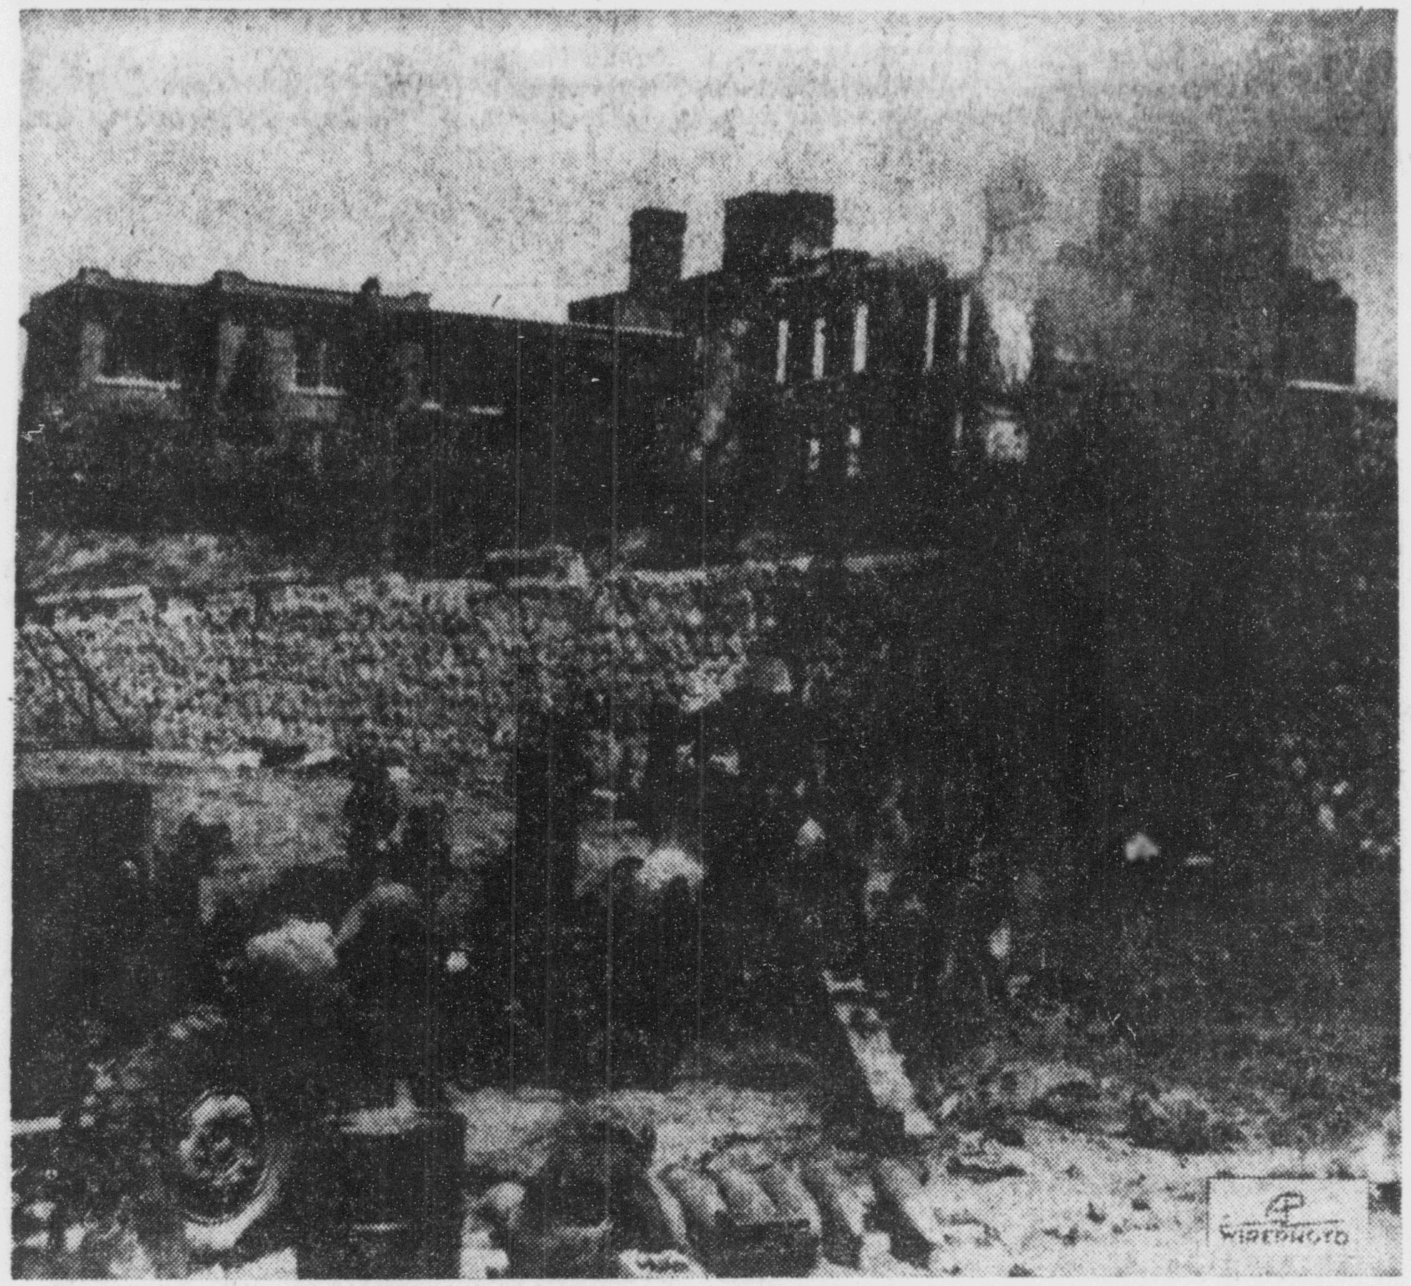
The lull on the battlefront moved into its fifth day Thursday. Five Allied tank patrols probed north of their lines on the western and west-central sectors. They met little or no resistance.

Nail Driven In Back

MOBILE, Ala., May 2 (AP) — An eight-penny nail fired by a mechanical nail driver was removed today from the back of a 54-year old woman.

City hospital attaches said the condition of Mrs. J. H. Waltmeyer was much improved.

The nail struck Mrs. Waltmeyer in the back as she walked by a building project where the new nail driver was being tested.



U. N. DEFENDERS IN SEOUL—Yank artillerymen fire their eight-inch howitzer over a wall and past shattered ruins in Seoul as United Nations forces defend the battered capital against advancing Red armies. The Allies yesterday appeared to have blunted the opening drive of the enemy's spring offensive as Red pressure lifted all along the Korean front.

Aide Says MacArthur Plans To Be Active "For Years"

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur intends to be active "for many years to come" and to present his views firmly at as many public appearances as possible, his spokesman said today.

Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, the spokesman, said these appearances will come after the deposed Far East commander ends testimony at congressional hearings starting tomorrow on Far East policy.

Commenting on MacArthur's future intentions, Whitney told newsmen:

"I would say that after the hearings he will continue to take a very firm stand and will make as many public appearances as possible."

Asked whether this meant MacArthur was taking his case to the public, Whitney replied:

"No. He looks at it in the light that many persons want to hear his views and he feels that in the public interest he should respond accordingly as far as he can."

Concerning published reports that MacArthur informed confidants that he held Secretary of State Dean Acheson chiefly responsible for his removal, Whitney said:

"I am inclined to discount it completely. I never heard any such expression from Gen. MacArthur."

Senate Demos

be brought to a vote without unanimous consent—unless it were offered in the first two hours of a "legislative day."

The two hours had long since passed. So the Republicans—with the aid of Sen. McCarran—forced a brief adjournment by a 43 to 41 vote so the Senate could then reconvene and start a new "legislative day."

But when the "new" day started, the Democrats began stalling for time. Sen. Neely took the floor to announce he had a long speech on tap about home rule for the city of Washington.

"Is this the beginning of a filibuster?" asked Sen. Capehart (R-Ind).

Neely denied a filibuter but he talked his way past the two-hour mark of the new day and thus put the GOP back where it started.

The West Virginian at one point lashed out with a bitter criticism of MacArthur.

"If the second coming of the Savior had occurred," he said, "there couldn't have been a more hysterical uprising (than the reception given to MacArthur on his homecoming)."

Neely declared he did not intend to "honor a man for showing his hatred and contempt of Harry Truman."

He shouted: "Republicans are trying to win the next election by parading him (MacArthur) over the country as a reward for his disobedience to the commander-in-chief.

"I am not going to participate in a Roman holiday for any man who has been in rebellion against the constitutional authority of the President."

A school principal says it's not right to do your child's homework. Maybe because it usually turns out wrong.

Draftee Gets His First Airplane And Train Rides

FORT MEADE, Md., May 2 (AP)—The Army must seem weird and wonderful to Pvt. Roscoe Johnson, 18, Jackson, Ky.

He enlisted at Lexington, Ky., and the Army flew him to its reception center here for outfitting, innoculation shots and aptitude tests. It was his first plane ride.

Then the Army started him back to Fort Knox, Ky., last Wednesday for basic training with the 3rd Armored Division. It was his first train ride.

Red Casualties In Drive Exceed Total For U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Chinese Reds and North Koreans have suffered more casualties in their current offensive than the United States has throughout the entire Korean War, U. S. military officers estimated today.

Latest reports direct from officers in Korea estimate the Communist losses at more than 75,000 men in the last 10 days.

The Defense Department announced today that American casualties since the war started have reached 62,799. This figure includes 9,603 killed, 42,246 wounded and 10,950 missing in action. The total of 62,799 announced today was an increase of 1,055 in a week.

High Temperatures, Rain Help Md. Crops

COLLEGE PARK, M., May 2 (AP) High temperatures and warm rains were just what Maryland's farm crops needed last week.

The state's crop reporters said growing conditions were ideal. Fruit trees suffered only minor damage from frost, strawberries came into full bloom, and corn planting started.

The survey was made by the Weather Bureau, Agriculture Department Bureau of Economics and the University of Maryland Farm Extension Service.

Shah Signs Iran Oil Seizure Bill

TEHRAN, Iran, May 2 (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi signed the act seizing the giant British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company today even as British and American envoys sought to keep the doors open for further negotiations.

The Shah acted after British Ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd called on him, presumably to urge that he try to persuade the aging nationalist premier, Mohammed Mossadegh, to follow a moderate course in executing the law. The Shah has no veto and had no recourse but to sign the law.

Previously, Sir Francis talked for an hour with Mossadegh, He presented the premier a written memorandum protesting nationalization of the $500,000,000 company and urging further negotiations for a friendly settlement.

U. S. Ambassador Henry F. Grady also was with Mossadegh for an hour, seeking to probe the shadowy future of American assistance programs in strategic Iran.

The United States has tried to stay aloof from the bitter British-Iranian oil dispute except to advise against action which might upset the stability of Iran and the Middle East.

Repeal Of Beef Order Demanded

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee called today for quick repeal of the government's new price control order on beef, saying it will cause "a severe meat famine leading to early rationing."

The order, issued by the Office of Price Stabilization, calls for progressively reduced ceilings on live cattle starting later this month and for a reduction of nearly 10 cents a pound at retail by Oct. 1.

Already, the Senate committee said, tteo rder has resulted in producers' rushing cattle to market before they have reached their best marketable weights, thus causing "a loss of meat for consumers" in the future. Theo rder also spells severe losses to growers, the committee added in a resolution.

Inu the House, Rep. Hoeven (R-Ia) said the beef price rollback "may well result in a meat famine." Hoeven said reports from Northwest Iowa indicate a black market already is springing up.

Marine Turns Down Chance To Come Home

DALLAS, May 2 (AP) — A wounded Marine has written his mother here that he is turning down a chance to come home from Korea.

"Mom, I'm going back to Korea," wrote 21-year-old Cpl. Kenneth J. Pope of the First Marine Division.

The letter was written from a rest camp in Japan where Pope is recovering from wounds suffered Nov. 8 at Chosin Reservoir. His mother is Mrs. Betty Pope of Dallas. He wrote:

"I know that you will be worried and everything like that, but look at it like this, Mom—I'm fighting for the one thing that means the most to me.

"That is your safety and happiness. What if the United States just stopped and said 'I'm not going to fight anymore.' Can you imagine what it would be like?

McKeldin's Teacher Pay Stand Criticized

TOWSON, Md., May 2 (AP) — Gov. McKeldin was taken to task today by a member of the State Board of Education for leaving the problem of increased teachers salaries up to the counties.

A 1951 legislative act to boost the instructors' pay was recently vetoed by McKeldin. He said it was a matter for Baltimore City and the 23 counties, and not a state responsibility.

Today, Richard W. Case, a board member and tax specialist who was chairman of the State Tax Survey Commission, argued that the "schools should become more the responsibility of the state."

Case said that any increased teachers pay "should be made within the basic program and should, therefore, be state-wide in scope."

Heiress Freed In Contempt Case

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Heiress Louise Branston Berman was freed of contempt of Congress charges today by a federal judge who ruled she did not have to tell whether she financed Communist activities.

It was the eleventh such acquittal in the district court here this year for witnesses who declined to answer congressional committee questions on the ground that it might tend to incriminate them.

Two witnesses accused of contempt for remaining silent before committees have been convicted but in their cases the court ruled that they did not properly invoke their immunity under the fifth amendment to the constitution.

Judge Burnita S. Matthews freed Mrs. Berman at the end of legal arguments. The judge heard the case without a jury.

Mrs. Berman appeared before a House Un-American Activities subcommittee Nov. 7, 1949, and refused to answer more than 40 questions. Only 26 of the refusals were made counts in the indictment.

Judge Matthews said the purpose of the questions asked Mrs. Berman was "to link her up with the Communist Party."

Some of the questions, the woman jurist commented, "may appear innocent on the face, but even innocent appearing questions must be considered in the light of the background."

The people Mrs. Berman was asked about, Judge Matthews said, "had connections with the Communist Party, or were believed to have connections with its aims and purposes."

Jonkel Charged With Violating Election Laws

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP) — The Baltimore grand jury today charged Jon. M. Jonkel with violating Maryland's Corrupt Practices Act in managing Sen. John M. Butler's successful election campaign last year.

Bail of $2,500 was posted by a professional bondsman for Jonkel, a Chicago public relations man, pending action of the Baltimore Criminal Court.

Jonkel served as campaign manager for the Republican senator in both the primary and general elections. Butler bested Millard E. Tydings, the veteran Democrat, in the November election.

Tydings complained to the Senate that Butler's forces violated the state election laws on spending and used smear tactics. Butler denied this.

A Senate subcommittee then conducted lengthy hearings in Washington, ending the taking of testimony three weeks ago today. State's Attorney Anslem Sodaro began examining the committee records before the hearings ended, and announced recently he had turned the evidence over to the grand jury.

Yesterday, the jury heard seven witnesses and adjourned without making a statement. All of the witnesses had been heard by the Senate group in Washington.

Miss Jean F. Kerr of Washington, research assistant in the office of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis), had been summoned by the jury but couldn't appear because of a leg injury.

Among other things, the jury charged Jonkel failed to keep "detailed, full and accurate accounts in a proper book" listing campaign expenditures and disbursements.

United Nations forces in Korea and created what MacArthur called a "new war."

A letter from Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to the committee said five copies of the report were sent to MacArthur 12 days after the conference.

Bradley's letter added:

"To my knowledge, since that time we have received no information from Gen. MacArthur, or his headquarters, that would indicate any non-concurrence with the record of the conference."

Compiled From Notes

MacArthur was quoted in conversational form in the summary, which Bradley told the senators was compiled from notes during the return trip from Wake Island.

Bradley was one of those who attended the Wake Island meeting.

Bradley said all those who took part, including a stenographer, helped supply data that was combined for the report labelled "Substance of Statements Made at Wake Island Conference."

The summary said that at the opening of the conference Gen. MacArthur told President Truman and others:

"I believe that formal resistance will end throughout North and South Korea by Thanksgiving."

A little later MacArthur was quoted:

"It is my hope to be able to withdraw the Eighth Army to Japan by Christmas."

This was at a time when United Nations and U. S. forces were advancing into North Korea and before Chinese Communists entered the Korean fighting.

"The enemy has failed in the first phase of his offensive," said Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Allied ground commander in Korea.

"He has paid a heavy price. The first part of the battle has ended in a great victory for the United Nations."

However, Van Fleet cautioned: "He (the Reds) has the capability of hitting again as hard as before or harder. I am confident the results will be the same."

The lull on the battlefront moved into its fifth day Thursday. Five Allied tank patrols probed north of their lines on the western and west-central sectors. They met little or no resistance.

MOBILE, Ala., May 2 (AP) — An eight-penny nail fired by a mechanical nail driver was removed today from the back of a 54-year old woman.

Aide Says MacArthur Plans To Be Active "For Years"

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur intends to be active "for many years to come" and to present his views firmly at as many public appearances as possible, his spokesman said today.

Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, the spokesman, said these appearances will come after the deposed Far East commander ends testimony at congressional hearings starting tomorrow on Far East policy.

Commenting on MacArthur's future intentions, Whitney told newsmen:

"I would say that after the hearings he will continue to take a very firm stand and will make as many public appearances as possible."

Asked whether this meant MacArthur was taking his case to the public, Whitney replied:

"No. He looks at it in the light that many persons want to hear his views and he feels that in the public interest he should respond accordingly as far as he can."

Concerning published reports that MacArthur informed confidants that he held Secretary of State Dean Acheson chiefly responsible for his removal, Whitney said:

"I am inclined to discount it completely. I never heard any such expression from Gen. MacArthur."

be brought to a vote without unanimous consent—unless it were offered in the first two hours of a "legislative day."

The two hours had long since passed. So the Republicans—with the aid of Sen. McCarran—forced a brief adjournment by a 43 to 41 vote so the Senate could then reconvene and start a new "legislative day."

But when the "new" day started, the Democrats began stalling for time. Sen. Neely took the floor to announce he had a long speech on tap about home rule for the city of Washington.

"Is this the beginning of a filibuster?" asked Sen. Capehart (R-Ind).

Neely denied a filibuter but he talked his way past the two-hour mark of the new day and thus put the GOP back where it started.

The West Virginian at one point lashed out with a bitter criticism of MacArthur.

"If the second coming of the Savior had occurred," he said, "there couldn't have been a more hysterical uprising (than the reception given to MacArthur on his homecoming)."

Neely declared he did not intend to "honor a man for showing his hatred and contempt of Harry Truman."

He shouted: "Republicans are trying to win the next election by parading him (MacArthur) over the country as a reward for his disobedience to the commander-in-chief.

"I am not going to participate in a Roman holiday for any man who has been in rebellion against the constitutional authority of the President."

Red Casualties In Drive Exceed Total For U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Chinese Reds and North Koreans have suffered more casualties in their current offensive than the United States has throughout the entire Korean War, U. S. military officers estimated today.

Latest reports direct from officers in Korea estimate the Communist losses at more than 75,000 men in the last 10 days.

The Defense Department announced today that American casualties since the war started have reached 62,799. This figure includes 9,603 killed, 42,246 wounded and 10,950 missing in action. The total of 62,799 announced today was an increase of 1,055 in a week.

COLLEGE PARK, M., May 2 (AP) High temperatures and warm rains were just what Maryland's farm crops needed last week.

The survey was made by the Weather Bureau, Agriculture Department Bureau of Economics and the University of Maryland Farm Extension Service.

Baering Down On The News

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Our Ambassador got into an argument with the Premier of Belgium. I'm beginning to think that even a soda-jerker can give us the double shakes.

• — • — •

There's only one prescription to use when we pick a hassel with Belgium. Let cooler heads prevail and ice the lumps.

• — • — •

That Gromyko man didn't help any when he sounded off in Paris. It proves my argument that peace talks should be shorter than a handshake out of a pullman window.

Don't think that the Belgium business will get serious. Why should we buy a gold pen for a little conference like that?

Heiress Freed In Contempt Case

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — Heiress Louise Branston Berman was freed of contempt of Congress charges today by a federal judge who ruled she did not have to tell whether she financed Communist activities.

It was the eleventh such acquittal in the district court here this year for witnesses who declined to answer congressional committee questions on the ground that it might tend to incriminate them.

Two witnesses accused of contempt for remaining silent before committees have been convicted but in their cases the court ruled that they did not properly invoke their immunity under the fifth amendment to the constitution.

Judge Burnita S. Matthews freed Mrs. Berman at the end of legal arguments. The judge heard the case without a jury.

Mrs. Berman appeared before a House Un-American Activities subcommittee Nov. 7, 1949, and refused to answer more than 40 questions. Only 26 of the refusals were made counts in the indictment.

Judge Matthews said the purpose of the questions asked Mrs. Berman was "to link her up with the Communist Party."

Some of the questions, the woman jurist commented, "may appear innocent on the face, but even innocent appearing questions must be considered in the light of the background."

The people Mrs. Berman was asked about, Judge Matthews said, "had connections with the Communist Party, or were believed to have connections with its aims and purposes."

State Defense Drill Planned By Aviation

Area plane owners and pilots will participate in the first Civil Aviation Defense of Maryland statewide drill Sunday when flights from all sections will converge on the huge Friendship Airport at Baltimore.

W. Donald Smith is acting as chairman coordinator in this section for Warren Mullenax, Cumberland Municipal Airport operator, who is out-of-town.

Smith urged that all plane owners and flyers in this section attend a planning meeting for the exercise Sunday tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Potomac Motor Company garage, corner of George and Harrison Streets.

The Cumberland flight is scheduled to be the first to arrive at Friendship Airport between 11 a. m. and 11:15 a. m. Sunday.

Seven other flights landing at 15-minute intervals, will complete the landing schedule at 1 p. m. The exercise is to determine the number of private planes that can land in an emergency at the Baltimore field and to find out the total plane load capacity for evacuation purposes in the event of an A-bomb raid in Baltimore and Washington.

All aircraft will carry maximum load of persons or simulated bulk cargo. The cargo should be in the form of empty paper cartons that best conform to the storage area in the ship.

When parked at the Baltimore field, the cargo is to be unloaded by the pilot and his crew and placed in front of the airplane for pickup by a truck.

A registration headquarters will be set up in front of the new administration building.

Recognition will be given to the unit having the largest number of aircraft participating and to the flight having the best organization.

Firm Reportedly Given Contract

A news service report from New York yesterday listed the Livington Machine and Tool Company, Frostburg, as receiving a government contract for the production of cylindrical adapters for the Department of Defense.

Chalmers Livingston, president of the firm, said he had "no comment."

Announcement of the contract was made by the Department of Commerce which released a synopsis of bids accepted in the period of a week, the report said. The Frostburg company's contract was issued through the Bureau of Ordnance, Washington, D. C.

Information as to the number of units to be supplied and the money value were withheld, the press service said. All the contracts are listed at "over $25,000," it continued.

The Livingston firm was recently awarded a prime contract for the fabrication of aluminum by the Bureau of Ordnance of the Navy Department. The contract was for $51,700 and at that time, it was announced other contracts were expected to swell the total to over $100,000 of prime work.

Young Demos Plan Session

Two Cumberlanders will be among those representing Maryland at the National Committee meeting of the Young Democratic Clubs of America at Charleston, W. Va., tomorrow and Saturday.

They are Miss Gene H. Miller, now of Annapolis, regional director of Young Democratic Clubs of America, and William H. Buchholtz, city finance commissioner, Young Democratic national committeeman, and former president of the Allegany county club.

Others representing Maryland will be Edward D. Storm, Frederick, president of the state group, and Francis J. Valle, Baltimore City, a member of the national coordinating committee.

Purpose of the meeting is to select the site of the biennial National Convention of Young Democrats Members will be entertained at the home of Arthur B. Koontz, Democratic national committeeman from West Virginia.

A tour of the West Virginia state capitol will be conducted Saturday. A dinner Saturday evening will honor Senator Wilson Gilmore, president of Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Telephone Company Makes Plans For Civil Defense Emergency

Working on the theory that the telephone is the nation's first line of defense, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company has taken conclusive steps to protect this city's communication system in event of a bombing raid.

The program is part of a state and national defense plan instituted by Bell System affiliates as a means to prevent the breakdown of communications if enemy bombers strike at America's shores.

Harry Patton, central office foreman is the C. and P. civil defense officer and has as an executive board Richard E. Harman, office manager; R. C. Lord, plant wire chief; and Richard Dayton.

Hagerstown Control Center

Hagerstown will probably be the control center for Western Maryland and issue the first warning of an attack.

When that warning occurs here is what will happen:

The company has installed a claxon-bell-light warning system in 13 different sections of the plant. When this alarm is sounded, employes will be routed to various sections of the building where shelters are available for their own protection.

Switchboards will be manned at all times during an attack by volunteer crews. If the attack is intense, protection is afforded those operators by the switchboards.

All employes of the local company have been given air raid instructions and Lord said practice drills will begin soon.

Crews Listed

Heading the first aid crew is Ann Buzzard who is also a qualified instructor. Elmer Hite and Carl Weakley are stretcher-bearers; Wanda True and Mary Luhrman, the first aid crew with Joseph Reed, Robert Shiply and Dorothy Scott as alternates.

The rescue crew (also trained to protect public utilities against fire) is composed of Sidney Storer, as leader, James Matt, George Williams and Ernest Williams.

The decontamination squad consists of Russell Pancake and Paul Bixler. All are trained in first aid.

Employes who receive First Aid cards from the American Red Cross are given advanced training courses every five years thereafter. Company officials consider the training to be of first importance to participation in civil defense activities Harman added.

Guard Key Centers

Throughout the Bell System arrangements for thorough guardng of important key centers have been made and entrance regulations for visitors tightened.

Included in the planning to restore telephone service in case of disaster is the provision of adequate emergency power plants for central office to be used in event of power failure of outside facilities. The company's radio equipment, including portable trailers, and fixed stations have been worked into the restoral and emergency service plans. Arrangements have been made for traffic control and trunk assignment groups to reroute local and long-distance calls where necessary.

Area Man Gets Suspended Sentence In Manslaughter

Samuel B. Lyons, 44, of Paw Paw, W. Va., convicted April 18 by a Circuit Court jury on a charge of manslaughter by automobile was given a three-months suspended sentence in the House of Correction.

Associate Judge George Henderson, who presided at the trial sentenced Lyons yesterday.

Lyons was indicted and tried for the death of Asa Stuckey Sams, 67, Justice of the Peace of Mann's Choice Pa., in an auto accident October 15 on Route 51 near Oldtown.

Lyons, according to Judge Henderson's sentence, must pay Mrs. Sams $150 this year and $200 in each of the following two years towards the funeral expenses of Mr. Sams.

The accident occurred on a straight stretch of road when the pickup truck operated by Lyons collided nearly headon with the 1949 sedan driven by Edgar J. Burkett, postmaster of Mann's Choice.

Sams was sitting in the right hand side of the Burkett car and died of a pulmonary hemorrhage caused by a crushed chest.

The jury found Lyons guilty after an all-day trial in Circuit Court and Judge Henderson reserved sentencing to further study the case.

At that time, the jurist commented that it was fortunate that no liquor was involved in the crash.

Yesterday he pointed out that Lyons is unemployed. His wife remains crippled as a result of the wreck. Lyons was represented by Harold E. Naughton.

Large Field Is Set For Derby Saturday

20 Or More Horses Set For Big Test

Run For Roses May Produce Richest Prize In History

LOUISVILLE, May 2 (AP) — A thorough search of the stable area at Churchill Downs today failed to cover a trainer who doesn't intend to start his horse in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, and who doesn't furthermore, think he can win the big race.

The oldest oldetimer around the Downs cannot recall quite a parallel case, where nobody is much scared of anybody else in the field and where any one of a dozen colts is considered capable of dragging down first prize.

The victory of Calumet Farm's Fanfare in yesterday's Derby Trial didn't frighten anyone away. It still looks as though 20 runners will be jammed into the starting gate, for sure, when they pull the string, and there might be a couple or three more.

As the regular starting gate at the Downs will accommodate only 20 horses, the management put in a hurry call to Chicago and had an extra section of six stalls shipped down today, just in case. If 22 go it will match the record Derby field of 1928, the year Reigh Count won.

The winner almost certainly will pocket the biggest purse in Derby history. If 19 start the payoff will be a cool $97,050, which probably explains the reluctance of the trainers and owners to scratch any animal which has four sound legs. The present record is the $96,500 won by Assault in 1946, when 17 ran.

When asked what horse they believed they would have to beat in the mile and a quarter Derby, a majority of trainers nominated either the Greentree entry of Big Stretch and Hall Of Fame or the C. V. Whitney pair, Counterpoint and Mameluke. In their opinions, the two entries probably will go off at about equal favorites on Saturday, with Battle Morn, Fanfare and Repetoire close behind on the odds board.

Louis Decisions Agramonte Again

DETROIT, May 2 (AP) — Joe Louis won a unanimous 10-round decision over lanky Omelio Agramonte of Cuba tonight. It was the fifth win in Joe's comeback drive.

The Brown Bomber switched from his traditional shuffle, and bored in on Agramonte to floor the dark Cuban for a count of nine in the second round. It was the first time Joe had knocked down a foe in his comeback.

However, Louis, holding nearly a 20 pound edge over Agramonte, couldn't finish him off. In the ninth Louis battered Agramonte and left him dazed. But Joe couldn't land the one punch needed.

The 36-year-old Louis, who ruled the heavyweight world from 1937 to 1949, hopes to tackle Lee Savold next and then battle champion Ezzard Charles in September.

Spahn Pitches Braves' Fourth Shutout In Week

Blanks Cards With Six-Hit 5-0 Job

BOSTON, May 2 (INS) — Lefty Warren Spahn pitched a six-hit 5-to-0 shutout over St. Louis today for the Boston Braves' fourth whitewash job within a week.

The Cards, shut out for the first time this season, didn't get a man to third until the eighth when Stan Musial walked and advanced on Eddie Kazak's wind-blown fly that dropped safely for a double. Box:

League Leaders Top Bosox 4-3

CLEVELAND, May 2 (INS) — Lou Boudreau walloped a three-run homer but his former teammates, the Cleveland Indians, still beat the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3, today.

The victory may have been a costly one for Cleveland, however, since pitcher Bob Lemon pulled a back muscle while batting. Lemon hurt himself in the second inning but continued pitching through the fifth.

He was hurling three-hit shutout ball when Lou Brissie relieved him.

Rookie Harry Simpson paced the Tribe at bat with three singles and a double in four times at bat. Box:

But the Tigers came back to score two runs and win the game on singles by George Kell, Vic Wertz, Pat Mullin and Groth.

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., May 2 — Moorefield High's hard-hitting baseball team backed up Gorden Raines' five-hit pitching by scoring in every inning as the Jackets trounced Keyser High's nine 11 to 4 here today.

Winning their fifth PVC tilt in six starts Moorefield punched Householder for seven bingles including two doubles by Bobby Wilson and took advantage of seven enemy miscues to win handily.

Keyser, which tallied all its runs in the fourth, was paced at bat by Bishop, with two singles and Lipscomb with a triple.

Large Field Is Set For Derby Saturday

20 Or More Horses Set For Big Test

Run For Roses May Produce Richest Prize In History

LOUISVILLE, May 2 (AP) — A thorough search of the stable area at Churchill Downs today failed to cover a trainer who doesn't intend to start his horse in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, and who doesn't furthermore, think he can win the big race.

The oldest oldetimer around the Downs cannot recall quite a parallel case, where nobody is much scared of anybody else in the field and where any one of a dozen colts is considered capable of dragging down first prize.

The victory of Calumet Farm's Fanfare in yesterday's Derby Trial didn't frighten anyone away. It still looks as though 20 runners will be jammed into the starting gate, for sure, when they pull the string, and there might be a couple or three more.

As the regular starting gate at the Downs will accommodate only 20 horses, the management put in a hurry call to Chicago and had an extra section of six stalls shipped down today, just in case. If 22 go it will match the record Derby field of 1928, the year Reigh Count won.

The winner almost certainly will pocket the biggest purse in Derby history. If 19 start the payoff will be a cool $97,050, which probably explains the reluctance of the trainers and owners to scratch any animal which has four sound legs. The present record is the $96,500 won by Assault in 1946, when 17 ran.

When asked what horse they believed they would have to beat in the mile and a quarter Derby, a majority of trainers nominated either the Greentree entry of Big Stretch and Hall Of Fame or the C. V. Whitney pair, Counterpoint and Mameluke. In their opinions, the two entries probably will go off at about equal favorites on Saturday, with Battle Morn, Fanfare and Repetoire close behind on the odds board.

Louis Decisions Agramonte Again

DETROIT, May 2 (AP) — Joe Louis won a unanimous 10-round decision over lanky Omelio Agramonte of Cuba tonight. It was the fifth win in Joe's comeback drive.

The Brown Bomber switched from his traditional shuffle, and bored in on Agramonte to floor the dark Cuban for a count of nine in the second round. It was the first time Joe had knocked down a foe in his comeback.

However, Louis, holding nearly a 20 pound edge over Agramonte, couldn't finish him off. In the ninth Louis battered Agramonte and left him dazed. But Joe couldn't land the one punch needed.

The 36-year-old Louis, who ruled the heavyweight world from 1937 to 1949, hopes to tackle Lee Savold next and then battle champion Ezzard Charles in September.

Indians Win; Lemon Hurt

League Leaders Top Bosox 4-3

CLEVELAND, May 2 (INS) — Lou Boudreau walloped a three-run homer but his former teammates, the Cleveland Indians, still beat the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3, today.

The victory may have been a costly one for Cleveland, however, since pitcher Bob Lemon pulled a back muscle while batting. Lemon hurt himself in the second inning but continued pitching through the fifth.

He was hurling three-hit shutout ball when Lou Brissie relieved him.

Rookie Harry Simpson paced the Tribe at bat with three singles and a double in four times at bat. Box:

Cats Gain Revenge For Earlier Loss

FROSTBURG, May 2 — Potomac State's Catamounts gained revenge for an earlier 10-4 loss to Frostburg State Teacher's by drubbing the Bobcats here today 22 to 9.

The losers made a total of 12 bobbles afield in losing their third game in four starts. Altogether 27 hits, including eight doubles and three homeruns marked the poorly played game.

Fourteen runs in the sixth and seventh innings iced the contest for Potomac after the teams battled to a 7-7 draw the first five frames. Sonnenberg smashed a homerun for Frostburg while Graurich hit two circuit clouts for the winners. Miller and Graurich each collected four hits for the Catamounts. Two of Miller's blows were doubles. Westrum Breaks Finger

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — Catcher Wes Westrum will be lost to the New York Giants for about 10 days because of a broken finger. Westrum injured the ring finger of his right hand on a foul tip last night. Today it was learned that the finger was broken. Rookie Ray Noble replaced him.

Raines Is Victor Over Householder

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., May 2 — Moorefield High's hard-hitting baseball team backed up Gorden Raines five-hit pitching by scoring in every inning as the Jackets trounced Keyser High's nine 11 to 4 here today.

The victory moved Moorefield into second place in the Potomac Valley Conference ahead of the Golden Tornado which dropped to third Romney's Pioneers are pacing the circuit.

Winning their fifth PVC tilt in six starts Moorefield punched Householder for seven bingles including two doubles by Bobby Wilson and took advantage of seven enemy miscues to win handily.

Keyser, which tallied all its runs in the fourth, was paced at bat by Bishop, with two singles and Lipscomb with a triple.

Moorefield will play at Circleville tomorrow in another league contest while Romney is scheduled to travel to Fort Ashby. The box:

Work will be commenced on the outdoor physical plans of the Y. M. C. A. next week. The Lynn property on the river has been obtained and it will be put in shape for tennis, athletics, hand ball, baseball and swimming. The equipment will be a float, equipped with a good spring board and a diving tower just below the intake, a tennis court, spaces for the various athletic events and hand ball courts. As much of this will be provided as possible. The gymnasium has been equipped with a hand ball court and already the game has met with favor.

The members of the junior department of the Y. M. C. A. will meet on the athletic field on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings instead of in the gymnasium for base ball practice.

HOOHEE?

I WAS an infielder when I first broke in with the Chicago Americans in 1918. However, it was as an outfielder that I achieved stature as a .300 hitter. My entire big league career was spent with the Chicago club.

ANSWERS

(Hoohee: John Anthony Mostil)

1—Once—Omar Khayyam, winner in 1917.

2—Third round.

3—Not for L. A. As a Cleveland team the Rams won in 1945.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Blanche Lloyd Shergy vs. Kader Shergy. No. 22151 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree divorcing the Plaintiff from the Defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The Bill of Complaint states that on the 6th day of October, 1946, the parties were married in Frostburg, Maryland, and that they lived together as husband and wife until on or about January 20, 1949, when the Defendant abandoned and deserted the Plaintiff and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly from that time down to the present time, and that said abandonment is for at least twenty-seven (27) months, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation.

That no children were born of said marriage.

That the Plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, and that the Defendant is a resident of Martinsburg, W. Va., and a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 17th day of April, 1951, ordered by the Circuit Court for Allegany County that the Plaintiff, by causing this Order to be inserted in some certain newspaper published in Allegany County, once a week for four successive weeks, before the 19th day of May, 1951, giving notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, and warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 5th day of June, 1951, to show cause, if any he has, why a Decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

QUESTIONS

1—Did an imported horse ever win the Kentucky Derby?

HOOHEE?

I WAS an infielder when I first broke in with the Chicago Americans in 1918. However, it was as an outfielder that I achieved stature as a .300 hitter. My entire big league career was spent with the Chicago club.

ANSWERS

1—Once—Omar Khayyam, winner in 1917.
2—Third round.
3—Not for L. A. As a Cleveland team the Rams won in 1945.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Blanche Lloyd Shergy vs. Kader Shergy. No. 22151 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a Decree divorcing the Plaintiff from the Defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The Bill of Complaint states that on the 6th day of October, 1946, the parties were married in Frostburg, Maryland, and that they lived together as husband and wife until on or about January 20, 1949, when the Defendant abandoned and deserted the Plaintiff and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly from that time down to the present time, and that said abandonment is for at least twenty-seven (27) months, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable hope of reconciliation.

That no children were born of said marriage.

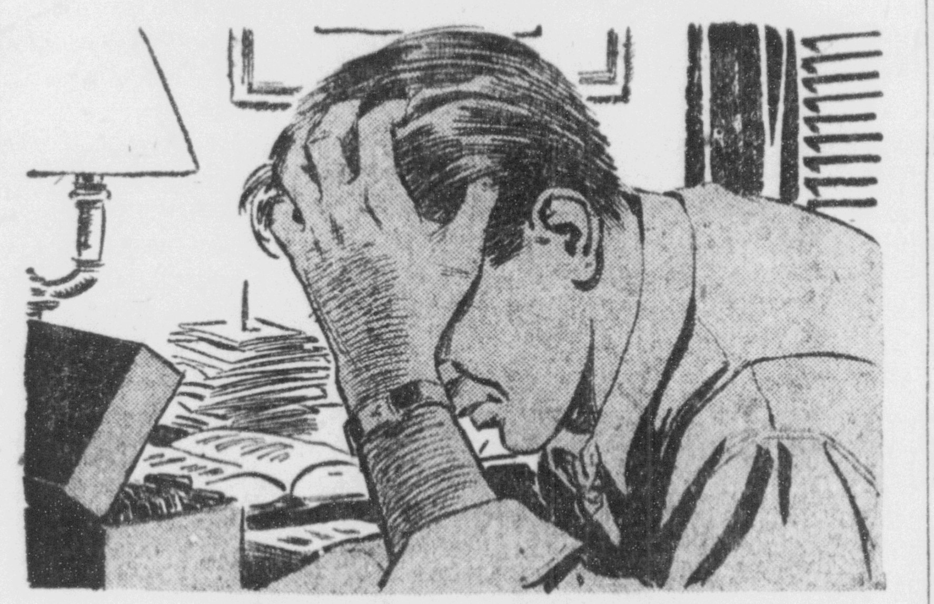
Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist



Should routine tasks bore you?

Answer: That will depend largely on how much you resent having to do them—boredom is about nine-tenth repressed rage. I once knew a rather brilliant man who made his living at what I regard as one of the most boring of all jobs—proofreading. "I like it," he told me, "because I can do it with two cells of my brain and leave the rest free to think with." If you can keep your mind and imagination active and train yourself to do chores like shaving or dishwashing automatically, you can entertain yourself well enough while doing them so that they will not bore you too badly.

65TH VICE PRES.

May prestige mean more than money?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of neurotic who seems to love money for its own sake, though even for him it really is a symbol of security or power. But the average human being years above all for the recognition and approval of his neighbors. If he has grown up feeling that money will bring him the prestige he craves, he will attempt to make as much of it as he can, but if prestige has a different meaning for him, he will be content to be successful as a scientist, a teacher or a poet, even though he knows that he will never get rich that way.

Does curing neurotic symptoms change the patient?

Answer: No, says Dr. F. E. Haldane in Lancet. A neurotic's symptoms are of small importance compared with the "underlying disorder," which is an abnormality of character and personality that "makes him unable to adjust himself to his situation in life." Because character is largely formed in childhood and is "resistive to change" in adult life, a few interviews with a psychiatrist will not have much effect on it, even though they may make you more comfortable for the time being. Real emotional re-education takes about as much time, effort and money as a college degree.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Should routine tasks bore you?

Answer: That will depend largely on how much you resent having to do them—boredom is about nine-tenth repressed rage. I once knew a rather brilliant man who made his living at what I regard as one of the most boring of all jobs—proofreading. "I like it," he told me, "because I can do it with two cells of my brain and leave the rest free to think with." If you can keep your mind and imagination active and train yourself to do chores like shaving or dishwashing automatically, you can entertain yourself well enough while doing them so that they will not bore you too badly.

65TH VICE PRES.

May prestige mean more than money?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of neurotic who seems to love money for its own sake, though even for him it really is a symbol of security or power. But the average human being years above all for the recognition and approval of his neighbors. If he has grown up feeling that money will bring him the prestige he craves, he will attempt to make as much of it as he can, but if prestige has a different meaning for him, he will be content to be successful as a scientist, a teacher or a poet, even though he knows that he will never get rich that way.

Does curing neurotic symptoms change the patient?

Answer: No, says Dr. F. E. Haldane in Lancet. A neurotic's symptoms are of small importance compared with the "underlying disorder," which is an abnormality of character and personality that "makes him unable to adjust himself to his situation in life." Because character is largely formed in childhood and is "resistive to change" in adult life, a few interviews with a psychiatrist will not have much effect on it, even though they may make you more comfortable for the time being. Real emotional re-education takes about as much time, effort and money as a college degree.

Flintstone FFA Boys Save Soil By Planting Trees On Hillside

Members of the Future Farmers of America Club at Flintstone High School are busy on a soil conservation project that is believed to be the only one of its kind in Western Maryland.

The project is a cooperative arrangement involving the FFA Club, Miss Lena Twigg of Flintstone and Soil Conservationist Martin Gordon.

Evolved Last Year

Plans for the program were evolved last year when Miss Twigg had the desire to have pine trees planted on a 25-acre hillside which she owns but had no laborers available to do the work.

Gordon made arrangements to get 2,500 young red pine trees through the United States Soil Conservation Service. In cooperation with Mrs. Elsie Hill Roland, principal of Flintstone High School, Robert E. L. Ross, vocational agriculture teacher and adviser of the FFA Club, arranged to get the FFA boys to do the tree planting. That was the first part of the agreement.

The past several weeks the FFA boys have been fulfilling the second phase of the project. They have been replacing Miss Twigg's red pines which have died since last year. Then, they also have been planting some 2,500 Scotch pine and spruce trees on the eroded hillside which belongs to Miss Twigg.

Belong To FFA

The Scotch pine and spruce trees belong to the Flintstone FFA. In eight or 10 years, boys who then are members of the Flintstone FFA will be able to sell many of the trees off the land for the Christmas season trade.

Obviously, then, everyone concerned benefits. Gordon is happy to have the trees planted to conserve the soil of that section of Allegany County. Miss Twigg is glad to save the soil on her land through the tree planting. The FFA boys are pleased because it serves as insurance of funds to operate the FFA program in future years.

The hillside where the planting has occurred is on the north side of Route 40, just across the highway from the school. Miss Twigg lives in the old Flintstone Hotel property nearby.

Ross' FFA boys also have been busy in recent weeks planting rosebushes and trees around the school property. Rose bushes also have been planted around the edges of Miss Twigg's property.

Garrett County Blast Being Probed By FBI

A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent is probing the blast that damaged Preston Railroad tracks near Hutton in Garrett county on April 24.

Sheriff Paul W. Fisher, of Garrett county, also reported that the check is being continued but no arrests have been made.

The damage was discovered last Wednesday afternoon when a train of loaded coal cars was being taken from Crellin to Hutton. Only one train a day is operated over the road. It completes its trip at 4:30 p. m.

Sheriff Fisher said the blast caused a hole about three feet deep and 10 feet in diameter, mangling 35 feet of tracks. He estimated the charge contained 20 to 25 sticks of dynamite.

Repairs have been made and the railroad is operating. Damage amounted to several hundred dollars.

Flintstone FFA Boys Save Soil By Planting Trees On Hillside

Members of the Future Farmers of America Club at Flintstone High School are busy on a soil conservation project that is believed to be the only one of its kind in Western Maryland.

The project is a cooperative arrangement involving the FFA Club, Miss Lena Twigg of Flintstone and Soil Conservationist Martin Gordon.

Evolved Last Year

Plans for the program were evolved last year when Miss Twigg had the desire to have pine trees planted on a 25-acre hillside which she owns but had no laborers available to do the work.

Gordon made arrangements to get 2,500 young red pine trees through the United States Soil Conservation Service. In cooperation with Mrs. Elsie Hill Roland, principal of Flintstone High School, Robert E. L. Ross, vocational agriculture teacher and adviser of the FFA Club, arranged to get the FFA boys to do the tree planting. That was the first part of the agreement.

The past several weeks the FFA boys have been fulfilling the second phase of the project. They have been replacing Miss Twigg's red pines which have died since last year. Then, they also have been planting some 2,500 Scotch pine and spruce trees on the eroded hillside which belongs to Miss Twigg.

Belong To FFA

The Scotch pine and spruce trees belong to the Flintstone FFA. In eight or 10 years, boys who then are members of the Flintstone FFA will be able to sell many of the trees off the land for the Christmas season trade.

Obviously, then, everyone concerned benefits. Gordon is happy to have the trees planted to conserve the soil of that section of Allegany County. Miss Twigg is glad to save the soil on her land through the tree planting. The FFA boys are pleased because it serves as insurance of funds to operate the FFA program in future years.

The hillside where the planting has occurred is on the north side of Route 40, just across the highway from the school. Miss Twigg lives in the old Flintstone Hotel property nearby.

Ross' FFA boys also have been busy in recent weeks planting rosebushes and trees around the school property. Rose bushes also have been planted around the edges of Miss Twigg's property.

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2 (INS)—Redhaired Susan Hayward has had to give up her plans to go to Europe, all on account of Darryl Zanuck wants her for "I'll See You In My Dreams," the Jane Froman story.

Susan Hayward

Yes, I know Jeanne Crain was supposed to play the singing Froman gal, but there is another plan cooking for Jeanne.

As I told you, Jane's own voice will be heard while Susie does the emoting, just as Al Jolson's own voice was heard in "The Jolson Story."

You'll see David Wayne as Don Ross, the first husband of the singer, while husky Dale Robertson plays John Burn, an officer on the Lisbon clipper which crashed in 1944 seriously injuring Miss Froman. Burn and Miss Froman are now married as the culmination of a romance born of this tragedy.

This comes straight. All that talk about Warner Brothers Studio being sold is not true.

What happened is that according to the bill of divorcement, Warner brothers have to sell their theaters not later than 1953. Jack was in New York to consider some of the offers with his brothers, Harry and Albert.

So far there is no sale because Warners haven't received the price they want, although there naturally are some takers.

It was difficult for me ever to believe that Warners were going to sell out their studio for television, or sell it, period—still you can never tell.

I have just had a letter saying that Judy Garland will remain on the continent for three concerts—one in Paris, one in Cannes, and one in Monte Carlo.

The season opens in Monte Carlo and Cannes in July. Usually the ballet is at Monte Carlo and the galas are festive and bring all the people in Southern France to these gay events.

It would be a great thing for Judy. I am told she is getting more and more confidence.

Listen to this: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the first American to apply to the five-hundred-year-old College of Arms in London for a knight's coat of arms.

According to the London Sunday Express, Douglas made history with the application. Two years ago he was made a honorary knight commander of the British Empire in recognition of his work for Anglo-American amity.

Although he is not giving up his American citizenship and denies it whenever questioned, Doug has applied for a grant of arms, as they say in jolly old London. According to the London paper, Douglas claims the family arms, inherited from his ancestors.

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2 (INS)—Redhaired Susan Hayward has had to give up her plans to go to Europe, all on account of Darryl Zanuck wants her for "I'll See You In My Dreams," the Jane Froman story.

Susan Hayward

Yes, I know Jeanne Crain was supposed to play the singing Froman gal, but there is another plan cooking for Jeanne.

As I told you, Jane's own voice will be heard while Susie does the emoting, just as Al Jolson's own voice was heard in "The Jolson Story."

You'll see David Wayne as Don Ross, the first husband of the singer, while husky Dale Robertson plays John Burn, an officer on the Lisbon clipper which crashed in 1944 seriously injuring Miss Froman. Burn and Miss Froman are now married as the culmination of a romance born of this tragedy.

This comes straight. All that talk about Warner Brothers Studio being sold is not true.

What happened is that according to the bill of divorcement, Warner brothers have to sell their theaters not later than 1953. Jack was in New York to consider some of the offers with his brothers, Harry and Albert.

So far there is no sale because Warners haven't received the price they want, although there naturally are some takers.

It was difficult for me ever to believe that Warners were going to sell out their studio for television, or sell it, period—still you can never tell.

I have just had a letter saying that Judy Garland will remain on the continent for three concerts—one in Paris, one in Cannes, and one in Monte Carlo.

The season opens in Monte Carlo and Cannes in July. Usually the ballet is at Monte Carlo and the galas are festive and bring all the people in Southern France to these gay events.

It would be a great thing for Judy. I am told she is getting more and more confidence.

Listen to this: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the first American to apply to the five-hundred-year-old College of Arms in London for a knight's coat of arms.

According to the London Sunday Express, Douglas made history with the application. Two years ago he was made a honorary knight commander of the British Empire in recognition of his work for Anglo-American amity.

Although he is not giving up his American citizenship and denies it whenever questioned, Doug has applied for a grant of arms, as they say in jolly old London. According to the London paper, Douglas claims the family arms, inherited from his ancestors.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Mrs. Clark Gable's ex, Lord Stanley of Alderley, was married last month to 24-year-old Mlle. Therese Husson, daughter of a French admiral. The bridegroom is 43.

Sandra Curtis, third wife of Alan Curtis, and now an ex herself, is reported wearing a huge diamond ring and about to marry a millionaire. Alan's current bride, Betty Dodero, lost a million dollars by divorcing Albert Dodero, who was much loved.

Rita Hayworth is being advised to get her divorce from Prince Aly Khan, or her separate maintenance, right in Los Angeles. She owned property up to a few months ago and has the legal right to do so. Since she has no plans to marry, her friends believe this would be the wisest thing.

Are Shelley Winters and Farley Granger planning to marry in New York? And, just off the record, that ring was an engagement ring.

Betty Hutton held open house in her new plush dressing room, and, believe me, it's really something. All the Paramounters on the lot were invited, and Betty made them take off their shoes at the door before they stepped on the velvet carpets.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Disease-carrying rats are responsible for the deaths of more people than died in all the wars of history.

A Column for Men

STAG LINES

By BERT BACHARACH

Three-in-One

Straight Tie, Square End

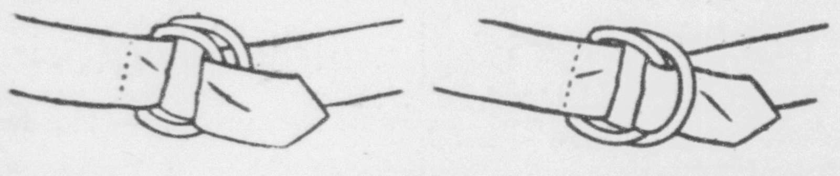
FASHION: TV star Jan Murray's outfit (right) highlights three fashion features—the straight tie with square end; the neat monogram embroidered on the shirt; and the rolled widespread collar.

Care of Clothes: Two moths can produce 625 million descendants in a year! One moth can eat 90 pounds of wool in that time. So mothproof woolens, or send them to storage for the summer. . . . If caught in rainstorm, "finger-press" the cuffs of your trousers before hanging away.

Handyman: Use your wife's nail polish to paint ruler marks on one blade of her scissors—makes a handy gadget. . . . Are you troubled with top-heavy vases around the house? Weight them down with some clean sand.

Gadgets: Shower-Aid, a long plastic tube that hangs on the shower rod. Holds soap, shampoo, brushes, etc. . . . Thermo-Pak for the lunch or picnic box. It will keep your lunch hot or cold—whichever you prefer.

Belt and Buckle: Many men still find the two-ring buckles, now popular on sport belts, a bit of a mystery. The procedure for slip-proof buckling is easy, simply pull free end through both rings, over top ring, under lower one, and pull taut.



Dress Tips: If your closet is crowded, see that fronts of suits are straight and smooth when put away. Saves pressing bills. . . . See that metal parts of wooden clothes hangers are clean and not rusted before using them for light-colored summer clothes.

A Word to Men

Odd Items: Singer Rosalind Courtright (left) says "There's one thing that men everywhere can learn from California. You can be colorful and still be well-dressed in sport clothes." . . . AAL says, "A clean airplane picks up six m.p.h. in speed to one that's dirty." ' The same principle applies to dirty golf balls—so keep 'em scrubbed. . . . If you're a hair wetter, let your brush dry by setting it with bristles down. . . . In three recent pictures, Kirk Douglas died before the fade-out. Shelley Winters tops that record by one. . . . This week's "Pass the Cigars" to—Fred Astaire who, at an age when most men are beginning to take things easy, is dancing better than ever.

A Column for Men

STAG LINES

By BERT BACHARACH

Three-in-One

Straight Tie, Square End

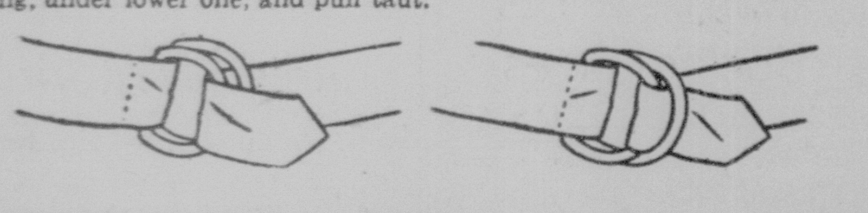
FASHION: TV star Jan Murray's outfit (right) highlights three fashion features—the straight tie with square end; the neat monogram embroidered on the shirt; and the rolled widespread collar.

Care of Clothes: Two moths can produce 625 million descendants in a year! One moth can eat 90 pounds of wool in that time. So mothproof woolens, or send them to storage for the summer. . . . If caught in rainstorm, "finger-press" the cuffs of your trousers before hanging away.

Handyman: Use your wife's nail polish to paint ruler marks on one blade of her scissors—makes a handy gadget. . . . Are you troubled with top-heavy vases around the house? Weight them down with some clean sand.

Gadgets: Shower-Aid, a long plastic tube that hangs on the shower rod. Holds soap, shampoo, brushes, etc. . . . Thermo-Pak for the lunch or picnic box. It will keep your lunch hot or cold—whichever you prefer.

Belt and Buckle: Many men still find the two-ring buckles, now popular on sport belts, a bit of a mystery. The procedure for slip-proof buckling is easy, simply pull free end through both rings, over top ring, under lower one, and pull taut.



Dress Tips: If your closet is crowded, see that fronts of suits are straight and smooth when put away. Saves pressing bills. . . . See that metal parts of wooden clothes hangers are clean and not rusted before using them for light-colored summer clothes.

A Word to Men

Odd Items: Singer Rosalind Courtright (left) says "There's one thing that men everywhere can learn from California. You can be colorful and still be well-dressed in sport clothes." . . . AAL says, "A clean airplane picks up six m.p.h. in speed to one that's dirty." ' The same principle applies to dirty golf balls—so keep 'em scrubbed. . . . If you're a hair wetter, let your brush dry by setting it with bristles down. . . . In three recent pictures, Kirk Douglas died before the fade-out. Shelley Winters tops that record by one. . . . This week's "Pass the Cigars" to—Fred Astaire who, at an age when most men are beginning to take things easy, is dancing better than ever.

Demand For Rails Braces Otherwise Ragged Market

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—A sustained demand for railroad issues today braced up an other wise ragged stock market.

Action of the rails was much better than any other major group, and gains among the leaders went beyond $2 a share.

Elsewhere in the list the plus signs in some instances hit the $3 mark, but there also were minus signs as large as $2 in prominent stocks.

Lockheed Aircraft was the day's most active issue closing up 1¼ at 40⅞.

Lockheed was stimulated by three things—1. an announcement early yesterday of new jet trainer orders, 2. A proposal by directors for a two-for-one split, 3. the report at the annual meeting that first quarter sales were up 10 per cent from a year ago and the prediction that 1951 will be a very satisfactory year.

Pharmaceuticals flared up at one time with Parke-Davis in the lead. It closed up 3 at 56½. The company reported all-time high first quarter earnings amounting to $1.22 a share as against 89 cents a year ago.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 30 cents to $96.60 with the industrials unchanged, rails up 70 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Volume of trading expanded to 1,900,000 shares as compared with yesterday's 1,760,000 shares.

There were 1,162 individual issues traded of which 519 advanced and 379 declined. New highs came to 71 with 24 new lows.

Demand For Rails Braces Otherwise Ragged Market

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—A sustained demand for railroad issues today braced up an other wise ragged stock market.

Action of the rails was much better than any other major group, and gains among the leaders went beyond $2 a share.

Elsewhere in the list the plus signs in some instances hit the $3 mark, but there also were minus signs as large as $2 in prominent stocks.

Lockheed Aircraft was the day's most active issue closing up 1¼ at 40⅞.

Lockheed was stimulated by three things—1. an announcement early yesterday of new jet trainer orders, 2. A proposal by directors for a two-for-one split, 3. the report at the annual meeting that first quarter sales were up 10 per cent from a year ago and the prediction that 1951 will be a very satisfactory year.

Pharmaceuticals flared up at one time with Parke-Davis in the lead. It closed up 3 at 56½. The company reported all-time high first quarter earnings amounting to $1.22 a share as against 89 cents a year ago.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 30 cents to $96.60 with the industrials unchanged, rails up 70 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Volume of trading expanded to 1,900,000 shares as compared with yesterday's 1,760,000 shares.

There were 1,162 individual issues traded of which 519 advanced and 379 declined. New highs came to 71 with 24 new lows.

McKeldin Proposes Office To Lure Industry To Md.

Governor's Suggestion Comes In Speech To Oakland Group

Uncertainty About Coal Measure Expressed By Chief Executive To Mountain Top C. Of C.

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin tonight suggested a new state office to lure industries to Maryland.

It ought to be small, but have enough authority to coordinate the work of existing state agencies, the Governor said in a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting of the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

"I favor and will work for the establishment of a bureau for industrial development in Maryland," he said.

"Super-Paternalism" Out

McKeldin repeated his antagonism to "super-paternalism of the states over their subdivisions." But he said attracting new business "with emphasis on the areas of greatest economic demand" is a proper field for state government.

He said the bureau he has in mind could deal with the State Planning Commission, Department of Information, other state agencies, chambers of commerce and local public officials.

"Working together, I believe we can build a practical and successful organization for industrial promotion without great expense and without overlapping the functions of other agencies," the Governor said.

Sidetracked Bill

The 1950 Legislature sidetracked a bill to set up a separate unit for industrial development, but passed legislation to increase such activity by the Planning Commission.

Former Governor Lane vetoed the measure because it would have made the commission the state's official liaison agency with interested Federal and other outside offices.

McKeldin, who arrived here last night for a day in what he called "this country that rests on the clouds," admitted he was uncertain about a 1951 act requiring use of Maryland coal in state institutions.

"I favor such legislation primarily in the interest of Maryland citizens who make their living from the mining of coal," he said.

Opposes Exclusion

He didn't like exclusion of miners who live in Crellin. The act covers coal dug in Maryland, although the entrance to one mine is in West Virginia. Crellin men are employed by a Maryland company, but mine coal in West Virginia.

If he does sign the bill, McKeldin said, he will try to have it amended next year "to end the discrimination against the people of Crellin."

In his remarks about industrial expansion, Governor McKeldin emphasized that more heavy industry should be attracted to Western Maryland. He recommended such development especially for Allegany County.

"Picnic Spot"

"Garrett County should be the picnic spot of Maryland," McKeldin stated in another portion of his address, referring to this county's special desirability as a recreational area.

Governor McKeldin tonight repeated his earlier contention that school construction is a county problem and should be financed through county bond issues.

Pointing to his difficulty in reaching a decision concerning the Maryland coal bill which was adopted by the recent Legislature, McKeldin emphasized that Allegany County residents are urging that he sign it into law while interested parties in Garrett County are requesting a veto.

Along Deep Creek Lake

Governor and Mrs. McKeldin arrived in Garrett County Tuesday afternoon for their first visit here since his election last November. They spent Tuesday night and most of this morning along Deep Creek Lake.

Most of this afternoon Governor McKeldin visited in and around around Oakland, where he conferred with a number of Garrett County's Republican leaders.

After his speech, Governor and Mrs. McKeldin drove to Pittsburgh, Pa., where they were scheduled to take a plane for Detroit, Mich. The Governor has a speaking engagement in Michigan tomorrow.

Contract Talks Continued By Two CIO Unions

Rubber, Brewery Strike Votes Taken

Officials of two CIO unions which took strike votes this week in connection with contract negotiations reported last night that attempts to reach agreements are continuing.

Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO), reported its members voted 20 to one to authorize cancellations of its contract and for strike action if contract issues are not settled.

Heavy Vote

The vote in the poll among the union which had 1,867 active members April 30, was reported heavy.

Raymond C. Burkhart, president, said negotiations toward a settlement will resume this morning. Satisfactory progress has been made in the last few meetings with the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, he added.

A report on contract negotiations will be presented to the membership at a meeting in the union hall Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

Also slated for the meeting is the nomination of officers. They include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, executive board, one trustee, sentinel, guide, members of the Policy and Labor-Management committees.

Contract Expires

Members of Local 265, Brewery Workers Union (CIO), whose contract expired Monday, took a strike vote yesterday. Results of the poll were not divulged.

An informed union source said discussions are continuing and that the union hopes a satisfactory settlement will be reached.

The union, it is understood, has asked $6 a week wage boost, based on the 10 per cent formula, with the Queen City and Cumberland Brewing Companies offering $5. Some 250 workers are involved in the contract talks.

Adams Will Head Area Fire Chiefs

Other officers are Warren Livengood, LaVale, vice president; Austin G. Snyder, Bowling Green, secretary; Joseph G. Wenrich, Cresaptown, treasurer; John Shoemaker, Accident; Frederick Purnell, Bedford Road; Melvin DeHaven, Baltimore Pike, and Eldred Fletcher, Bowman's Addition, trustees.

In a round-table discussion, the firemen considered the advisability of conducting an educational campaign to discourage young children from chasing fire trucks. Carloads of youngsters hurrying to a fire create a traffic hazard, they agreed.

The firemen also discussed phases of the mutual aid system under the civil defense program. This will avert such a catastrophe as struck Hyndman, Pa., Christmas Day, 1949, they said.

Cafe Rent Dispute Set Today In Court

A jury in Allegany County Circuit Court today is scheduled to hear a $2,500 damage suit which stems from the rental of premises at 26 Baltimore Street for a cafe.

The suit was filed March 2 for Louis LaNeve and Elizabeth LaNeve by their attorney, Earl E. Manges, against Frank Molinari. The plaintiffs said that they had leased the premises to Molinari September 10, 1945. The period of the lease, they said, was from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1950. Molinari was to pay $250 per month rent from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1947, and $225 per month thereafter. The LaNeves charge that Molinari occupied the premises for three months after the expiration of the lease and paid no rent during that time. The plaintiff also contend that Molinari removed duct work and decorations in a "grossly negligent and unworkmanlike manner" and caused considerable damage.

Baltimore Pike Group Cultivates Own Ground

Anyone interested in seeing a fine example of cooperative spirit among American youth with a bit of competition blended in, should visit a plot of land in the rear of the Baltimore Pike Volunteer Fire Company.

For here, a garden project is being carried on by members of the 4-H Club in that area. Seventeen members of the group led by Harold Bean, instructor at Flintstone School, are cultivating an eighth of an acre of ground to raise their own vegetables.

Since its organization about a year and a half ago the club has been fostering small projects at home or at the neighbors. Such chores as caring for and watering livestock, feeding chickens, and raising vegetables in small gardens add to their points in 4-H circles.

Ground for this year's project was broken Friday with plowing "know how," equipment and the time of A. M. Kight being donated. Martin L. Gordon, conservation aide of the Allegany Soil Conservation District will mark off the hillside and instruct the youthful members on the proper method of tilling the soil in order to prevent erosion.

Plan To Sell Products

The boys, who ages range from nine to 14, attend school at East Side Grade School and Fort Hill, Cumberland, and the project work comes after classes and on Saturday. Money for the purchase of potatoes, sweet corn, tomatoes, and beans will be drawn from the club's treasury and at harvesting time the members will sell their products and return the proceeds to the treasurer.

"Handling money is one of the responsibilities of the 4-H program and members of our club will be given an opportunity to keep records on the profits of their project," Harold Bean remarked.

Land for the cultivation of crops is being loaned by the firemen of the area, who were glad to be of assistance in furthering the program.

Accurate Records Kept

The competitive spirit enters the picture since each member of the club will be given credit for the amount of work he does and the results of his endeavors. "Accurate records are kept from day to day," Bean added.

Of course "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" so evidence that some play enters into the project was shown as the Ferguson Tractor-Plow turned over the first furrow of soil Friday. The unanimous comment of the youthful agriculturalists was that a can would have been useful at the time to gather up worms for fishing "down the stream."

Carl Upole, 12-year-old East Side Grade School pupil, remarked that he "was fishing with my dad this morning. We got up at 4 o'clock and he caught three and I got a 12 and one-half inch trout." His eyes sparkled as he told of his accomplishment "in Evitts Creek."

Help The Neighbors

With a more serious glance Colvin Athey, a seventh grade pupil of Fort Hill, related that he has "belonged to the club about a year and I help some neighbors who have cows and pigs to tend to most everyday."

Hitchcock Will Present Data On Smoke Work Here

George M. Hitchcock, smoke abatement engineer for the City of Cumberland, will attend the 44th annual convention of the Air Pollution and Smoke Prevention Association of America which will be held in Roanoke, Va., May 6 to 10.

He will report on progress in smoke abatement in Cumberland during a panel discussion on air pollution.

The report will include data on the use of PH readings in determining the toxic condition of dustfall in the city.

The method, Hitchcock explained, consists of determining the acidity of alkalinity of the dustfall, plus chemical tests to check on the presence of harmful substances.

Hitchcock said Cumberland is the only city in the United States to use the PH method, adding that the system has been in use in Great Britain since 1930.

His report will include data on smoke violations, which dropped to .42 per 100 last year from 1950's 7.29.

Even better results will be obtained this year, he will report, due to the virtual dieselization of the Cumberland yards.

King Brother's Circus Will Show Here Monday, May 14

Shriners Sponsor Big Top Exhibit

Monday, May 14, will be Circus Day in Cumberland. This year the King Brother's Circus will appear for two performances at the Taylor Tin Plate grounds at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m.

The "show under the big top" will be sponsored by Ali Ghan Shrine. A traveling zoo of wild animals, clowns, acrobats, cowboys, cowgirls, popcorn and peanuts will all be part of the program. Over 150 performers will appear with the King Brother's Circus.

A feature of the program will be the horseback riding skill of pretty 21-year-old June Cristiani. Like the other members of her family, she has inherited strength, skill and daring.

The life of sawdust and spangles is the only life she has ever known as she was born while her parents were with a circus exhibiting in Copenhagen, Denmark. She represents the third generation of a famous circus family.

While her acts last but eight minutes, years of practice were required to perfect her act. She is an accomplished somersaulting rider and after six years of practice has perfected the turning of a backward somersault from one running horse to another.

JUNE CRISTIANI

Tickets for underprivileged children were distributed to welfare organizations last week and the Shrine hopes to give as many children as possible the "thrill of Circus Days."

Auto License Deadline Set For May 10

Commercial Plates Needed By May 31

The long-extended deadline for use of old automobile license plates will end at midnight Thursday, May 10, Deputy Tax Collector Ernest B. Treat was informed yesterday afternoon.

Originally, the deadline was midnight March 31, but Governor McKeldin extended the time indefinitely because a shortage of metal has prevented delivery of plates.

Yesterday afternoon a telegram from State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Thomas B. R. Mudd informed Treat of the new deadline. This new deadline will be midnight May 10 for all passenger car and motorcycle licenses, according to the telegram.

Mudd's dispatch also stipulated that the deadline for all commercial license plates will be midnight Thursday, May 31. Applications for commercial plates will be mailed out May 10.

Treat expects to have $15 and $17 commercial license plates for sale at his office later this month. These will serve half and three-quarter ton trucks and farm trucks.

The tax collector has been selling passenger car license plates at his Court House office ever since the last week in February. After the deadline was extended the sale fell off to only about 25 to 50 sets each day. He still has about 800 sets of passenger car plates out of 14,000 that have been issued to him.

Blossom Festival Opens Today In Winchester, Va.

Coronation Of Queen Is Program Feature

WINCHESTER, Va., (AP)—A carnival air gripped Winchester last night with the arrival earlier in the day of the blonde Norwegian girl who will rule over the 24th annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

While Miss Curi Lie met last night with festival workers and with radio and newspaper representatives, thousands of persons were busy putting on the finishing touches for the start of official activity today.

The feature of today's opening program of the two-day affair will be the coronation of Miss Lie, daughter of United Nations Secretary General and Mrs. Trygvie Lie, as Queen Shenandoah XXIV.

Marshall To Crown Queen

Crown-placing honors will be performed by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall before thousands of persons assembled to watch the coronation and the ensuing presentation of a pageant, "our Heritage."

Before she is crowned queen, Miss Lie and her court will visit the blooming apple orchards to be photographed. Tonight, she will watch the annual Firemen's Parade, for which the marshal will be Harry Wismer, director of sports for the American Broadcasting Company.

The festival will be climaxed tomorrow afternoon by the grand parade, "The Trail of The Pink Petals," for which the grand marshal will be Esther Williams, auburn-haired Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie actress.

150,000 Expected

A series of dances each night and hundreds of other activities are on tap for the estimated 150,000 persons who will jam this apple-growing center of 12,000 inhabitants today and tomorrow.

Miss Lie arrived here by car in the company of her escort, Albert Allen, a Winchester student at Hackley School, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Miss Mary Warden Boyd, also of Winchester. She had come from Washington.

The blonde queen-elect was rushed to a joint civic clubs' luncheon at which she was welcomed by Mayor M. B. Clowe and which produced most of the serious activity that will accompany the festival.

Festival offfcials were notified yesterday that the curvaceous Miss Williams, Grand Parade Marshal, will leave California by plane this afternoon and will arrive here early tomorrow in time to make the rounds of the second presentation of the pageant and other activities before the parade.

Visitors who came here yesterday to witness pre-festival activities had ideal — but warm — weather. The temperature soared to a high of 87 degrees, and the average temperature was about 12 degrees above normal.

Preliminary Report On Area Economic Survey Submitted

Steering Group Receives Copies Of First Draft

Cumberland's advantageous position with respect to a market of 80 million people was highlighted as one of many findings in an economic survey of this area made by federal and state experts.

The preliminary findings of this survey were presented at the City Hall yesterday afternoon by representatives of a joint U. S. Department of Commerce and U. S. Department of Labor Committee to the Steering Committee for the Economic Development of Allegany County. Members of the Steering Committee who had arranged with John Steelman, assistant to the President, to have the survey undertaken, were asked to review the report and submit their comments before the final report is made public.

Analyzes Resources

It was explained that the purpose of the report was to analyze the economic resources of the area and to call attention to its potentialities for employment and business enterprise. It is anticipated that on the basis of the survey the community itself will be able to develop an integrated action program through which the opportunities of the area can be realized.

The preliminary findings were presented by a group from Washington including Victor Rotemus and David Campbell of the U. S. Department of Commerce and Gladys Fielding of the U. S. Department of Labor to the meeting at which David Kauffman, chairman of the Steering Committee, presided.

State representatives at the meeting included Alvin Pasarew, director of the Maryland State Planning Commission, John Trimmer, Director of Maryland Department of Information, and William Spangler, State Veterans Employment Service Director.

The survey was prepared by a combined team of the Departments of Labor, Commerce, Agriculture and Industry, along with the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Security Agency, the Maryland Department of Employment and Security, West Virginia Department of Employment Security, Maryland State Department of Public Welfare and the American Federation of Labor.

The Steering Committee of which Kauffman is chairman and F. Allan Weatherholt secretary, requested and encouraged the survey along with recommendations from this survey team, for a plan to improve local economic conditions and remedy the economic ills and joblessness of the area.

The Steering Committee is composed of representatives of the Mayor and City Council, Board of Allegany County Commissioners, Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission, Allegany County Industrial Promotion Company, Emergency Relief Committee, Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Western Maryland Full Employment Committee, Industrial Promotion Commission and State Veterans Service Committee of Allegany County.

Two Main Avenues

Campbell, who directed the survey stated that the two main avenues open to the Cumberland area for expanding its employment opportunities were in the fields of industry and recreation.

It was noted by committee members last night that the proposal of Gov. McKeldin to set up a state office to attract industry into Mary-

HomeNursing Course Opens In City School

The second in a series of county-wide home nursing courses, sponsored by the American Red Cross, got underway last night at Penn Avenue School. Mrs. Harriet Boor, Shade's Lane, a registered nurse and qualified Red Cross instructor, will conduct the class of 15 women.

The 12 hour course will be held on Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock and is in conjunction with the Civil Defense Program.

The purpose of the courses is to instruct county residents in fundamentals of home nursing, the manner in which to care for a patient until arrival of a physician and methods of improving equipment.

The National Red Cross, Mrs. Leo Witherup, executive-secretary of the Allegany Chapter said yesterday, is endeavoring to train 100,000 such qaulified persons and the county is attempting to instruct its quota.

A similar 30-hour course was started in Lonaconing last week where 12 members under the direction of Mrs. Carl C. Daum, 740 Brookfield Avenue, are being taught the home nursing fundamentals. They meet Monday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m.

Local Jewish Fund Rally Is Planned Sunday

Charles Auerbach To Be Guest Speaker

Charles Auerbach, Cleveland attorney, will be principal speaker at a meeting next Sunday in the Vestry Room of B'er Chayim Temple, South Centre Street, at 8 p. m. when plans will be made for Cumberland's participation in the national $500,000,000 State of Israel Bond issue.

CHARLES AUERBACH

Auerbach received AB and LLB degrees at Western Reserve University in 1920 and 1922 and has served as a member of the Committee on Judicial Campaigns of the Cleveland Bar Association, served as trial counsel for the association and on the civil rights committee for the Ohio Bar Association.

For many years he served as a national director of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver and served on the Speaker's Division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, the United Jewish Appeal, the Jewish Welfare Federation of Cleveland and in 1946 toured Central America for the Jewish Agency.

In 1940 he was admitted to membership of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States and for the past eight years has been on the staff of the Cleveland Marshall Law School.

Announcement of the national bond purchases will be made to the Prime Minister of the State of Israel, David Ben Gurion, on his visit to Madison Square Garden, New York, May 10.

Proceeds of the bond issue will be used by the Israeli government for agricultural and industrial enterprises, for the full promotion of the country's economic potential and to develop trade and commercial possibilities.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, heads the nationwide effort. George Ossip, president of the Cumberland District Zionist organization, is chairman of the local group. The meeting is open to the public.

Union Will Map Contract Plans

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will hold a special membership meeting next Wednesday to continue discussion and action on a new contract at the Amcelle plant.

Playford Aldridge, president, said the meeting will be a continuation of meetings held April 18 and 25 to plan the pact.

He said the union hopes to have its contract demands ready for presentation immediately after negotiations open this spring.

By June 9, the union must present a 60-day notice of intentions of amending the present pact and formal contract talks must begin within 10 days of the date of the notice. The pact is effective until August 8.

McKeldin Proposes Office To Lure Industry To Md.

Governor's Suggestion Comes In Speech To Oakland Group

Uncertainty About Coal Measure Expressed By Chief Executive To Mountain Top C. Of C.

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin tonight suggested a new state office to lure industries to Maryland.

It ought to be small, but have enough authority to coordinate the work of existing state agencies, the Governor said in a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting of the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

"I favor and will work for the establishment of a bureau for industrial development in Maryland," he said.

"Super-Paternalism" Out

McKeldin repeated his antagonism to "super-paternalism of the states over their subdivisions." But he said attracting new business "with emphasis on the areas of greatest economic demand" is a proper field for state government.

He said the bureau he has in mind could deal with the State Planning Commission, Department of Information, other state agencies, chambers of commerce and local public officials.

"Working together, I believe we can build a practical and successful organization for industrial promotion without great expense and without overlapping the functions of other agencies," the Governor said.

Sidetracked Bill

The 1950 Legislature sidetracked a bill to set up a separate unit for industrial development, but passed legislation to increase such activity by the Planning Commission.

Former Governor Lane vetoed the measure because it would have made the commission the state's official liaison agency with interested Federal and other outside offices.

McKeldin, who arrived here last night for a day in what he called "this country that rests on the clouds," admitted he was uncertain about a 1951 act requiring use of Maryland coal in state institutions.

"I favor such legislation primarily in the interest of Maryland citizens who make their living from the mining of coal," he said.

Opposes Exclusion

He didn't like exclusion of miners who live in Crellin. The act covers coal dug in Maryland, although the entrance to one mine is in West Virginia. Crellin men are employed by a Maryland company, but mine coal in West Virginia.

If he does sign the bill, McKeldin said, he will try to have it amended next year "to end the discrimination against the people of Crellin."

In his remarks about industrial expansion, Governor McKeldin emphasized that more heavy industry should be attracted to Western Maryland. He recommended such development especially for Allegany County.

"Picnic Spot"

"Garrett County should be the picnic spot of Maryland," McKeldin stated in another portion of his address, referring to this county's special desirability as a recreational area.

Governor McKeldin tonight repeated his earlier contention that school construction is a county problem and should be financed through county bond issues.

Pointing to his difficulty in reaching a decision concerning the Maryland coal bill which was adopted by the recent Legislature, McKeldin emphasized that Allegany County residents are urging that he sign it into law while interested parties in Garrett County are requesting a veto.

Along Deep Creek Lake

Governor and Mrs. McKeldin arrived in Garrett County Tuesday afternoon for their first visit here since his election last November. They spent Tuesday night and most of this morning along Deep Creek Lake.

Most of this afternoon Governor McKeldin visited in and around around Oakland, where he conferred with a number of Garrett County's Republican leaders.

After his speech, Governor and Mrs. McKeldin drove to Pittsburgh, Pa., where they were scheduled to take a plane for Detroit, Mich. The Governor has a speaking engagement in Michigan tomorrow.

Governor Endorses Festival In Area

OAKLAND, Md., May 2 (AP)—Governor McKeldin thinks Western Maryland should put on an outdoor festival, like they do in West Virginia and some other states.

He asked Garrett countians to let him know what they think of the idea. He suggested a "forest" or a "mountain" festival.

"I believe such a special week of festivity and mass demonstration of our hospitality would do much to advertise the county as a vacationland," the Governor said in a speech prepared for the Mountain Top Chamber of Commerce.

To Report On Tests

The Civil Service Commission met last night to begin grading tests given recently for positions in the fire and police departments and for fire chief and assistant fire chief.

Officials said they hope to have results ready for presentation at Monday's meeting of the Mayor and Council.

Contract Talks Continued By Two CIO Unions

Rubber, Brewery Strike Votes Taken

Officials of two CIO unions which took strike votes this week in connection with contract negotiations reported last night that attempts to reach agreements are continuing.

Local 26, Rubber Workers Union (CIO), reported its members voted 20 to one to authorize cancellations of its contract and for strike action if contract issues are not settled.

Heavy Vote

The vote in the poll among the union which had 1,867 active members April 30, was reported heavy.

Raymond C. Burkhart, president, said negotiations toward a settlement will resume this morning. Satisfactory progress has been made in the last few meetings with the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, he added.

A report on contract negotiations will be presented to the membership at a meeting in the union hall Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

Also slated for the meeting is the nomination of officers. They include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, executive board, one trustee, sentinel, guide, members of the Policy and Labor-Management committees.

Contract Expires

Members of Local 265, Brewery Workers Union (CIO), whose contract expired Monday, took a strike vote yesterday. Results of the poll were not divulged.

An informed union source said discussions are continuing and that the union hopes a satisfactory settlement will be reached.

The union, it is understood, has asked $6 a week wage boost, based on the 10 per cent formula, with the Queen City and Cumberland Brewing Companies offering $5. Some 250 workers are involved in the contract talks.

Cafe Rent Dispute Set Today In Court

A jury in Allegany County Circuit Court today is scheduled to hear a $2,500 damage suit which stems from the rental of premises at 26 Baltimore Street for a cafe.

The suit was filed March 2 for Louis LaNeve and Elizabeth LaNeve by their attorney, Earl E. Manges, against Frank Molinari. The plaintiffs said that they had leased the premises to Molinari September 10, 1945. The period of the lease, they said, was from September 23, 1945, until July 22, 1950. The method, Hitchcock explained, consists of determining the acidity of alkalinity of the dustfall, plus chemical tests to check on the presence of harmful substances.

Hitchcock said Cumberland is the only city in the United States to use the PH method, adding that the system has been in use in Great Britain since 1930.

His report will include data on smoke violations, which dropped to .42 per 100 last year from 1950's 7.29.

Even better results will be obtained this year, he will report, due to the virtual dieselization of the Cumberland yards.

Auto License Deadline Set For May 10

Commercial Plates Needed By May 31

The long-extended deadline for use of old automobile license plates will end at midnight Thursday, May 10, Deputy Tax Collector Ernest B. Treat was informed yesterday afternoon.

Originally, the deadline was midnight March 31, but Governor McKeldin extended the time indefinitely because a shortage of metal has prevented delivery of plates.

Yesterday afternoon a telegram from State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Thomas B. R. Mudd informed Treat of the new deadline. This new deadline will be midnight May 10 for all passenger car and motorcycle licenses, according to the telegram.

Mudd's dispatch also stipulated that the deadline for all commercial license plates will be midnight Thursday, May 31. Applications for commercial plates will be mailed out May 10.

Treat expects to have $15 and $17 commercial license plates for sale at his office later this month. These will serve half and three-quarter ton trucks and farm trucks.

The tax collector has been selling passenger car license plates at his Court House office ever since the last week in February. After the deadline was extended the sale fell off to only about 25 to 50 sets each day. He still has about 800 sets of passenger car plates out of 14,000 that have been issued to him.

Blossom Festival Opens Today In Winchester, Va.

Coronation Of Queen Is Program Feature

WINCHESTER, Va., (AP)—A carnival air gripped Winchester last night with the arrival earlier in the day of the blonde Norwegian girl who will rule over the 24th annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

While Miss Curi Lie met last night with festival workers and with radio and newspaper representatives, thousands of persons were busy putting on the finishing touches for the start of official activity today.

The feature of today's opening program of the two-day affair will be the coronation of Miss Lie, daughter of United Nations Secretary General and Mrs. Trygvie Lie, as Queen Shenandoah XXIV.

Marshall To Crown Queen

Crown-placing honors will be performed by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall before thousands of persons assembled to watch the coronation and the ensuing presentation of a pageant, "our Heritage."

Before she is crowned queen, Miss Lie and her court will visit the blooming apple orchards to be photographed. Tonight, she will watch the annual Firemen's Parade, for which the marshal will be Harry Wismer, director of sports for the American Broadcasting Company.

The festival will be climaxed tomorrow afternoon by the grand parade, "The Trail of The Pink Petals," for which the grand marshal will be Esther Williams, auburn-haired Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie actress.

150,000 Expected

A series of dances each night and hundreds of other activities are on tap for the estimated 150,000 persons who will jam this apple-growing center of 12,000 inhabitants today and tomorrow.

Miss Lie arrived here by car in the company of her escort, Albert Allen, a Winchester student at Hackley School, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Miss Mary Warden Boyd, also of Winchester. She had come from Washington.

The blonde queen-elect was rushed to a joint civic clubs' luncheon at which she was welcomed by Mayor M. B. Clowe and which produced most of the serious activity that will accompany the festival.

Festival offfcials were notified yesterday that the curvaceous Miss Williams, Grand Parade Marshal, will leave California by plane this afternoon and will arrive here early tomorrow in time to make the rounds of the second presentation of the pageant and other activities before the parade.

Visitors who came here yesterday to witness pre-festival activities had ideal — but warm — weather. The temperature soared to a high of 87 degrees, and the average temperature was about 12 degrees above normal.

Preliminary Report On Area Economic Survey Submitted

Steering Group Receives Copies Of First Draft

Cumberland's advantageous position with respect to a market of 80 million people was highlighted as one of many findings in an economic survey of this area made by federal and state experts.

The preliminary findings of this survey were presented at the City Hall yesterday afternoon by representatives of a joint U. S. Department of Commerce and U. S. Department of Labor Committee to the Steering Committee for the Economic Development of Allegany County. Members of the Steering Committee who had arranged with John Steelman, assistant to the President, to have the survey undertaken, were asked to review the report and submit their comments before the final report is made public.

Analyzes Resources

It was explained that the purpose of the report was to analyze the economic resources of the area and to call attention to its potentialities for employment and business enterprise. It is anticipated that on the basis of the survey the community itself will be able to develop an integrated action program through which the opportunities of the area can be realized.

The preliminary findings were presented by a group from Washington including Victor Rotemus and David Campbell of the U. S. Department of Commerce and Gladys Fielding of the U. S. Department of Labor to the meeting at which David Kauffman, chairman of the Steering Committee, presided.

State representatives at the meeting included Alvin Pasarew, director of the Maryland State Planning Commission, John Trimmer, Director of Maryland Department of Information, and William Spangler, State Veterans Employment Service Director.

The survey was prepared by a combined team of the Departments of Labor, Commerce, Agriculture and Industry, along with the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Security Agency, the Maryland Department of Employment and Security, West Virginia Department of Employment Security, Maryland State Department of Public Welfare and the American Federation of Labor.

The Steering Committee of which Kauffman is chairman and F. Allan Weatherholt secretary, requested and encouraged the survey along with recommendations from this survey team, for a plan to improve local economic conditions and remedy the economic ills and joblessness of the area.

The Steering Committee is composed of representatives of the Mayor and City Council, Board of Allegany County Commissioners, Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission, Allegany County Industrial Promotion Company, Emergency Relief Committee, Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Western Maryland Full Employment Committee, Industrial Promotion Commission and State Veterans Service Committee of Allegany County.

Two Main Avenues

Campbell, who directed the survey stated that the two main avenues open to the Cumberland area for expanding its employment opportunities were in the fields of industry and recreation.

It was noted by committee members last night that the proposal of Gov. McKeldin to set up a state office to attract industry into Mary-
